British Make Last-Ditch Stand At Hongkong; Nazi Division Totally Destroyed, Reds Say

Tokyo Claims Japanese Flag Now Flies Over Colony's Harbor

BULLETIN

By the United Press

Manila, Saturday, Dec. 20. Japanese troops have landed in force at Davao, on the southern Philippine island of Mindanao, and heavy fighting occurred throughout this morning, the Army announced in a communique shortly before noon.

Thin Line of Heroes

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 19.—Britain believed its last stand garrison of British, Canadian and native troops to be fighting on desperately at separate strong points on Hongkong Island tonight against an overpowering force of Japanese, although radio reports from Axis sources indicated parts of the citadel had fallen.

The radio in Berlin relayed a Domei dispatch from Tokyo claiming that Nippon's flag flew over Hongkong harbor and that Japanese forces were breaking the last British resistance on the island.

Final occupation remained, it was said, a matter of only a short time.

Meanwhile, the advance on Singapore through Malaya had been beaten almost to a halt, and the British had succeeded in extricating the garrison and all military equipment from the outflanked island settlemnt of Penang. (Details on Page 3.)

There had been no word from the defenders of the century-old Hongkong colony since early morning, and officials refused to confirm or deny Japanese reports that it was substantially in Japanese hands.

The British embassy at Chungking, China, which has been receiving regular reports from Hongkong, said communications had ceased today. Contact between Hongkong and the Chinese headquarters in Kwangtung also was broken.

The Axis reports themselves were confusing and contradictory. At about the same time, enemy broadcasts claimed (a) that Hongkong's

Embattled Wake Fights Off 2 More Jap Air Attacks

Battered through 13 days of Japanese attacks by sea and air, a handful of marines still held Wake Island for the United States, a Navy communique said yesterday.

In the last two days, according to the communique, the marines have been pounded by two Japanese attacks from the air. The first, made the night of December 17-18, was "comparatively light." The second "was in greater force and occurred in the forenoon of the 19th." There was little in the pat language of the communique to tell the story of the long hammering by bombs and shells, of the endless hours without rest or sleep, of the dogged spirit which has turned aside attack after attack in more than 300 hours of almost constant battle.

"Wake Island," it said, "continues to counter these blows."

How to Tell Military Rank

With members of the armed forces now wearing their uniforms, it is a problem these days for the civilian to identify officers' ranks.

Hull Denies He Asked Navy To Lift Patrol

Secretary Scotches Rumor as Foulest of 5th Column Stories

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of State Hull yesterday issued an indignant denial of reports that the State Department asked the Navy to suspend patrolling activities west of Hawaii during his pre-war negotiations with Japanese diplomats here.

Hull called the rumor a fifth column story or the twin brother to it, stating that there was not a shred of truth in the report.

It takes a mighty mean person, the Secretary continued, in times as critical as the present to lend support to the Fifth Column by spreading the foulest reports that the most mendacious mind can conceive.

Gossip in Cloakrooms

The rumor which provoked Hull's press conference outburst attributed Japanese successes in their surprise attack on Pearl Harbor to a suspension of Navy patrolling which Hull was said to have requested in order to create a favorable atmosphere for peace negotiations with Saburo Kurusu and Ambassador Nomura. The report, which has Annapolis, Dec. 19.—The class of 1942 of the U. S. Naval Academy, awarded their ensign's stripes in a June-in-December graduation ceremony, left the friendly Severn today and headed for the great oceans and the war.

The graduates, 547 lithe, eager young men who may include a Dewey, a Sampson or a Mahan, listened gravely as Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox told them of what lay ahead—the "supreme test" in the "greatest war the world has ever known."

They heard him damn the Japanese for the most infamous piece of treachery in recorded history—the surprise bombing of Pearl Harbor—and they heard him couple an admonition to be on guard with the statement that "half an hour's warning . . . would have made all the difference in the world."

Tragedy Brought Close

A little later, as Secretary Knox was handing out the coveted diplomas, the tragedy at Pearl Harbor was brought very close to the regiment of midshipmen and to their parents, relatives and friends who crowded Dahlgren Hall.

Up the ramp to get his diploma strode Midshipman Isaac Campbell Kidd, jr. He appeared to be somewhat pale and drawn. Secretary Knox drew close to him in paternal fashion and spoke in an undertone.

The Neediest Families

Must Mother Struggle Alone Against Poverty and Illness?

By Bill Brinkley
Post Staff Writer

Since her husband left, Mrs. J. has been working long hours on low-paying jobs trying to take care of her children. It has been a struggle against almost impossible odds.

Now, Dorothy, 8 years old, has developed rheumatic heart disease and the doctor says it is imperative that she have a special diet to prepare her for an operation.

Mrs. J. is putting up an admirable fight but she needs help. And as with the rest of Washington's neediest families it can only come from contributions from readers. She is not eligible for public relief, because she is "employable." Funds of private relief agencies, on the other hand, are too limited.

If she and the other families are given help now, they will have an excellent chance to become self-supporting again, as they were before bad luck swept in upon them. But the time element is important and contributions to the fund must come quickly if they are to have that chance.

Moscow (Saturday), Dec. 20. Red armies pursuing retreating Germans through the snows of the Moscow front have wiped out Adolf Hitler's 134th Division to the last man and in ten days of fighting preceding this action killed and wounded 22,000 other Nazis, the Russians announced today.

This would represent a total of 37,000 Germans killed, wounded or captured in the latest successes reported by the Russians, since a German division normally has 15,000 men.

A special Moscow broadcast told of the enormous casualties inflicted upon the backtracking Nazis between December 7 and 17. The regular midnight communique reported destruction of the 134th Division in a trap west of Moscow and the recapture of numerous villages and towns there and on the northwest and southwest.

Loss of Equipment Heavy

German losses in equipment equaled their casualties, the special announcement said, listing 319 tanks, more than 3700 trucks and huge quantities of other motorized equipment, and guns destroyed in the 10-day period.

The German division was declared encircled by Soviet forces which drove west and southwest of Moscow, took by storm the town of Ruza, 60 miles due west of the capital, and cut west of the important rail junction of Kaluga, 90 miles southwest, taking several villages. Deck Cleared For Recess In Congress

Senate Halts for 3 Days; House Votes Roosevelt Control Of Wires, Radio

Congress yesterday in a pre-Yuletide burst of speed reminiscent of peacetime swept its dockets nearly clear of wartime measures and unfinished normal business, then arranged for a limited holiday.

With assurance from leaders that no more White House sponsored legislation is expected for a fortnight and three-day recesses are in order for the rest of the year, both Houses bustled through heavy calendars, the Senate then recessed until Monday but the House returns today to finish up.

In the rush of legislation, with minimum debate:

The House voted President Roosevelt authority to take over, operate, shut down or control in the national defense any wire or radio communications facilities in the Nation.

Joint Resolution Adopted

The House voted to stiffen the act requiring registration of foreign agents and adopted an amendment by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, compelling registration by the Communist Party, the German-American Bund and the Kyffhausen Bund, together with listing of the names of all officers, directors and members. The Senate passed a similar bill without the Dies amendment, and the matter went to conference.

The Senate adopted a joint resolution authorizing the five-man commission designated by the President to investigate the defense of Hawaii to subpena witnesses and compel presentation of evidence.

The Senate passed the Reynolds bill authorizing funds for the director of civilian defense to provide facilities for "adequate protection of persons and property from bombing attacks."

Awaits Conference Adjustments

In the rush, both Houses approved and sent to the White House the emergency 512 million dollar deficiency appropriation carrying funds for the 300 million dollar defense housing in advance of final enactment of the latter. Passed in different form by both chambers, the housing bill itself awaits conference adjustments.

The House passed the authorization for the President to take over at need wire and radio facilities after Chairman Lea of the House Interstate commerce committee told of "compelling evidence that there is necessity for special wartime powers to control, use or close wire communication facilities."

The bill, which has not passed

War Draft Passed; Ages Set at 20-44

All Men From 18 Through 64 Must Register; Call Is Expected Soon

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Congress yesterday exempted boys in their teens from compulsory military service, but put immediately on notice all men of 20 through 44 that they are subject to draft call to the colors.

Almost unanimously the compromise draft bill swept through House and Senate and to the White House for signature, after differences between the two chambers were resolved by a conference agreement.

The largest American army in history, of potentially seven million or more, is envisaged by the law and in addition a vast reservoir of 40 million, from 18 through 64, will be required to register in the next draft call.

The House had insisted on delaying inductions until youths reached 21 while the Senate held out for the Administration's urgent recommendations that 19 be the starting age for training and service.

Compromise at Noon

All morning conferees for the two houses battled, the Senate group standing by the President's request for men of all ages and House members refusing to budge from their 21 starting age.

During a noon recess, Administration leaders arranged a settlement and conferees returned at 1:36 to swiftly agree on the 20-year compromise. Without debate, the conference report was snapped through both houses. There was no record count and only one or two "noes" in the House voice vote.

Selective Service officials indicated the vast registration would not begin for several weeks but already instructions have gone out for a recheck of lists already registered, from 21 through 35.

With age limitations settled other minor differences between the two bills were quickly settled. The House agreed to the Senate provision for exemption of elected State officials. The Senate agreed to define "dependents" as in the present draft law, receding from its stand for discretionary rulings by local draft boards.

4-Million Man Army

While potentially the bill would make about seven million men available for service, or even ten million by lowering standards, testimony by Selective Service officials indicated a four million man Army was the present goal, and not that overnight.

Selective Service Director Louis H. Hershey said the important thing now is to give notice to age groups that they are liable to registration and service. He promised orderly registration, possibly by age groups, and said he would not like to assume the responsibility "of promising to have all of these people registered in six months or even a year."

To reach a four million man Army, including 1,800,000 now in service, it was said about 750,000

Many More to Go; Government Will Aid Those Moving

By Jerry Kluttz
Federal Diary Editor

President Roosevelt last night announced the transfer of more than 10,000 Federal workers in 12 Federal agencies from Washington to make room here for expending defense agencies. The announcement was made by Harold D. Smith, director of the Budget Bureau. The agencies involved, the number of employes affected, and their new locations are:

Rural Electrification Administration, 1100 employes and Farm Security Administration, 900 employes, both to St. Louis.

The 1400 Patent Office employes will be moved to New York City.

Fish and Wildlife Service, 375 employes; National Park Service, 175 employes, and Office of Indian Affairs, 300 employes, all to Chicago.

The Alien Registration Division of the Justice Department will be moved to Philadelphia along with two divisions of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. The divisions are those of certifications and research and education. The shift will involve 950 employes.

Two Offices to Pittsburgh

The 475 employes of the Wage and Hour Division will be sent to Pittsburgh. Part of the Office of the Labor Department Solicitor—about 70 employes—will be sent to the same city.

Employes' Compensation Commission with its 500 employes will be shifted to Chicago. The 1600 employes of the Railroad Retirement Board also will be transferred to the same city.

Securities and Exchange Commission will be sent to Philadelphia. It has 1400 employes here.

The Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance of the Social Security Board will go to Philadelphia. It has 1750 employes here. The bureau also has 4600 employes in Baltimore and Smith indicated a move will be made to merge the units in one of the two cities.

USHA Also Moving

Smith also pointed out that U. S. Housing Authority was moving out of Washington its five regional offices here. More than 300 employes are involved.

The transfers, Smith said, would be completed within 30 to 60 days.

The budget chief emphasized that this was just the "first batch" of Federal agencies to be moved out. He said the decentralization study hadn't been completed, and it would ultimately cover the entire Government.

40,000 Coming Here

Smith said he had been informed by the Civil Service Commission that in excess of 40,000 new Federal workers would be brought to Washington to work in war agencies before July 1. "Temporary and emergency construction cannot take care of this increase," the budget chief commented. He estimated that 800,000 square feet of temporary buildings were now planned and under construction. This, he said, would accommodate only 8000 employes.

Smith said that most of the agencies to be transferred will maintain

Softening of the Blow

The Civil Service Commission last night moved swiftly to lighten the decentralization blow to more than 10,000 Federal employes by setting up a new unit that will:

1. Place in other jobs here employes who are unable to move with their transferred agencies.
2. Enable Federal workers who want to be transferred to shift to any agency that is to be moved.
3. Fill vacancies in the agencies to be transferred, from the cities where they are to be located.

The commission performed a similar service for Home Owners Loan Corporation when it was moved to New York City several months ago. Nearly 300 HOLC employes who were unable to transfer were placed in other jobs here by the commission. HOLC took 800 to New York.

RRB Example Cited

Railroad Retirement Board Chairman Murray Latimer told a House committee this week that half of his employes would quit if the board were moved. Hundreds of other employes in the 11 other agencies to be moved besides the RRB are expected to seek transfer to defense agencies here.

Defense agencies will be hiring more than 40,000 employes here within the next six months and employes who want to stay shouldn't have a hard time getting a job.

However, employes who are unable to move must get a release from their respective agencies. Once released, the commission's decentralization unit will arrange interviews with placement officers of expanding agencies. The commission states that these employes will be given preference in filling vacancies "as far as possible."

In the case of employes who resign outright from a defense agency, reinstatement will not be allowed for 90 days after the resignation

Garbling of Phone Call Keeps Help From Dying Girl, 7

Seven-year-old June Bishop, a blonde wavy-haired girl and a sort of little "angel" in her neighborhood, died yesterday, possibly as the result of the mistaking of "F" for "S" Street in a telephone conversation.

It was an ironic and tragic set of circumstances which preceded the death of the daughter of Col. Ralph C. Bishop, of the Army Chief of Staff's office and Mrs. Bishop.

Included were a call to a neighborhood doctor, who said he had a "cold" and therefore couldn't come, and the incident by which "3701 S Street Northwest," the Bishop residence, became "3701 F Street Northeast," somewhere in the conversation between home and hospital.

June, described by neighbors as "the best known and most adored child in this part of town," had acted in a Christmas play at Filimore School only Thursday afternoon. A second grader, she had the part of "Snowflake" in the play, "Golden Eagle's Feather."

The story, as gathered from the home, the police and hospital attaches:

Sometime after returning from school Thursday June became ill, and at 7 p. m. her parents called a doctor. The physician arrived at 8 o'clock and diagnosed the child's ailment as "a slight cold."

JUNE BISHOP

When, however, the little girl's condition grew worse at 11:30 p. m. the parents telephoned a neighborhood doctor. He replied he had a cold and therefore couldn't come, but prescribed a treatment over the telephone.

As the child's condition grew graver the parents began calling for help. Calls were made to the police, who sent a scout car to Emer-

Unions Pledge Strike Ban

Closed-Shop Issue Deadlocks Labor-Industry War Parley

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt's labor-industry conference recessed last night until Monday morning, deadlocked over the closed shop issue in spite of a promise by labor to ban all strikes for the war's duration and to agree to arbitration of all disputes.

Labor's offer, including proposals for a mediation agency and submission, if necessary, of all unresolved disputes to binding arbitration, was proffered at 4:30 p. m. to President Roosevelt by William Green, president of the A. F. of L. Green was reported to have told the Chief Executive that labor would abide by such a program, even it were promulgated by Executive Order, rather than achieved by agreement.

The President, however, was said to have told Green he would not see any of the conferees until a unanimous agreement between industry and labor had been reached.

Green's phone call to the White House followed a warning by labor that if the conference did not agree to labor's offer, the labor delegates would wait on the President in a body, and urge him to issue the proposal on his own instance.

At the end of yesterday's session, it appeared that the industry delegates had not moved from their position of the day before—insistence that the labor objective of the closed shop not be a grievance for mediation or arbitration, but that the status quo of existing closed and open shops be frozen for the duration of the war.

The 12 industry delegates were reported to have worked over their position until 5 o'clock yesterday morning.

Tops Federal Expectation By 3000

Erection of housing units to accommodate more than 13,000 families in Washington's Metropolitan area, was promised Charles F. Palmer, defense housing coordinator, yesterday by representatives of local real estate and home building organizations. The pledge was made in response to a request by Palmer that private industry construct 10,000 of 22,000 housing units needed here before July 1.

Palmer's office had estimated there would be 232,000 Federal employes in the District by thet time.

The report expressed belief that local home builders could erect 13,089 units in the metropolitan area if granted Governmental cooperation. The latter would involve prompt action by the Federal Housing Administration in approving subdivisions and applications for insurance, as well as assurance by the Office of Production Management of priority ratings or allocations, insuring a necessary supply of materials for efficient building operations.

E. R. Carr Submits Report

The report was submitted by Edward R. Carr, chairman, home builders' committee, Washington Real Estate Board.

The committee included Albert W. Walker, a board director, and Waverly Taylor, president, Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington.

A preliminary breakdown showed a proposal to construct 7962 units by real estate board members, 3638 by the Home Builders Association and 1489 by the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax Real Estate Board of neighboring Virginia.

Carr explained figures were incomplete, however, further commitments being expected from members of the local groups. He said N. C. Hines, president of the Virginia board, had reported an additional 1000 units, while the board's office had informal commitments on another 1000. These units are all in the sale class of $6000 or less, or of the $50 or less monthly rental figure, and will involve projects in Washington, Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax Counties, Va., and Prince Georges County, Md.

Text of Letter to Palmer

Text of a letter to Palmer, signed by Charles C. Koones, president of the local real estate board, follows:

"Dear Mr. Palmer:

"In response to your request whereby you asked the Washington Real Estate Board to canvass its members and to ascertain from them the number of dwelling units which could be produced within the next six months, we had a meeting with our members on Monday, December 15, and apprised our membership of your request and asked their cooperation. We had another meeting on Wednesday, December 17, to secure the number of housing accommodations which they would be able to produce.

"We are happy to report that out of some 40-odd firms, we have their offers to construct 7962 dwelling units, all within the price and rental limitation established by the Office of Production Management.

"In practically every instance the land is owned by the developer, plans have been completed, but no construction started. This number, no doubt, can be increased materially, but because of lack of time (two days), we were unable to contact many builders. Also because of lack of time, a number of the builders had not formulated their plans to the point where they could state definitely the number of units they would build. When the Government's program to aid the builder in securing materials and financing is fully developed and known, it should be easy to interest other developers in this building program who are now reluctant to commit themselves because of the uncertainty of the present situation regarding materials and financing.

"This report does not include a large number of builders operating in our area who are not affiliated with any local organization, and who are not acquainted with your program. These builders have been responsible for the erection of a good percentage of dwelling accommodations in the past few years. Nor does it include the out-of-town operators who have been canvassing the possibilities of home construction in the metropolitan area, nor the recently announced program of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. of erecting 1800 units.

"This organization, consisting of 159 active offices having a total membership of 485 persons, pledges our 100 per cent cooperation in securing additional space in private homes. During the last war rooms in private homes housed a tremendous number of war workers. This afforded the single man or woman a clean and comfortable place in which to live, surrounded by a family environment. We trust your office will not overlook the great number and possibilities of this type of accommodation. We might add that this organization together with other organizations in the city, helped to establish and finance the present homes registry, and stands ready to aid further.

"We feel proud of the record we have accomplished within the last two days, and are ready to see this program carried into effect, and we assure you, with your cooperation in removing the many obstacles now confronting us, that it will be. We are also ready to assist you in this intensive housing program and appreciate the privilege of serving you and our country at this time."

becomes effective, unless the request for reinstatement is accompanied by proof of consent from the agency in which the individual was formerly employed. Most of the agencies to be transferred are listed as defense agencies though none of their activities are 100 per cent defense.

CAA Building Approved by Planning Body

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday approved construction of buildings to house employes of the Civil Aeronautics Authority on land of the National Airport, at request of Public Buildings Commissioner W. E. Reynolds.

Approval of a two-story temporary office building for defense workers, to be erected on Canal Street Southeast and to accommodate 4000 persons, also was given by the commission. This structure will be placed opposite the Army War College grounds.

Parking space will be provided for 20 per cent of the temporary building's workers, but of the CAA's structures the commission announced no details, excepting that 200,000 quare feet of space will be available.

Chew Waxes Irate

The commission's ruling limiting the height of buildings in Arlington County, near the Potomac River, to 90 feet—in line with the ruling for the District—drew a heated reply yesterday from Chairman F. Freeland Chew, of the Arlington County Board. He wrote:

"It is apparent that the commission has determined that Arlington County shall be nothing but a series of road approaches and a huge cemetery for the Nation's Capital. The commission also believes that if it can dry up all sources of revenue in Arlington County by preventing such major developments as fine hotels, it can ultimately get Arlington County back into the District of Columbia. This county intends to hold every inch of its ground against the encroachment of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission."

Conferences have been held, it was said by the commission, on a proposal to erect a hotel across the Lee Boulevard from the Nevius tract. If agreement could be reached on the proposed building's height, the project probably would be approved, it was said.

Traffic Plan Approved

Approval was given a plan aimed at clearing up the traffic tangles in the Union Station Plaza. The plan entails an underground taxi terminal, following the line of Delaware Avenue, running underground at D Street and ending under the station's waiting room. The exits either would be opposite the Postoffice on First Street or on Delaware Avenue.

The K Street viaduct project, part of the plan by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, was approved in principle. The viaduct, aimed at relieving traffic congestion, would extend from Rock Creek and Potomac Parkways to Key Bridge. Approval has come from the Fine Arts Commission.

The Commission yesterday named a 43-acre park, described as "a beautiful wooded valley," for the late Melvin C. Hazen, who was president of the District Commissioners. The area is situated between the Bureau of Standards and Rock Creek Park.

A special committee to act on all construction in the District was appointed yesterday, as follows: Frederic A. Delano, chairman; A. F. Demaray, acting executive officer, National Park Service; Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz, and Henry V. Hubbard. The Commission said it was faced with day-to-day problem on building matters now that the Public Building Administration has received $25,000,000 from Congress.

Illinois Jurist Ends Service in D. C.

D. C. Defense Workers Get Aid on Housing

The Senate yesterday opened the way for Federal defense workers in the District to share in the benefits of Government housing projects when it amended a provision of a 512-million-dollar defense appropriations bill.

House concurrence in the amended bill will be sought today. Specifically the amendment would widen terms of the Lanham defense housing bill, which the appropriations measure finances, to bring Federal employes engaged in defense work under its terms.

60,000 More Expected

A report that 60,000 additional workers are expected to arrive in Washington in the near future, adding to already overcrowded conditions, prompted the Senate amendment, it was learned. While the housing problem of District area defense workers brought about the Senate's action, it is not known to what extent the capital area will share in the 300-million-dollar Lanham Act funds.

Charles F. Palmer, Defense Housing Coordinator, has been urging during the past several months that some of the Lanham Act funds be earmarked for the District.

Another amendment affecting the District, passed by the House earlier in the day and concurred in by the Senate, raises from $3,900,000 to seven million dollars the funds for construction of a Federal central heating plant to be located in the Northwest section.

Millions for Hawaii

Included in the appropriations bill was 35 million dollars to stock the Hawaiian Islands with food supplies and 15 million dollars for civilian defense and relief work in Alaska, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

The bill also would make $36,608,000 in Philippine sugar taxes collected up to September 30, plus collections since that date, available along with 10 million dollars already sent to the island government by the President for defense and relief work there.

Portugal Frowns On Anglo-Dutch Activity on Timor

Copyright by New York Times

Berne, Switzerland, Dec. 19.—Premier Salazar told the Portuguese Parliament in Lisbon today that Portugal would not accept "without protest" the Anglo-Dutch occupation of Timor and that his government would demand that the British and Dutch withdraw their troops immediately.

Salazar, in a mysterious move acceding to Axis pressure, ordered his Ambassador Pereira in Madrid to inform Ramon Serrano Suer, the Spanish foreign minister, of the steps his government had decided to take. Portugal, diplomats here agreed, has taken her first step toward entering Germany's "new order."

Messersmith, Braden Confirmed as Envoys

The enate yesterday, by unanimous voice vote, confirmed the appointment of George S. Messersmith to be Ambassador to Mexico. Confirmation came after Chairman Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, of the Foreign Relations Committee, called up the nomination out of order. The State Department wished to dispatch the Ambassador to his new post at once.

Also confirmed was the appointment of Spruille Braden to be Ambassador to Cuba.

Order to Move Surprises U. S. Employes

President Roosevelt's order to move 12 Federal agencies out of Washington apparently came as a surprise last night to those affected.

Most of the heads of agencies to be moved told The Post they knew nothing of such plans and declared that removal would involve almost insurmountable obstacles.

However, the consensus was that "orders are orders" and no sacrifice is too great in this war.

Employes Reassured

Harry Slattery, Rural Electrification Administrator, called a staff meeting on receiving the news and gave employes this message:

"The President's order moving REA to St. Louis is not a pleasant one to receive. Neither are the orders received by soldiers, sailors and Marines at Pacific and Atlantic stations. This is war and the sacrifices asked of the REA staff are puny beside what people in Manila are going through.

"I am sure that I speak for the REA staff when I say we will take our orders cheerfully, without complaint. . . . We accept the President's decision as good public servants."

Alyyn A. Walters, head of REA's current information section, said he was sure the employes would respond "if that is what it takes to win this war."

Willing to Go

"Everybody I've talked to," he said, "is kind of scared at the prospect but not a single one said he wouldn't go."

Walters himself owns a home in Bethesda, Md., has a daughter in junior high school and is expecting an addition to the family.

"And I'll certainly go," he said.

The most violent reaction against moving came from representatives of Washington's approximately 600 patent attorneys, who must go along to New York City with the Patent Office or change their specialty.

Robert F. Davis, member of the firm of Stevens & Davis, one of the largest patent attorney firms here, said removal of the Patent Office to New York would greatly endanger the defense program.

"Cooperation between the Patent Office and the War and Navy Departments," he asserted, "has been constant, intense and of great portent all through the preparation of the great contest in which we are now engaged. To disrupt this cooperation is to invite disaster. . . .

1500 Workers Affected

"The removal is also the uprooting of one of the oldest departments in Washington, the tearing away from their homes of some 1500 Government employes especially trained for this particular type of work. Still further it will necessitate the wholesale evacuation of those employed in the offices of local patent attorneys.

"Many of those people have lived in Washington for a major portion of their lives, bought homes and raised families here only to find it necessary to drop everything and move."

As the news spread, The Washington Post was swamped with telephone calls from anxious Federal employes. Some expressed great pleasure when told which agencies would move. It turned out that these were employed at other agencies.

Following are some of the comments obtained from heads of the agencies which are ordered to move:

Ira N. Gabrielson, director, Fish and Wildlife Service: "It's terribly inconvenient but most of us will go, I think."

Oscar Pogge, acting director, Old Age and Survivors Insurance: "All of us have some obligation in this emergency. We will do our utmost to cooperate."

Murray Latimer, chairman, Railroad Retirement Board: "If the President so orders, the agency will move. It will cause an enormous amount of inconvenience and we doubtless will lose many employes to defense agencies remaining in Washington."

Newton Drury, National Park Service director: "Of course we will go where we're ordered. Everybody will go."

Estimates on how many of the affected employes are home owners ranged from 10 to 35 per cent.

Two Japs Downed Over Oahu Meet Death in Jungle

Honolulu, T. H., Dec. 19.—Two of the Jap airmen who took part in the raid on Oahu, December 7, never will get home, it was revealed today in an official Navy announcement.

Both Japs had bailed out over the Barber's Point area of the western coast of Oahu, when their planes were shot down by American fighters. They landed in the wild country of that area which is covered with scrub trees and underbush.

The two Japs prowled here and there during the night trying to escape but Coast Artillery troops armed with rifles and machine guns after a long search finally found them. One of the Japs was wounded but his mate dragged him away and when he finally died, buried him on the beach with his feet protruding from the sand. The second Jap was later cornered and killed.

small liaison offices here. However, he pointed out, the administrators and chiefs will be moved along with their agencies.

Moving Funds Provided

As the President told his press conference yesterday, it will be a hardship on the employes to be transferred, but the blow will be softened somewhat by these possibilities:

1. The Public Buildings Administration will set up a special unit to assist employes who desire to sell or lease their homes here.

2. PBA will move without charge the personal and household effects of employes transferred.

3. PBA will assist employes in finding homes in their new locations.

4. Each employe transferred will be given a per diem allowance up to 15 days, or a maximum of $75, to offset moving expenses.

5. Transportation will be furnished employes.

More than 1400 employes were ordered out of Washington in the first decentralization move several months ago. Home Owners Loan Corporation sent more than 800 of its employes to New York City; 68 Grazing Service employes were transferred to Salt Lake City; the Forest Service moved 175 employes to Philadelphia, and the Agricultural Department transferred approximately 300 employes to a dozen of its regional offices.

The Federal Government has been hiring new employes here at unprecedented rates. The World War I peak of 128,000 employes in the executive branch was exceeded months ago and it is now estimated that there are more than 200,000 Government workers in the executive branch. This 200,000 figure doesn't cover employes in the military, District government, judicial and legislative branches. The total figure, which isn't available officially, is estimated at roughly 275,000.

The Washington Board of Trade estimates that Federal employment in the District has increased 38 per cent within the past year and 50 per cent since the emergency was declared in September, 1939. Between them, the War and Navy Departments now have more than 55,000 employes in Washington, almost equally divided. This is an increase of nearly 40,000 employes since war broke out in Europe.

The Civil Service Commission announced last night that in the first week of American participation in the war it recruited 17,621 new employes for the War and Navy departments, a new high record for a single week. Most of these employes, of course, were hired in the field.

Since Hitler started his conquests, the Government has taken over and constructed an estimated 50 buildings in and nearby Washington. This has included apartment houses, new buildings, warehouses and stables. The Government now rents more than five million square feet of office space here.

The President's Day

By International News Service

OFF THE BEAM: For the first time since the war began, President Roosevelt's famous beam was blacked out, his face graven and serious, his manner brusque and preoccupied. Coming over earlier than usual from the White House, Mr. Roosevelt started work at an hour when most people are yawning and grumbling their way out of bed.

TO THE POINT: Lined up in the foyer, the correspondents waited for the press conference go signal which shot them down the narrow corridor to the President's office. Mr. Roosevelt started talking without preamble, without a trace of a smile. As somber as his heavy black suit and the lines bracketing his mouth, the President paced off his conference quickly.

GONE: Suddenly gone were the White House executive office signs reading brightly "We ain't mad at nobody." "We" are.

THE PARADE: The parade of Presidential callers began with the quick in-and-out of Congressman Jack Nichols of Eufaula, Okla.

CABBAGES . . . and sealing wax: The President had a wide and wild variety of subjects to cover with callers . . . Norman Davies of the Red Cross, about the presidentially indorsed campaign for 50 million dollars worth of humanity in wartime—Marriner S. Eccles, Federal Reserve board chairman, on prevention of wartime inflation and many other financial problems. LaGuardia and Budgeter Smith, the nation's most harried man in this hour of billion dollar necessities, for a pro and con on millions for civilian defense.

THIRD: At noon the President proudly sent up to Congress a nomination—Lieut. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, hard-fighting astute commander of the Philippine fight, was recommended for a full generalship.

CABINET PLUS: Before the afternoon Cabinet meeting began, two pictures were taken for history, one of the President and his regular Cabinet; another of the President, his Cabinet and Administrators LaGuardia, McNutt and Gen. Phillip Fleming. Almost two hours later the Cabinet conference began breaking up.

CENSORSHIP: Arriving at 3:30 p. m., brand-new Director of Censorship Byron Price got a welcome from many of the news men who have worked with and for him over a long period of years. In the President's office Mr. Roosevelt, Cabinet members Postmaster General Walker and Attorney General Biddle and Administrator LaGuardia stretched out congratulatory hands.

LIGHT LID: As the President went over to the White House for a pre-dinner swim and an evening of work, a very light, perhaps movable lid went on the White House. Officially closed but ready to open at any time, the White House settled down for the night, the staff on duty and ready at their posts.

Supreme Court Shatters Custom

The latest photograph of the United States Supreme Court members was made by photographers from several of the representative photographic establishments in photographic establishments in Washington, a departure from the custom of one establishment taking the photograph, it was said yesterday. While no one establishment has had the exclusive rights of photographing the Court members on special occasions, representatives of several establishments were called in for the most recent photograph, it was said.

Jap Patrols Increase Activity at 3 Philippine Beachheads; Cavite Raided

Natives Form 'Parashoot' Battalions

By Frank Hewlett
United Press Staff Writer

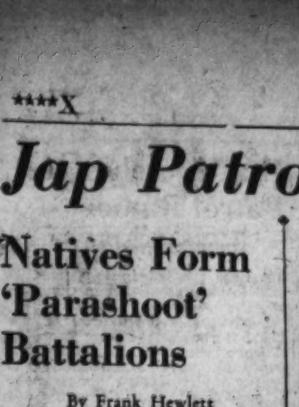
Manila (Saturday), Dec. 20.—Japanese patrols are becoming more active around the three beachheads at Aparri and Vigan, on the Luzon coast north of Manila, and Legaspi, southeast of Manila, an Army communique said today.

It gave no indication of how far the Japanese had penetrated from the bases they occupied last week or of how strong their patrols were. Nor did it say what resistance American and Filipino forces were offering.

The communique, the first in several days to mention any land activity, said also that Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur, commander in chief of the United States Army in the Philippines, had awarded Distinguished Service Crosses to 13 officers and men, three of them posthumously.

Parashoot Units Organized

Last night again was quiet, but swarms of black Japanese airplanes blasted Philippine defense bases in daylight yesterday as natives began organizing "parashoot" battalions to meet any attempted air-borne invasion.



PRESSURE by United States forces (arrow) thrust back Japanese invaders toward Vigan, reports from the Philippines said yesterday as fighting continued south of that town. Japanese planes bombed Nichols Field (A) and the port of Iloilo on the island of Panay (B) in their first attack in that area, United States Army headquarters reported Reports of fierce fighting around the three Japanese beachheads on Luzon Island, on which Manila lies, were brought here by persons who had fled from Manila at the outbreak of the war and now were returning because they considered it safer here. They told of natives armed with bolo knives and sharpened, big-sticking bamboo poles, fighting off Japanese invaders in the Vigan area of Ilocos Sur Province, 250 miles northwest of Manila, enabling women and children to evacuate.

The daily bulletin reported that legions of "parashooters" had been organized in 23 localities in Batangas Province, at the southern end of Luzon.

Cavite Attacked

A communique said that 24 planes attacked the main United States naval base at Cavite, 8 miles across Manila Bay from here, about noon. The planes flew in from the north, well beyond the range of the base's antiaircraft guns, darted down, unloaded their bombs, then streaked away toward Corregidor, 25 miles from Manila at the entrance to Manila Bay. It was not learned whether Corregidor was bombed, but antiaircraft smoke rings could be seen in abundance in that direction.

Manila had two alarms, one lasting from 12:32 to 1:01 p. m. and another from 1:41 to 2:17.

Evacuees were returning to Manila by the hundreds and most of them found their homes intact. The Pasay and Paranaque districts south of the city are the only suburban areas damaged by bombs.

Jap Fifth Columnists Do It With Mirrors

Manila (Saturday), Dec. 20 (AP).—Like the sideshow magician, the Japanese fifth columnists are trying to do it with mirrors.

Army men returning from central Luzon said a sentry at a command headquarters spied a bright object in a tree.

Investigation disclosed that the carefully camouflaged post was encircled with tree-top mirrors which made it a bull's-eye for bombers.

Swedish Freighter Hit at Hongkong

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—The new 6079-ton Swedish motorship freighter Ningpo was hit by bombs from Japanese planes and is aflame in Hongkong harbor, the American Swedish News Exchange said today. The steamer has been trading between Manila, New York and Baltimore.

Swastika Shown Over World

Ein neues deutsches Staatswappen?

Am Neubau des »Hauses des Reichsaussenministers«, das an der Berliner Hermann-Göring-Strasse errichtet wird, befindet sich dieses Wappen. Man sagt, es sei als neues Staatswappen des Grossdeutschen Reiches nach der Proklamierung des Neuen Europa vorgesehen: der deutsche Adler mit dem Hakenkreuz schwebt dann über der von ihm neu geordneten Erdkugel . . .

"IS THIS A NEW GERMAN COAT OF ARMS?"—This is a photostatic copy from a Bern, Switzerland, publication, Nation, which shows a coat of arms on the new official residence of the German Foreign Minister in Berlin. The German eagle surmounts the swastika which covers the world. In its caption, the Nation asks the question: Is this "a new coat of arms of the German state?" and adds, "It is envisaged as the new coat of arms of the Greater German Reich after the proclamation of the new Europe"

The Gallup Poll

Public Opinion Research Is New Instrument To Bolster Wartime Morale in Democracies

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 19.—A new instrument of democratic Government which did not exist during the last world war is in the hands of the United States and other leading democracies in this war.

It is not a combat weapon, but one designed to aid in increasing the efficiency of the democracies in dealing with vital wartime domestic problems—to speed up the democratic process in order to compete with the swiftness of action possible in dictator countries.

The new instrument is public opinion research, which is being carried on continuously not only in the United States, but in three Allied countries—Britain, Canada and Australia. As a result, the wartime governments in the four democracies are more closely in touch with public opinion than has been the case in any previous war in history.

Wartime Operations

Gearing itself to wartime operation, the American Institute of Public Opinion is completing ing plans for continuous study of public attitudes, and the gathering of factual data of importance to the American war effort.

1. Forthcoming polls will deal, for example, with the problem of civilian morale. Knowledge of public opinion can indicate how unified the country is, what steps can be taken to improve morale, and where the danger spots lie.

2. Surveys will be able to determine the public willingness to make sacrifices for defense and the knowledge and acceptance of war aims. They can likewise show the willingness of the public to accept various control measures, both economic and otherwise, as for example price and wage control.

3. Vitally important will be studies of the extent to which the public has been schooled in the knowledge of air raid precautions, fire fighting and other measures for saving life.

4. As war costs mount, Institute surveys will show what forms of taxation will be most acceptable to the taxpayers and meet with the least resistance.

5. Surveys will likewise indicate the public's interest in peace arrangements, what kind of peace they would support, and what sort of program they would favor as a means of avoiding another world conflict in the next generation.

Many examples could be cited to indicate how knowledge of public opinion has speeded up the democratic process. One notable example is that of conscription.

The Selective Service Act was put into effect with a minimum of delay because of the knowledge that public opinion, as measured by surveys, supported the measure even before political leaders had advocated it.

Used By Government

The whole idea of sampling surveys has gained such acceptance today that the United States Census Bureau is planning in future years to gather much of its material by the sampling process. Other administrative departments, particularly the Department of Agriculture, have used sampling as an administrative tool.

The War Department is turning to sampling polls in dealing with soldier morale. Last week it completed a poll among soldiers of the Ninth Division, asking 118 questions in an effort to find out what the enlisted man would do to make himself a better soldier.

Poll By Nazis

Even dictator countries have acknowledged the importance of public opinion.

According to the London "Sketch" the Nazi recently tried what they described as a kind of "Gallup Poll" among Germans.

German citizens were asked to fill out questionnaires expressing their opinion anonymously on the present German food ration system. According to the "Sketch" report, 70 per cent expressed dissatisfaction.

Use In Britain

In England, the British Institute of Public Opinion, affiliate of the American Institute, has made extensive studies of public reaction to black-out regulations, price control, savings certificates, food rations, evacuation problems, conscription of manpower and womanpower and many other subjects vital to national morale.

Taking their cue from the United States and Britain, a group of seven newspapers in Australia two months ago organized a continuous public opinion poll in Australia, patterned after the American Institute.

In Canada last month, 27 Dominion papers united to form the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion which is studying public sentiment on Canada's important war problems.

Thus the new instrument of public opinion research is being put to simultaneous use in four countries at war. Public opinion news coverage is no longer limited by national horizons; it is rapidly becoming international in scope.

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR!

Penang Lost, British Hold Japs in Malaya

By the Associated Press

Singapore, Dec. 19.—The British have beaten the Japanese offensive in northwestern Malaya down almost to a halt and the imperial garrison of the outflanked island settlement of Penang off the west coast has been safely withdrawn to aid in the continued defense of the distant approaches to Singapore.

This was the situation tonight as described in official British announcements and it thus appeared that the fall of Penang—inevitable under the circumstances—had been far from a total loss.

Its military strength remained intact, perhaps to aid in strengthening the new British line along the Krian River some 300 miles north of Singapore. Only two Europeans were left on the island—British physicians who stayed behind to practice their profession.

Not only was British military personnel brought out, it was stated, but all of Penang's military equipment likewise was salvaged.

This morning the invaders began new thrusts against strong and apparently unyielding British opposition as the probable preliminaries to an effort to take the town of Ipoh, the Malayan tin center, which is astride the main railway running down to Singapore and is flanked by mountains.

Strong Dutch action against Japanese forces seeking to infiltrate into British North Borneo was reported.

The East Indies command announced during the day that Dutch bombers had assaulted the invader in Sarawak, continuing bombing attacks which previously had been successfully concentrated off shore against Japanese seapower. This earlier action had set a Japanese cruiser aflame.

Dutch Army and Naval forces raided a Japanese settlement in North Borneo, interning a large number of Japanese.

Dutch West Borneo was under air attack, a communique announcing that scores of persons, including many school children, had been killed and many more injured in a Japanese raid on the town of Pontianak.

British air activity likewise was heavy, particularly in reconnaissance over the Timor Sea, between the Island of Timor and Australia.

The Portuguese half of the island itself was under strong Allied control, Dutch and Australian forces having moved in yesterday, and Dutch dispatches reported that all Japanese subjects had been interned.

Canada Favors Manpower Shift, Gallup Poll Shows

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 19.—An overwhelming public vote in Canada in favor of giving the government power to allocate manpower to industry, farming and armed services is found in the latest poll by the recently organized Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, the Gallup Poll of Canada.

The poll was conducted throughout the Dominion on this question:

"Do you think the Government should have the power to decide which men are to be used in industry, which men are to be used in farming, and which in the armed forces?"

Canadian government should have power to allocate manpower	72%
Think government should not have the power	20
Undecided	8

In the Canadian Institute's cross-section of Quebec province, approximately 2 voters in every 3 with definite opinions on the question said they favored the plan of manpower allocation.

Axis Claims Japs Get Foothold

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

HONGKONG ISLAND—Axis sources said Japs based on Kowloon peninsula had crossed Victoria Harbor to occupy the city of Victoria (blacked in) on Hongkong Island and that British defenders had withdrawn into fortifications on Victoria Peak capital city of Victoria was occupied by the invaders, the defenders withdrawing to Victoria Hill; (b) that the fighting on Hongkong Island still "overshadows that in other sectors." The former broadcast was German; the latter Japanese.

The garrison fought without hope of reinforcement or retreat. Its force had been split and dispersed in several areas to cover separate landings of Japanese assault troops, and the battle, apparently, was going on over a considerable terrain.

"Heavy fighting is going on and the position is serious," one British announcement said.

Later, a spokesman added:

"There isn't a chance for reinforcement of Hongkong, at least for a long time. The garrison has orders to hold on at all costs. Our troops will stay there and take it—and do some dishing out."

The heart of the 390-square-mile colony, the capital city of Victoria, is on the island to which the battle now has moved. A million people live here, and there has been no general civilian evacuation. One American woman, a Mrs. Florence Webb, of Shanghai, is known to have been killed by shell fragments.

The colonial office vigorously denied a Japanese report that Sir Mark Young, the Hongkong governor, had left the colony.

The American consul reported that the consulate was intact, but that his residence on Victoria Peak had been damaged badly by Japanese shellfire.

Roosevelt Questioned On Interallied Command

Copyright by New York Times

President Roosevelt said in his press conference yesterday that discussions in Washington have been going on for a long time with regard to the possibility of establishing an interallied command.

The Chief Executive made this assertion when a reporter asked whether he could tell his press conference anything about plans for such a superior general staff. Mr. Roosevelt answered that he could not.

2 U. S. Airmen Win D. S. C. for Hawaii Feats

Two young Army Air Corps pilots who, between them, downed six Japanese aircraft during the attack on Hawaii December 7 were awarded the Distinguished Service Cross yesterday for "extraordinary heroism" in their first air battle.

The decorations, said the War Department, were "the first of a number to be given for heroism in Hawaii and the Philippines during the present conflict." Others will be awarded in the near future.

The officers, both in their early 20's, were Second Lieut. George S. Welch, of Wilmington, Del., and Second Lieut. Kenneth M. Taylor, of Hominy, Okla.

Dash for Planes

Lieuts. Welch and Taylor were at Wheeler Field on Oahu when Japanese dive-bombers suddenly howled down on the field, blazing death and destruction.

Though neither had any information about the number or types of Japanese planes overhead, both climbed into their little fighters without waiting for orders and took off. They headed for Barbers Point, looked about for trouble and found plenty.

About 1000 feet below them and 10 miles away flashed the wings of 12 Japanese planes in formation. Welch and Taylor dived straight into them, 2 planes against 12. The two were armed only with .30 caliber machine guns.

Welch, caught a Japanese dive bomber in his sights, pressed the trigger and saw the enemy plane stagger and sweep widely away.

Welch saw another Jap plane escaping out to sea, went in behind it and shot it into the ocean. He saw no more planes and went back to Wheeler Field for more ammunition and gas. After he had been reloaded and refueled, but before a jammed gun was repaired, 15 Japanese planes stormed down on Wheeler Field again.

Three of them pulled out and turned their guns on Welch's plane, still on the ground. Through the hail of their fire, he taxied away, lined down the field and took off, turning at once to go to the aid of another American being attacked from behind. Welch settled this affair and sent the Jap down in flames, but collected slugs in his engine, cowling and propeller in the process.

Bags Another Jap

Looking for more trouble, Welch found it in another enemy airplane streaking out to sea, chased it 5 miles from shore and brought it down. He then returned to Wheeler Field with four planes to his credit.

When Lieut. Taylor dived into the 12 Japs near Barbers Point with Welch, he struck them like a man o' war hawk. In the first few minutes of his whirlwind attack, he shot down two Japs and the others fled.

Lieut. Welch's and Lieut. Taylor's "initiative, presence of mind, coolness under fire against overwhelming odds in their first battle, expert maneuvering of their planes and determined action contributed to a large extent toward driving off this sudden, unexpected enemy air attack," said the Army's citation.

Texts of communiques issued yesterday follow:

War Dept. Communique No. 19

"1. Hawaii: The War Department today announced awards of the Distinguished Service Cross to Second Lieuts. George S. Welch and Kenneth M. Taylor, Air Corps, United States Army, for extraordinary heroism in action during the Japanese attack on the island of Oahu, on December 7, 1941.

"These awards are the first of a number to be given for heroism in Hawaii and the Philippines during the present conflict. The others will be made in the near future.

"It is the policy of the War Department to award decorations for gallantry in action as promptly as possible.

"2. Philippine theater:

"Enemy patrols increase their ground operations."

War Department Communique, No. 18

"1. Philippine theater:

"There was a marked increase in enemy air and ground activities during the past 24 hours. There was heavy bombing over Manila and over the city of Iloilo on the Island of Panay, south of Luzon.

"2. There is nothing to report from other areas."

Navy Communique No. 12

"Atlantic theater: There are no new developments to report.

"Eastern Pacific: There are no new developments to report.

"Central Pacific: There have been two additional air attacks by the enemy on Wake Island. The first occurred on the night of the 17th-18th and was comparatively light. The second was in greater force and occurred in the forenoon of the 19th. Wake Island continues to counter these blows.

"Far East: There are no new developments to report."

547 Middies Ready to Join Fleet for War

The boy's father, Rear Admiral Isaac Kidd, class of 1906, was killed by a Japanese bomb aboard his battleship at Pearl Harbor on December 7.

"Your father did not lose his life at Pearl Harbor, he gave it for his country," the Secretary said.

As Midshipman Kidd, who hopes to be assigned to a submarine in the Pacific, walked back to his seat, applause swept Dahlgren Hall.

Unable to Hold Applause

Rear Admiral Russell Willson, U. S. N., the academy superintendent, had given instructions at the outset of the exercises that there was to be no applause for the individual midshipmen; that it was to be saved up and let loose when the last graduate had marched up and down the ramp.

For all their discipline, however, the "future admirals" could not restrain themselves at the sight of Midshipman Kidd. And for that matter, neither could the notables on the stage — Representatives Scrugham and Sasscer, Gov. Herbert O'Conor of Maryland, Maj. Gen. H. Conger Pratt, the rear admirals, and the four-stripers.

There also was a burst of applause when Roberto Lim came along for his diploma. Roberto is a Filipino, son of Brig. Gen. Vicente Lim, commander of a division in the Philippine army now fighting the Japanese in the battle of Luzon.

Roberto got his diploma yesterday, but no ensign's commission. He plans to hurry back to the islands and join the Philippine army, in which perhaps he will be given command of a motor torpedo boat in the offshore patrol.

"My biggest trouble," he said, "will be getting there."

There was some applause, too, for Midshipman William M. Chewning, all-American tackle on the football team, and for that broth of a boy, Cornelius B. O'Sullivan, who may cause the Japs plenty of grief one of these days. Cornelius was awarded a cup by the General Society, Sons of the Revolution, for proficiency in ordnance and gunnery.

The midshipmen who were graduated today ordinarily would be graduated in June. Six months was lopped off of their four-year course by the emergency, and those who are behind them will finish up in three years.

Today's ceremony, held in an atmosphere redolent with the traditions of John Paul Jones, Dewey, Sampson, Farragut and other American naval heroes, began with an invocation by the chaplain, Capt. William N. Thomas.

Third Attack Failed

Secretary Knox reminded the graduates that he had come fresh from the scene of the first great engagement in the war—Hawaii. He told how the Japanese attack came while the envoys of Japan were in Washington "on a pretended peaceful mission," while the premier of Japan was engaged in telling the American Ambassador in Tokyo that Japanese purposes were peaceful.

"But we ought to have been on our guard against treachery," Knox said. . . . "There is no question at all, in the light of what transpired, that half an hour's warning of the approach of the Japanese planes wold have made all the difference in the world.

"I say this with considerable confidence because that assault was divided into three attacks. The third assault came two hours after the first one. With all of the resources that were left to the same Army and Navy, we were ready, and that attack never got home. It encountered, as it approached Pearl Harbor, such a barrage from every gun and every ship that the enemy planes had to sheer off, and not a single torpedo found its mark or did the slightest damage to our ships or to our equipment ashore."

The assault, Knox said, would bring ultimate good—a united country determined to prosecute the war to a successful conclusion. Praising the heroism of the men at Pearl Harbor, he placed the name alongside Valley Forge, Belleau Wood, Bunker Hill, Mobile Bay, Gettysburg and Chateau Thierry.

After the midshipmen had been given their diplomas, designating them as holders of the degree of bachelor of science, they marched over to Bancroft Hall. There all except 25 were sworn in as ensigns. Twenty-four had elected to join the Marine Corps, and were sworn in as second lieutenants. The other was Roberto Lim.

But before that, in Dahlgren Hall, the midshipmen sang "Navy Blue and Gold" and stood at attention while the band played the "Star Spangled Banner." Then the undergraduates gave a "Hip, hip, hooray" for those "about to leave us," and the Class of '42 gave a cheer for those "we leave behind."

After that the war-bound graduates flung their white midshipmen's caps in the air, and watched as the audience scrambled for them.

Those "we leave behind"—the classes of 1943-44-45—had a tacit promise from Secretary Knox that they would get into the fracas. He told them that it would be a "long and costly" war.

Americans in Malaya Reported Safe

All American residents of Malaya are safe, the State Department was informed yesterday in a report from its consul general in Singapore.

U. S. Gets New African Consulate

The State Department, in another move emphasizing the strategic importance of the "bulge" of the African continent, is establishing a new consulate at the port of Accra, in the British Gold Coast colony.

Several new American consulates have been opened in recent weeks at points along the African coastline below Dakar, the French West African port which has been frequently mentioned as the best possible jumping-off point for any Axis atempt at an atatck on the Western Hemisphere.

Mother Needs Help in Lone Struggle

Family No. 70

Mrs. J, who is introduced above, is trying to keep her family intact in the absence of her husband. He has left and contributes only sporadic assistance. But since he makes only $13.50 a week this assistance isn't much even when it comes.

Mrs. J. has only irregular employment and that at a small salary. She and the children live with her mother, who is a great help. But many of the family's basic needs are left unfilled.

The special diet that is needed for Dorothy because the child must be in good physical condition for a much needed tonsilectomy is impossible to procure under such circumstances.

The J. family has had bad luck before. James, now 6 years old, had infantile paralysis when he was 1 year old, but in spite of his deformity can get around as well as the other children. And the present trouble is the most devastating that has come the family's way.

The family needs $75 to meet its needs until Mrs. J. is able to secure better work. Family certified by Catholic Charities.

Family No. 71

A month ago Mr. P. had a paralytic stroke. At the same time the doctor discovered that Mr. P.'s son George had extremely low blood pressure and should have treatments. Then the health of Edna, George's younger sister, began to suffer.

Despite firm advice against it, George has continued working at high speed 12 hours a day on his job. Edna continues to work regularly as a waitress.

But both their jobs are meager in pay and their combined salaries are not enough to pay basic expenses of the family.

As for the treatments which George needs and the special medicine Edna needs, there is simply no money to pay for them.

And Mr. P. may never be able to work again, the doctors said.

If this family is to stay together, it must have money to provide needed medicines and medical treatment. The amount of $75 would do this. The family certified by Family Service Association.

Each of the neediest families has been recommended by one of five agencies: American Legion Welfare Department, Salvation Army, Bureau of Rehabilitation, Catholic Charities and Family Service Association.

These agencies—members of the Community Chest—will expend the fund without charge.

Fliers Press Hunt For Dargue Party

San Francisco, Dec. 19 (AP).—Fliers from Hamilton Field and every other Army air base in the State scouted the valleys and mountains of interior California today for some trace of an Army transport plane, missing for a week with Maj. Gen. Herbert A. Dargue and seven companions aboard.

The search, pursued in the face of generally unfavorable weather, centered northward from Palmdale in Los Angeles County through the 7500-foot Tehachapi range and into the San Joaquin Valley.

This was the course Gen. Drague's ship was following, en route from Mitchel Field, N. Y., to Hamilton Field, near San Francisco, when it last reported its position.

the Senate, empowers the President to suspend regulations of the Federal Communications Commission. Extended to wire communications is the power the President now has in wartime over radio and radio facilities. The wire powers could be terminated by concurrent Congressional resolution or would end six months after the war.

The bill strengthening the law requiring registration of foreign agents passed both Houses in different forms, with only the House measure amended to compel registrations of Communists and Bundists.

Under both measures, foreign agents subject to registration must label all political propaganda they distribute, so recipients will know it is sent by a foreign agent and know his name and address.

chairman of the National Defense Mediation Board, disclosed that he too had called the President to report that the conference had failed to meet the Chief Executive's final deadline of "unanimous agreement" by Friday night "at the latest."

Asked whether the President "patted you on the back," Davis answered:

"Well, he didn't kick me downstairs; he's not that kind of a boss. He told me to go ahead with the conference."

Announcing the recess until Monday, Davis explained that "this does not mean the conference has broken up."

"My own opinion is," he added, "that in this case the longest way around is the shortest way home. There is also another old saw—make haste slowly."

Asked whether the union shop was still the major obstacle to agreement, Davis said:

"That difficulty has not been removed."

From other sources, however, it was learned that "that difficulty" is actually the sole difficulty, with labor and management willing to agree on a nine or eleven man mediation board, four of the members to be from industry and four from labor, with one or three others representing the public.

The labor delegates, it was reported, insisted that their offer fulfilled the President's request, including the waiving of labor's legal right to strike, and the promise to arbitrate. They declared, however, that the industry delegates were asking them to waive another right recognized by law—the right to achieve the closed shop through organization—without making any equivalent contribution.

The C. I. O. will hold a meeting of its executive council this morning, Philip Murray, president of the organization and one of the conferees, disclosed last night. He told reporters they could construe the action in any way they wished.

Knudsen, Hillman Set to Speed Up War Production

By the Associated Press

A sweeping reorganization of OPM's internal setup was ordered yesterday preliminary to a sharp speedup in the Government's drive to convert industry to full war-time production and trim output of civilian goods to bare necessities.

The shake-up brought all industrial branches handling civilian supplies and industries directly under the supervision of Director General William S. Knudsen and Associate Director Sidney Hillman.

Formerly, these branches were governed by Leon Henderson as civilian supply administrator, and Douglas C. MacKeachie, as director of purchases.

Berlin Demands Explanation of Martinique Deal

Stockholm (Saturday), Dec. 20 (U.P.).—German newspapers reported today that Germany has demanded that the French government explain the agreement which the French West Indies island of Martinique has reached with the United States. It was said that Berlin expects strong action by the Vichy government.

It was not known, however, whether the note constituted an autimatum, demanding that France repudiate any commitments entered into by its officials in the West Indies.

[In Washington Secretary of State Hull said he was awaiting official report on the agreement.]

not been printed in the press, is said to have circulated in Congressional cloakrooms.

Meanwhile repercussions of the Pearl Harbor attack were heard in Chicago, where Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, asserted that President Roosevelt's appointment of an official board of inquiry did not dispose of the need for Congressional investigation of the December 7 attack on Hawaii.

"Perhaps the fault at Hawaii was not entirely on the admirals and generals," Taft said in a speech prepared for delivery before the Executives Club of Chicago.

He suggested that a Congressional committee might determine whether Secretary Hull had advised the Navy Department of the contents of his note of November 27 to the Japanese government, which proposed withdrawal of Japanese troops from China and Indo-China as one of the essentials for a Japanese-American settlement.

Taft characterized the American note as "an ultimatum" which, it must have been known at the time, the Japanese "in all probability would not accept." He added that Congress should find out if Hull advised Knox of that and if Knox, in turn, informed the high command at Hawaii.

MacArthur Promoted to Full General

4 Brigadiers, 12 Colonels Are Advanced

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Lieut. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, directing the stalwart defense of the Philippines, was made a full general yesterday by President Roosevelt, the first officer in this war promoted on the field of battle.

His promotion, confirmed unanimously by the Senate within a few hours, topped a list of 17 new general officers who have "demonstrated their leadership in the field."

It is the second time MacArthur has held the highest military rank within the gift of this Republic. For five years he was chief of staff, a position he held one year beyond the routine four, at the instance of Mr. Roosevelt, in order that he might complete plans for reorganizing the Army for greater efficiency.

In addition to his rank as a four-star general commanding the United States Army forces in the Far East, MacArthur is a field marshal in the Philippine Army, which he commands.

Coincident with MacArthur's promotion, the President raised four brigadier generals to the rank of major general and 12 colonels to brigadier general. Navy Capt. John F. Shafroth, jr., was nominated to be a rear admiral.

Brigadiers Promoted

Brigadier generals promoted to major general were George F. Moore, of Washington; Edward P. King, jr., of Atlanta; George M. Parker, jr., of San Francisco, and Richard K. Sutherland, of Elkins, W. Va.

Colonels raised to brigadier general were Albert M. Jones, Bradford G. Chynoweth and Charles C. Drake, of Washington; Allan C. McBride, of Frederick, Md.; William F. Sharp, Monkton, Md.; Richard J. Marshall, of Portsmouth, Va.; Clifford Bluemel, Trenton, N. J.; James R. N. Weaver, Fremont, Ohio; William E. Brougher, Jackson, Miss.; Joseph P. Vachon, Westbrook, Me.; Clyde A. Selleck, Rutland, Vt., and Spencer B. Akin, Greenville, Miss.

"These officers," said a War Department statement accompanying announcement of the promotions, "have demonstrated their leadership in the field and are at present exercising combat command appropriate to the rank to which they are being advanced."

MacArthur's elevation followed closely the action of the United States Thursday in inducting the Filipino army into the Army of the United States. Since December 7, when the Japanese launched a simultaneous attack on Hawaii and the Philippines, his force of Filipinos and United States Regulars has beaten off repeated attacks on the island of Luzon. There the Japanese have gained three toeholds, which MacArthur's command has not permitted them to enlarge.

The new general's rank is the same held by Gen. John J. Pershing, who went to France in 1917 as a major general, but was raised to full general while in command of the A. E. F. On his return, Pershing was made "general of the Armies of the United States," an honorary rank he still holds.

The son of Maj. Gen. Arthur MacArthur, as a soldier knew the Philippines at the beginning of this century, Gen. MacArthur was graduated from West Point in 1903, highest man in his class. He served in France as chief of staff of the Forty-second (Rainbow) Division and, upon his return from the first World War, was superintendent of West Point.

After he retired in 1935 as chief of staff, he went to the Philippines at the request of President Manuel Quezon to organize an army for the fledgling commonwealth. Several months ago, when the situation in the Far East became acute, he was recalled to active service as a lieutenant general and placed in command of United States forces in that area.

President Quezon is promoting to appropriate rank officers of the Philippine Army who "have shown marked command ability during the bitter fighting which has already taken place on Luzon."

Pilot-Heroes Of Philippines

RANDALL D. KEATOR, 24, of Campti, La., is credited with being the first American pilot to shoot down a Japanese plane over the Philippines

SAMUEL HINES MARETT gave his life when he dived his plane squarely into the side of a Japanese troopship trying to land invaders on Luzon. He was a native of Melvern, Ark., lived at both Little Rock and Atlanta

Gen. Emmons Takes Over At Honolulu

By Tom Yarbrough
Associated Press Staff Writer

Honolulu, Dec. 19.—Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons took over command of the Hawaiian Department of the Army today, within 24 hours of his arrival, and found that the blackout was Honolulu's most immediate war intrusion—now that the shock of the first raid and the change in top commanders had largely been absorbed.

General Emmons took command with the issuance of two simple proclamations. One, by Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, relinquished command of the department. The other, by Emmons, placed the department under Emmons.

[Clamping down rigid restrictions on all resident aliens of enemy and Axis-dominated nationalities, the International News Service said, Gen. Emmons established severe penalties for violations of the new rules and warned all aliens to refrain from crime or hostility or giving out any information of aid or comfort to the enemy.

[He demanded immediate surrender by aliens of all firearms, weapons, ammunition, bombs, explosives, shortwave transmitting and receiving sets, signal devices, code and cipher material, cameras, photographs, sketches or maps of military or naval installations; binoculars, field glasses, telescopes and all other devices for long-distance observation.—Editor's note.]

This city would seem a great deal like any peacetime city of a quarter of a million population were it not for the blackout.

Anyone can buy plenty of food, including sugar, butter, meat, eggs and many other things that ordinarily shrink on a wartime market. No longer is there a rush to food stores.

Cigarette dealers who limited customers to one package at a time last week, now self a carton without batting an eye.

But it's impossible to buy, beg or borrow flashlights and flashlight batteries. This makes the blackout harder to take because restrictions have been relaxed a bit and a careful citizen lucky enough to have a flashlight is not so likely to have it shot from his hand.

More and more thousands are esaling up at least one room in their home or apartment for reading and card games, or just plain gabbing. The rumor content of this gabbing—strikingly high the first few days—has been reduced sharply by the disclosures of naval losses made by Secretary of the Navy Knox.

Nazis 'Interned' at Resort

Special Dispatch to The Post

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Dec. 19.—This fashionable resort in the Appalachian Mountains became a place of internment today for staffs of the German Embassy, the Hungarian Legation and their families.

Arriving from Washington by special train were 145 Germans, including a dozen newspapermen and 14 Hungarians.

They will be held here pending completion of arrangements for their return to Europe.

However, it will not be much like jail. They will be given full range of the spacious Greenbrier Hotel, its grounds, golf course and other recreational facilities.

In the group are a youthful German baron and baroness, who said they were enabled to spend their honeymoon here through the cooperation of two "very nice FBI agents."

Baron Ulrich E. von Geinanth, second secretary of the German Embassy and member of the German Elite Guard, were married yesterday at Alexandria, Va.

The baron said he found Washington marriage laws requiring a three-day wait too stringent and persuaded two FBI men to cross the Virginia line with them and witness the ceremony. One of the agents signed the marriage register as a witness.

"Please say," the baron requested, "that the two FBI agents were very nice men."

The baroness had taught at a New York girls' school for the past five years.

In charge of the German and Hungarian party, which arrived in a special train of eight Pullmans, two diners and two baggage cars, is H. C. Sprooks, of the State Department.

Other Germans, some from embassies and consulates in South America, are expected to join the party soon.

Six chartered buses took the diplomats and newspapermen from the German Embassy to Union Station in Washington.

Dr. Hans Thomsen, the tall, smiling Charge d'Affaires, commented that his people were being "very well treated." This matches the Germans' treatment of American diplomats in their hands, who have been taken to a southern resort town until they can be sent back to the United States.

Japanese Diplomats Confined to Embassy

Still confined to their embassy here were the Japanese diplomats, closely guarded by the police and Federal agents, who would allow nobody to enter or leave. And this matches the treatment of American diplomats in Japan, who are confined to their compounds.

Guarded at their legations, but not restrained, were the diplomats of Italy, Rumania and Bulgaria, all countries at war with this country. The State Department would not say when or whether they would be sent elsewhere to await return to their own countries.

5000 Lost as British Sink Five Italian Ships; Axis Army In Libya Splits Up in Flight

1000 Rescued From Flotilla on Way To North Africa

Imperials Hard On Heels of Foe; Derna Airbase Taken

By the Associated Press

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Tunis, French Tunisia, Dec. 15 (Delayed).—Five thousand Italian seamen and troops apparently en route to Libya were drowned December 12 when British naval units sank two Italian cruisers, a destroyer and three transports in a fierce night fight off Cape Bon on the Tunisian coast.

Approximately 1000 Italians suffering from severe burns, exposure and other injuries were rescued. They are being treated here and at Kelibia, Menzel, Temime and other towns along the coast.

The Italian cruisers reported sunk were the 5000-ton ships Alberto di Giussanno and Alberico da Barbiano, launched in 1928.

All of the 1200 sailors aboard the two cruisers were said to have lost their lives. The other casualties were chiefly aboard the transports.

The British admiralty announced last Saturday the apparent destruction of an entire flotilla of Italian ships, including three destroyers, by British and Dutch destroyers and submarines.

London, naval circles expressed belief that the Italians have only 11 cruisers of the 32 built or building at the start of the war.

A submarine attack apparently preceded the main engagement, then the British destroyers Sikh, Legion and Maori and the Dutch Isaac Sweers raced in to finish the heavier armed Italian convoy with a storm of shell and torpedo fire.

One of the cruisers was seen to blow up, and another was left blazing from stem to stern, the admiralty said. Three torpedo hits on a third were reported by the submarine command.

Rome, Dec. 19 (Official Broadcast Recorded by Associated Press)—The Italian high command claimed today that five British cruisers had been attacked by Axis torpedo planes in the Mediterranean but did not state whether any were sunk.

Three were declared hit Wednesday by successive waves of Italian squadrons in Libyan waters where "important British naval forces" were present.

A fourth, it was asserted, was attacked yesterday near the British fortified island of Malta.

The fifth was said to have been hit and set on fire by German planes. Just where was not stated.

Cairo, Dec. 18.—Flying spearheads of the British Eighth Army raced 200 miles deep in the Libyan Desert tonight behind fleeing Axis forces in a relentless pursuit which netted the big airport at Derna and threatened to envelop all the coastal highlands on the hump of Cirenaica.

The advance was at such tremendous speed that British general headquarters brushed aside tabulation of captures behind the front lines on the former battlefield of Gazala, and announced: "All attention at the moment is being concentrated on maintaining relentless pressure upon the retreating enemy."

In Cairo, British headquarters made public an order of the day which Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck, issued November 25, when the German Gen. Erwin von Rommel unleashed his greatest effort to escape destruction. In part it said:

"There is only one order: Attack and pursue! His position is desperate, and he is trying—by lashing out in all directions—to distract us from our object, which is to destroy him utterly. We will not be distracted, and he will be destroyed!

"You have got your teeth into him. Hold on! Bite deeper and deeper and hang on until he is finished."

The flight of the German and Italian fighting forces had obviously forked: One force perhaps preparing a rearguard action at the Port of Derna itself, which the enemy still held at last reports; the other plunging southwest through Mekly to try to skirt the costal highlands and reach Bengasi, main Axis base.

"Our airforces," said a communique, "were presented with excellent targets and yeterday's bomber effort was the heaviest since operations began. Repeated attacks were made on enemy columns on roads leading to Derna and west of Mekili."

Ground forces have captured more than a dozen Axis airfields containing 200 German and Italian planes, one of them a British Hurricane fighter with German markings.

Kaluga, and the town of Kanino southeast of Kaluga also were reported captured.

The general of the 134th was killed, the communique said, and a number of prisoners were taken.

"Not a German escaped," a communique said.

The Russians said seven Nazi divisions of perhaps 105,000 men had put up desperate resistence south of Rzhev but that Red forces got the upper hand in one mighty assault after another.

Kaluga is an important rail junction on the line running south to Bryansk and Kiev. It was here that the Germans had concentrated one of their strongest forces in their now thwarted drive upon Moscow. Moreover, German troops retreating from Tula had fallen back toward Kaluga, now partly encircled.

(German official radio broadcasts admitted the Russians had penetrated Nazi eastern defenses at some points, but contended they were quickly dislodged by counter-attacks. D. N. B. the German news agency, admitted that the Russian pressure was unrelenting all along the line.)

Reds Open New Offensive

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Dec. 20 (AP).—The Russians have opened a major offensive along the entire Finnish front, taking advantage of weakened opposition caused by the German army's withdrawal of three-fifths of the troops it originally deployed there, British reports said today.

"Dense waves" of Russian cavalry and ski troops were reported thrown into the assault with the support of guns and tanks especially designed for rigorous warfare on this frozen front.

A Stockholm dispatch to the News-Chronicle said Finnish front buckling under the impact of the initial Soviet thrusts had been withdrawn to the north bank of the Svir River at some points between Lake Ladoga and Lake Onega.

Other dispatches said the Germans left the Finns ill-prepared to meet the slashing Red army offensive and that the Nazis remaining there "are feeling the anger which has reinforced Finnish contempt as the Finns realize to what extent the German high command has been using them as a puppet power."

Finnish official reports tonight confirmed the continuation of Russian attacks on the Svir River front between Lake Ladoga and Lake Onega, as well as on the east Karelian front. These attacks, described as weak, were declared to have been repulsed.

War Draft Passes Both Houses; Age Limits Set at 20-44

could come from the existing 2-through 20 registrations and 200,000 from ages 21 through 35. Some 600,000 could come from the new 20-year-old group and an estimated 400,000 from ages 25 through 44. In addition, about 560,000 youths have reached the age of 21 since the last registration, and about 100,000 turn 21 every month.

Registration of 45 Million

Seventeen million men already have been registered in the present Selective Service calls. Twenty-three million more will be called on to register under terms of the new law. Of these, 20-year-olds and men from 35 through 44 will be subject to induction for the first time. Not liable to military service, but compelled to register, will be 18 and 19-year-olds and all men from 45 through 64.

The big National mobilization, spotting men for industrial and civilian defense call as well as Army service, unites the original draft law requires registration of aliens whether or not they have declared their intention of becoming citizens.

Aliens who are subjects of neutral countries could be relieved of liability for Army service if they applied for exemption, but in so doing they would debar themselves from future American citizenship. Enemy aliens could not be inducted "unless they are acceptable to the land or naval forces."

The bill empowers the President to provide for deferment of men by any age group or groups he deems advisable in the national interest, and to terminate such deferment on a similar finding.

As finally approved, the bill includes the Senate amendment providing for payment of $5000 automatic insurance payments to the survivors of all men who die or who were totally disabled on active duty since October 8, or who die or are totally disabled in service without obtaining national insurance in the next 120 days. The amendment extends for 120 days the period in which members of the armed forces may apply for insurance of up to $10,000 without medical examination.

5 Killed in Crash Of Army Bomber Are Identified

The War Department announced yesterday the names of five men killed in the crash of a four-engined bombing plane near Geiger Field, Wash., on Wednesday. They are:

First Lieut. Elbert D. Huffman, 28, of Drexel Hill, Pa.; Capt. Eugene D. Zellmann, 45, St. Louis, Mo.; Aviation Cadet Edwin B. Perkins, 22, Cincinnati, Ohio; Sergt. Reber Brennan, 28, Clayton, N. C.; Corpl. Clarence A. Cunningham, 20, Eastbrook, Pa.

Tallahassee, Fla., Dec. 18 (AP).—Two Army fliers were killed near here today when their plane from Dale Mabry Field crashed on a farm.

The base identified them as Lieut. George Read Matthews, the pilot, Baltimore, Md., and Private Mitchell G. Mallmer, of Glen Cove, Long Island, N. Y.

gency Hospital sometime between 3:45 a. m. and 4:15, and to the doctor who originally attended June.

Emergency Hospital got the call as "3711 F Street Northwest," attaches there said, and passed it on to Casualty Hospital, since it was nearer Casualty's area. Casualty, asking the police radio dispatcher to notify its ambulance, was told there was no such street number, Dr. J. R. Young, acting superintendent of Casualty, said.

Then, while the Casualty attache and the dispatcher were trying to get the correct location a call came in correcting the address to 3711 S Street Northwest. The dispatcher informed Emergency, which sent a doctor and ambulance to the Bishop home.

Meanwhile, police arrived and began administering artificial respiration, and later the fire rescue squad came and used an inhalator. Their efforts were too late.

Shortly after his arrival the doctor pronounced the child dead at 3:45 a. m. The doctor who first called on the child arrived later.

Walter Reed Hospital identified cause of death as "laryngeal edema," a swelling of the throat.

June, a mechanically-minded girl was looking forward eagerly to getting an electric train for Christmas.

She will be buried Monday in Arlington Cemetery.

'New York Town' Shrinks On Screen at the Earle

A Thin Little Story Is Gayly Played By MacMurray, Martin and Tamiroff; Billy De Wolfe Headlines the Stage Revue

"NEW YORK TOWN," Paramount picturization of a story by Jo Swerling, adapted to the screen by Lewis Meltzer, costarring Fred MacMurray, Mary Martin and Robert Preston, with Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman, Eric Blore, Cecil Kellaway, Fuzzy Knight, Olive Prickett, Ken Carpenter, Iris Adams, Edward McNamara, Sam McDaniel and Grace Hayle. Directed by Charles Vidor. At the Earle Theater.

"NEW YORK TOWN," I am afraid you will discover, is not quite big enough to live up to the enormous implications of its title.

While its disclosures are anything but trivial to the characters in the story they principally concern, against the towering background of the Manhattan skyline, they seem so. Victor Ballard, the brash young sidewalk photographer; Stefan Janowski, the Polish refugee who enlarges his snapshots in water colors and oils, and Alexander Curtis, the stranded young woman who is taken into the firm to peddle the finished product to likely buyers, for anything they will bring from 25 cents to $50, do not whip New York. They merely whip the immediate problem of three squares a day and a place to sleep and learn that their divergent philosophies of life are just a little cockeyed. A simple love story has been lifted from Parsley Corners and plopped down at the right end of the Brooklyn Bridge without ever reaching any nearer the heart of New York than its most distant capillary.

Which, of course, has nothing to do with the fact that in its modest, gay and carefree way, "New York Town" is an inconsequential and bright enough charade that cannot possibly do any audience any harm and now and again even may enliven it. Its developments are breezy and amusing and its pivotal figures a likable group of vagabonds, whose presence among the 8,000,000 New York does not even suspect.

It would be pretty futile to suggest that there is no fun in the manner in which Victor, "Al" and Stefan overcome their economic difficulties. Vic, at least, has learned his way around the fringes of the metropolis. It is his happy thought that the easiest way to get the Curtis luggage out of hock is for her to win a radio quiz contest—which she promptly, and prompted, does, even up to and including the $64 question, when all she needed was $40. When luncheon is deemed the expedient thing, that is easy without the expenditure of so much as a dime. All you do is make a circuit of the food exhibits where they are forcing free samples on the reluctant customers. If a dash of gay night life seems essential, you crash a pier party aboard a luxury liner about to sail for Rio de Janeiro and have the time of your life with champagne and the conga line. When it comes to love, that is something else again. No sidewalk lensheund should ever try to marry his girl off for money as an easy road to comfort and freedom from worry—especially if he loves her himself and hasn't quite found it out yet. That leads to black eyes and a number of other discomforting things en route to the altar, or the justice of the peace, or wherever it was. Anyhow, that's the way it was with Mr. Ballard.

Cast a Cut Above Its Underdone Material

Fred MacMurray, Mary Martin, Akim Tamiroff and Robert Preston are far and away above the roles that have been assigned them. Mr. MacMurray, for what it is worth, is as happy-go-lucky here as he was, say, in "Honeymoon in Bali" or any of the other light comedies in which he has appeared. Miss Martin, whose "salesmanship" tremendously interests a rich young client in her, but not her pictures, is a constant reminder of Jean Arthur, in both looks and speech and, unfortunately, has only one brief snatch of "Yip-I-Addy-I-Ay"—or however you spell it—to sing. Tamiroff is soundly sympathetic and admirable, as the emigre who finally obtains his first citizenship papers, and Robert Preston, a young Romeo, who would please the fancy of any girl, even without that prodigious bank account. To bad they don't add up to more than can be compounded from their present vehicle. In lesser roles, Lynne Overman, as a legless pencil vender; Fuzzy Knight, a taxi driver whose wife presents him with quadruplets; Cecil Kellaway, as the ignored and lonely host at the swank dock party, and Eric Blore, the harassed butler, who finally bites the dog, help the fun in parts that have no particular bearing on the main events.

It may be that New York Town is nothing but a big vaudeville show, at that.

The new stage bill at the Earle is notable principally, but not entirely, for the introduction of Billy De Wolfe to Washington audiences. The urbane and versatile Mr. De Wolfe is someone to see—a sort of composite of Reginald Gardiner, Red Skelton, Bob Hope and Eddie Garr, with the amalgamation of talents distinguished by an individuality that makes him distinctively sure-fire. This fellow is a considerable evening's entertainment all by himself. But he isn't all by himself. Evelyn Farney is in there, too, with an interval of the best feminine tap dancing you are apt to encounter in any man's theater, and so are "Whitey" and Ed Ford, and Eddie Sachs, who ought to be the champion drum major's baton spinner, if he isn't. That "Whitey," incidentally, is the best-trained fox terrier in the business. Those indefatigable Roxyettes, needless to say, give the bill its accustomed fillip. And that ain't all.

A Leon Errol comedy, with Vivian Tobin, wants to know "Who's a Dummy?", Howard Hill demonstrates the magic of the bow and arrow, "Food for Freedom" dwells on wartime dietetics and the first newsreel shots of Pearl Harbor under attack complete a program that is better than anyone has any right to expect in a week so packed with other preoccupations.

Met's Comedy Plays Camera's Vanishing Act

By Richard L. Coe

"THE BODY DISAPPEARS," Warner Brothers picturization of a screen play by Scott Darling and Erna Lazarus, costarring Jeffrey Lynn and Jane Wyman, with Edward Everett Horton, Willie Best, Marguerite Chapman, Natalie Schaefer, Sidney Bracy, Wade Boteler, Herbert Anderson, David Bruce, DeWolf Hopper, Craig Stevens, Ivan Simpson, Hobart Bosworth and Michael Ames. Directed by D. Ross Lederman. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

Dat ole debbil camera is at it again. "It" on the Metropolitan screen these days means the good old rub-out technique, the now-you-see-him-now-you-don't business. Edward Everett Horton is the scientist in this version—not mad for a change, just screw loose—and Willie Best is his smothered-in-confusion assistant. This time the trick is called "The Body Disappears."

One might just as well talk about the weather as the plot of "The Body Disappears." How's it been out your way? Not much like Christmas hereabouts, but then the only pleasant thing about this war business is that it takes the weather out of the public realm. No more prophetic fancies from pontifical weathermen. The weather simply is and that's all there is to it.

Oh yes, we were talking about "The Body Disappears." Well, it seems Jeffrey Lynn is about to get married and at his bachelor dinner his pals play a trick on him and dump him into a med. school dissecting room. Then along comes scientist Edward Everett Horton, bent on bringing the dead back to life; he stuffs stiff Lynn with the potion, when, whiff, Lynn disappears. All but his clothes. Which titivates scientist's duaghter Jane Wyman and you know what happens next. Household goods on the seventh floor.

"Singapore to Hongkong"

This amiable business is as evanescent as ever, prodded along with variations on the cop-chases-car-with-no-one-driving angle and courtroom-screams-as-headless-man appears denouement. There's nothing particularly original in it. It is fundamentally the "Invisible Man" series without the horror and the "Topper" series without the delirious obligato.

Costars Lynn and Wyman are nice young people, but manage little to keep you from thinking this is Old Home Week. Edward Everett Horton practically wears out his double-takes and Willie Best is genuinely amusing, especially when his screaming prowess is all, as we say when we're visiting Lancaster, Pa.

For its most interesting short of the week, the Metropolitan is showing a travel film of the Andre de la Varre series, "Singapore to Hongkong." It would be hard to tie this one for topical interest, with its understandably moving shots of these bastions of the Pacific. Evidently filmed within the past two years—though just when is not clear—life in the British strongholds achieves a fine reality with glimpses not only of the two spots, but also the forces garrisoned in both Singapore and Victoria, the city of Hongkong. Naturally, it's as timely a short subject as you're likely to see this weekend.

Other shorts at the Metropolitan include a dull and predictable musical, "West of the Rockies," and "Crazy Canary," a color cartoon that manages to be steadily funny even if it isn't a Disney. The Metropolitan's penchant for generous newsreels results in a particularly interesting collection, highlighted, of course, by the first shots received of the bombing of the Hawaiian Islands on that December 7 none of us living now are ever likely to forget.

San Quentin Boys Proposition Bogart

After a brisk exchange of letters, credentials and professional pleasantries, Humphrey Bogart, screen bad man, and the inmates of San Quentin Prison have come to an understanding and are about to do business.

Upshot of the negotiations, according to a story in the San Quentin News, the prison paper, is that Bogart will become advertising manager of the publication under certain restrictions.

"The job is yours if you can satisfy us as to your integrity and ability," wrote Editor Joe Smith. He had heard, he said, that Bogart intended to go straight; that playing a detective in Warner Bros.' "The Maltese Falcon" had reformed his character.

Broadway Glossary

New York, Dec. 19.

CHANCE: Fred J. Wheeler recently was acquitted in Farmington, Me., in connection with the death of a girl. The case received national publicity because the revelations at the hearing were reminiscent of "Tobacco Road" . . . Before the trial began, Wheeler made a $10 bet with the reporters. He bet that he would be found guilty. After his acquittal, he was asked why he had made such a wager, in view of his protestations of innocence. "I bet against my acquittal," Wheeler explained, "because I've never won a bet in my life."

HEIGHO: Helen Hayes participated in the Bill of Rights ceremonies at City Hall on Monday. She stood beside Mayor LaGuardia, and recited the historic document whose 150th anniversary was being celebrated . . . The diminutive Miss Hayes returned to the theater, and confessed: "It was a fascinating discovery. I never dreamed that such a thing was true?" . . . "What did you discover?" she was asked . . . "I stood next to the Mayor," she answered. "I'm taller than he is."

ENTERPRISE: Maurice Maeterlinck, the 79-year-old Belgian poet, still is working on his new play. Dr. Saul Colin, his agent, is advising him to devote his talents to writing magazine pieces. "You can make a lot of money," Colin assured him. "Write things for Cosmopolitan or the Saturday Evening Post, instead of for posterity" . . . "No," said Maeterlinck. "I like posterity."

Preparation: In February 1940, J. Edgar Hoover was subjected to attack in the Senate and in left-wing publications, because he had established a list of suspects considered potentially dangerous to the welfare of the United States. "These are the Gestapo tactics of an American Himmler," was the line of criticism . . . But within three hours after Hoover was given the go ahead order last week, his department had taken into custody more than 3000 enemy aliens whose activities were inimical to the welfare of the Nation. That figure is higher than the total number of enemy aliens arrested during America's entire participation in the last war.

REALISM: Last week the producers of "Brooklyn, U. S. A."—the play about Murder, Inc.—went to Brooklyn and bought the barber-pole and other fittings from the barber shop owned by Louis Capone, who was convicted with Lepke. They will be used in the sets for the play . . . Sidney Lumet, who portrays the role of a punk-mobster, is a student at Columbia University. He's now at work on his term-paper in psychology, "The Mentality of Killers."

CHATTER: Owen Roberts is only the first of the Supreme Court Justices to be given additional assignments by the President. Others soon will follow . . . "We Hold These Truths," the Bill of Rights commemoration program on which the President appeared, was the final program written for C. B. S. by Norman Corwin. He's retiring to the woods to finish a play, and then will do film work after April 1 . . . Gloria Vanderbilt returned to California alone . . . Morrie Ryskind is helping rewrite the Eddie Cantor musical, "Banjo Eyes." The show also will be doctored by an additional director.

FINANCE: Charles MacArthur, while watching a gin-rummy game at Fefes Monte Carlo, told of the interest he once had for another popular game—backgammon. MacArthur had gone to Hollywood to write a picture for Howard Hawks. They began to play backgammon, furiously, for many hours . . . "It was so exhausting," he stated, "that I quit playing that game forever" . . . "Just how exhausting was it?" MacArthur was asked . . . "Just to give you an idea of how exhausting it was," he replied, "I don't remember whether I lost $207,000 to Hawks, or whether he lost it to me."

LAMENT: Joe Frisco, the comic, was observed walking the streets long after midnight . . . "What's up?" a friend asked him . . . "It's the same old f-f-filling,' Frisco sighed . . . "In which tooth?" his friend continued . . . "Not the f-f-filling in my t-t-tooth." Frisco explained. "It's the filling the h-h-hotel manager put in the keyhole of my r-r-room."

HEDDA HOPPER

No Monkey Business!

Hollywood, Dec. 19.

Just ran into that fine comedian Benny Rubin, who's air raid warden of Encino, where he lives. He's on the death watch, from midnight until 6 a. m., so it won't interrupt his work during daytime. He has 300 men under him, and said his boys are being so well fed that if this continues they'll be fat as butter, because at the homes of Fibber McGee and Molly, Don Quinn and the Phil Harrises, they keep luscious sandwiches and hot coffee going all night long for the boys on watch. Of course, the wardens aren't allowed to carry firearms, but in several instances they've had to use their fists when they've ordered "lights out" and the head of the house has said, "You know where you can go." One farmer in the vicinity who owned a shot gun, seeing the lights still on at the monkey farm ordered them out. Owner said, "My monkeys are afraid in the dark." Well, in one second flat, the monkeys were afraid all right—but the light was out!

CARY GRANT

After watching Cary Grant kiss Priscilla Lane through three rooms, across a yard and over a cemetery, I recommend he be appointed tooter for our rair raid sirens if the power ever fails. The guy's got more wind than a Kansas cyclone. It all happens when cops come to arrest Cary's aunts in "Arsenic and Old Lace." Cary, fearful Priscilla will spill the works, starts kissing her and backing her out of the house, keeps his lips glued to hers till they get safely out of range of the law. "That," said he, after the scene was over, "is not a bad way to keep a gal quiet during a black-out." Why, Cary! You wouldn't suggest keeping our morale up by lowering our defenses?

Harold Lloyd is thinking of returning to the screen in a domestic comedy . . . Buck Jones, Tim McCoy and Raymond Hatton will be featured in "Below the Border".

Eddie Albert, who's done some comic acts here free, is now getting paid to play a clown in a circus at Calexico.

On first day of shooting "Yankee Doodle," Mike Curtiz was disturbed by sound on roof, cut scene, yelled to assistant to get rid of that sound. "But it's rain on the roof," explained assistant. "O. K.," said Mike, "get rid of it!"

Harry Carey goes into "The Spoilers" . . . When "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" failed to start on schedule, wag cracked production was being held up because they couldn't find ten gentlemen in Hollywood!

No wonder we call Paulette Goddard lucky. With all this fuss going on, she's hob-nobbing down in Mexico City with King Carol, Mme. Lupescu and A. C. Blumenthal.

From now on we'll be early risers, 'cause shooting at studios begins at 7 a. m., which means if you're a woman you'll have to get there at 6 a. m. to get your hair washed and waved.

Bill Henry, news commentator, told me a cutie. A Jap he knows was very proud of his white chickens, has now painted them red, white and blue.

But my Moli told me of an incident which happened in a bus yesterday. When a big husky, American-born Japanese youth got in, everyone stared at him so that he burst into tears. It behooves all of us to have a little tolerance. In fact, not a little—a great deal.

Anne Powell, of Silverton, Oreg., wrote me the low-down on Clark Gable, who once worked in a lumber mill there. "He was plenty popular. A grand mixer. When Clark went to the country dances, he used to wear a contrivance in his mouth that looked like teeth. If he got a partner he didn't like, he's stick those extra teeth out of his mouth, scaring the wits out of the poor gal, who'd tear loose and beat it for the wall." Just the old Jekyll and Hyde spirit! Eh, Clark?

Foundry Methodist Church to Be Scene Of Union Services

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Led by President Roosevelt, worshipers in the Nation's Capital will celebrate Christmas in the atmosphere of traditional music, pageantry and the spirit of sacrificial giving. Many services are planned for tomorrow and Christmas Eve.

ROOSEVELT

Its message undimmed through 2000 years, the Nativity narrative will be told in majestic cathedrals, humble chapels and large and small institutions of mercy. Men, women and children of all estates will bow in homage to the one who came that "the world might have life and have it more abundantly."

President Roosevelt is expected to follow his annual custom of attending the union interdenominational Christmas Day rites, being held this year at Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest, at 11 a. m.

Dr. Blackwelder

The Very Rev. Ze Barney T. Phillips, dean of Washington Cathedral and chaplain of the United States Senate and retiring Epiphany rector, will deliver the sermon, and the Rev. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, president of the Washington Federation of Churches and Reformation Lutheran pastor, will bring a Yule salutation.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, host pastor, will preside, and the Foundry choir will sing under Justin Lawrie's direction.

MISS RUSSELL

The second annual Christmas Eve candlelight holy communion rites will take place at the Washington Cathedral at 11:15 p. m., with tall, white tapers the only illumination in the Great Choir. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will be celebrant. The Cathedral choir of men and boys will sing under organist Paul Callaway's direction.

A special service for neighborhood children will be held Monday at 4 p. m. at a creche in the Washington Cathedral Children's Chapel with Canon W. Curtis Draper as officiant. Christmas Day services will be at 10:30 a. m., when Bishop Freeman will preach.

BISHOP FREEMAN

Many Christmas alley projects again will be carried out through the Washington Council of Church Women, the Federation Hospital Department and other church groups. Miss Etta Mai Russell, Federation juvenile court worker, will promote caroling on church lawns and steps at twilight Christmas Eve—coinciding with the caroling service on the White House lawn, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is expected to participate in one of the alley services Monday afternoon.

The hospital committee of the Federation and the Washington Council of Church Women will bring to patients at Gallinger Hospital. Information on that project is available by calling NOrth 5215.

Maret School Carolers

"IN GOOD VOICE"—Children and young people of the Maret School are shown singing carols at the recent entertainment of the Washington French Congregation in St. John's Parish Hall, Lafayette Square

Annual Nativity Ceremonies Set at Franciscan Monastery

The inspiring Nativity ceremonies again will be conducted on Christmas Eve at the Franciscan Monastery in Brookland, often called "the Holy Land of America."

Probable curtailment of the usual Nativity broadcast from Bethlehem because of the war will focus special attention on the local ceremonies beginning at 10:45 a. m., when the friars will chant the solemn matins for the Nativity feast.

The solemn mass will be sung at midnight by the Very Rev. Leonard Walsh, O. F. M., commissary of the Holy Land, and the sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Herbert Gallagher, O. F. M., vice commissary.

At the conclusion of the mass, accompanied by the entire community carrying lighted candles, the celebrant will carry in procession the image of the Divine Infant, just as is done in Bethlehem. During this procession, the "Adeste Fideles" and other joyful Christmas hymns will be sung.

The procession will terminate at the Grotto of the Nativity, underneath the main church. The grotto is a faithful copy of the original in Bethlehem.

Neighborhood Caroling Set To Mark Christmas Here

Church youth groups here will celebrate Christmas with the traditional neighborhood caroling, pageants, special dinners and entertainments for newcomers and servicemen, and in various other ways.

The Sigma Delta Sigma class of Columbia Heights Christian Church, assisted by youth groups, will give a Yule party and buffet supper Monday evening for 100 Federal workers unable to go home for the holidays. The young people will hold a candlelight carol service tomorrow at 8 p. m.

A marionette version of the Yule play, "Why the Chimes Rang," will be given tomorrow morning for the church school of Cleveland Park Congregational Church and for the church at large December 28.

The young people of Fifteenth Street Christian Church tomorrow at 5 and 8 p. m. will present their ninth annual production of the pageant, "The New Born King," under the direction of Mrs. Harold Snyder.

A "White Gifts for the King" service in the Sunday school, special Christmas music and sermon, "Following Starlit Paths," at the morning worship hour, and a Christmas play, "Peace I Give Unto You" at the evening service by the Young People's Dramatic Club will feature the Christmas Sunday program at Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D Streets Northeast.

The Christmas service program of the Christian Endeavor Union is well on the way to completion. The Presbyterian League is assisting the Endeavorers in this work.

The calendar of events is as follows:

Tuesday—Stocking filling at Calvary Baptist Church, 6:30 p. m.

Wednesday—Trimming of trees at Gallinger Hospital starting at 12:30 p. m.

Thursday—New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, 6 a. m., worship service by the league—disperse to hospitals to sing Christmas carols.

Gas Tax

The Senate-House compromise on the District gasoline-tax bill was made possible by the promise of the Public Roads Administration to allocate two million dollars for the construction of better approaches to the Potomac bridges. With this additional sum, it is believed that a 3-cent local gasoline tax will be sufficient to finance all the highway projects that should be undertaken at this time. Both the Senate and House indorsed this reasoning by promptly accepting the conference report on the gasoline-tax bill yesterday.

It is entirely proper, of course, for the Federal Government to share the expense of building new bridge approaches. The greatest single factor in the increase of traffic across the Potomac is the location of Federal buildings on the Virginia side of the river. Any plan to have the Federal Government build all the access roads to the new War Department Building in Arlington, while leaving the District to finance the necessary changes on this side of the river, would have been grossly unfair.

The real question is whether the 1-cent increase in the tax will be sufficient to finance other urgent improvements. Of course, projects that can be reasonably postponed should not be undertaken now because of the shortage of materials. At the same time we must remember that Washington is growing at a fantastic rate. Some of the worst traffic bottlenecks must be eliminated if the city is to avoid wasteful tie-ups and acute congestion of streets in this time of crisis. The bill would be more satisfactory if it gave the Board of Commissioners authority to adjust this and other tax rates in accord with the city's changing requirements. The board already has power to raise or lower the real estate tax. For a rapidly expanding city that has no borrowing power, except that limited authority granted in the blackout bill, the power to adjust tax rates to changing conditions may be the only alternative to a serious lag in municipal services.

Hongkong's Fate

The fall of Hongkong would not assist the strategy of the Japanese very much beyond releasing them for their grand assault on Singapore. Britain till a year or so ago had never contemplated even a fight to retain Hongkong. It was only the ability of the Chinese to hold the Japanese on Chinese soil that persuaded the British to build new fortifications and augment the garrison. But even then the only action possible was a delayed one. Hongkong's problem became dire as soon as the enemy got established on the mainland, for the mainland is within a quarter of an hour's ferry distance from the island. The island, moreover, is easy to blockade from the sea side. Both the inlet and the outlet of its deep and beautiful harbor are extremely narrow, and the island itself is a rock about the size of New York City which allows of no alternative access from the sea. To the problem of situation is added the problem of supplies. Even if it were not possible to take the island by force, it would be starved out. That was always the preoccupation of the British. Stores to last about three months had been piled up, but hundreds of thousands of Chinese refugees, who have been flocking to the island, have intensified the problem of the food supply.

The times are too grim to permit of any sentimental tears, but there is a good deal of sentiment attached to this British colony. A hundred years ago the British found it a barren rock, as they later found Shanghai a swamp. It was used mainly as a hideaway for the pirates who infested the South China Seas. When the British overcame the isolationism of the Chinese after a war which was grossly misnamed the Opium War, they obtained Hongkong and several coastal leaseholds by way of reparation. The Manchu court in Peking thought that it had gotten off easily. But the British proceeded to make Hongkong a bright pearl of the British crown, a trade entrepot of great importance, and a hillside city of surpassing loveliness. There is no better tribute to Britain's colonizing genius than Hongkong. Many a traveler will nowadays be stirred by the memory of an arrival at twilight in a harbor teeming with sampans and craft of all nationalities from which rises the Peak all atwinkle with lights.

But the strategic mind of the ABCD powers—all of them—must already be riveted on Singapore, 1450 miles away. There is the key problem. The capture of Singapore would give the Japanese a base from which they could dominate not only the South China Sea but also the whole of the Indian Ocean and the coasts of Australia. Our own trade routes would be gone, and we should be pinched for many commodities besides rubber. The defense of Singapore is the No. 1 problem for America, and Hongkong is merely an incident in this war of the great oceans.

Mobilized For War

It would have been more prudent of Congress to adhere to the original desire of the Administration to bring the draft age down to 19. That will be proved before this war is won. Experience has shown that youth is best adapted for the skill and daring and bravery required for air and tank warfare. Moreover, as we have already pointed out, some time must elapse before the 19-year-olders could be prepared for war. Foresight thus required that the net should encompass the male population best fitted for military duty. Nevertheless the prime need was to amend the Selective Service Act without delay in order to mobilize for military training a greater segment of our man power. In this respect Congress has been exemplary.

The amendment to the Selective Service system which has been put through in such record time also requires the registration of men from 18 through 64. This will dispense with enlistments. For the chief purpose of a comprehensive registration of able-bodied men is to take an inventory of our resources in man power and use that information to put men where they will be most useful to the country. Voluntary enlistments interfere with this kind of systematic utilization of man power. As Secretary Stimson explains, encouragement of enlistment might deplete the ranks of skilled labor, and thus hamper our war efforts. In all-out wars calling for the mobilization of the entire population (or a goodly percentage of it), there is little room left for exercise of individual choice. The man who wants to risk his life in the service of his country may be called upon to serve his country in the factory or on the farm, and he will now know that he is doing a soldier's duty.

So we are rising to some realization of what our two-front conflict calls for in service as well as sacrifice. Perhaps the realization has not yet gone deep enough. At any rate, there can be no doubt that when facts rather than present prospects show the need for the 19-year-olders in the training camps, Congress will act with celerity.

Food Hoards

However anachronistic the spectacle of a people at war rushing to buy golf balls may be, there is a reason for this frantic rush. Those who don't buy golf balls today will have to get along without them when their present supply is exhausted. There is no comparable reason for the current hoarding of foodstuffs as a protection against future shortages. For, as Secretary of Agriculture Wickard points out, the United States entered the war "with the largest total supplies of food in its history." Furthermore, the Department of Agriculture reports that the production of all crops this year was "of near-record volume." And judging from tentative production schedules, next year will bring farm output to an all-time peak. We can therefore share our overflowing abundance with our allies, to the limit permitted by restricted shipping facilities, without being forced to reduce our own food consumption materially. That being the case, hoarding serves little purpose except to accelerate the advance in food prices which most hoarders are trying to anticipate.

There is no question that the increase in prices of foodstuffs has been tremendous of late. And there will be worse to come unless Congress passes legislation subjecting farm products as well as other commodities to effective price control. Mr. Wickard assures the public that there is "little excuse for any substantial increase in prices of farm products as a result of United States' entry into the war." Undoubtedly that is true. Nevertheless, with Congress actively abetting the upward movement of farm prices by price-boosting legislation, the cost of living has begun to soar. By mid-November prices received by farmers for their products had risen on the average 36 per cent above the level of the preceding year, with much greater than average increases in some cases. For instance, farmers who received only 9.4 cents per pound for cotton a year ago were getting 15.8 cents per pound on the average in mid-November. Hogs, which brought the farmer $5.62 per 100 pounds a year ago, were selling for $9.66. Potatoes, selling for 52.4 cents per bushel in November, 1940, were averaging 77.4 cents this year, while tobacco had jumped from 14.7 cents per pound to 24.2 cents. All these increases are, of course, rapidly being translated into higher retail prices for textile products and food.

There is little that the ordinary man can do to protect himself against such a widespread upward surge of prices even if he loads down his pantry shelves with canned goods or stores staples in bins. There is only one adequate method of dealing with rapidly rising living costs in times like these. The situation patently calls for prompt enactment of price-control legislation to put a stop to price increases for which there is no economic justification.

What Timor Means

The Portuguese colony of Timor, situated at the eastern third of the island bearing that name, is only 400 miles—or within easy bombing range—of the north coast of Australia. Not long ago it became a station for an airline from the island of Palau in the Japanese-mandated Caroline Islands, a circumstance reflecting Tokyo's keen interest in that Portuguese outpost in the Pacific. Timor is also important as a possible submarine base from which to attack shipping in the South Pacific.

In view of Timor's strategic importance, therefore, it is all to the good to learn that the Dutch and the Australians have jointly occupied that region, and thus prevented it from falling into Japanese hands. It is not difficult to understand the consternation which this development has produced at Lisbon. From the very beginning of the war Portugal has tried desperately to maintain a neutral position. The Allied occupation of Timor may now provide Hitler with a pretext for occupying Portugal and such vital Portuguese areas as the Cape Verde Islands and the Azores. However, Hitler's past record proves that he would long ago have taken such action, with or without pretexts, had there been any advantages to be derived from it. Portugal can accept at face value the pledge given by the Dutch and Australians that Portuguese sovereignty will not be impaired and that the occupying forces will be withdrawn "as soon as the threat from the enemy is removed."

In the meantime it is encouraging to note that, as in Iran, the Allies did not wait on events, but acted with promptness and decision in preventing the Japanese from establishing themselves in a spot of great strategic importance in the South Seas.

Hero's Son

With somewhat mixed emotions we read about the President's letter to his unknown successor in behalf of young Master Colin P. Kelly. It was an admirable gesture and, as it seems, not without precedent. Already, by virtue of the heroic death of the father whose name he bears, this child has been singled out by destiny. We have not the slightest doubt that he will accept it most worthily, and, whether in war or peace, will serve his country with the same selfless devotion. And yet the consciousness of and the possession of an illustrious name has penalties as well as advantages. Those who are expected to follow an heroic example cannot cultivate nobility, generosity and bravery like the rest of us in infrequent fits and starts and between long intervals of timidity, laziness and selfishness. They must plug away at virtue patiently and constantly. This will now be the stint of young Colin.

But the destiny the President has bestowed upon Colin Kelly 3d may involve even greater sacrifices than that. As much perhaps as any name in the world, the name Kelly is remarkable for the diversity of fields in which it has become celebrated. Among the living Kellys and Kelleys in "Who's Who In America," for example, we find eminent lawyers, industrialists, merchants, bishops, architects, college presidents, professors, diplomats, scientists, physicians, surgeons, writers, dramatists, painters and musicians. Suppose that young Colin Kelly's natural gifts incline him to some other career than professional soldiering? Should he be inhibited by the memory of his signal honor? Perhaps the answer to that is that West Point, in addition to so many illustrious soldiers, has already produced one famous poet, one great painter and at least one celebrated bishop.

DROUGHT

This is the season of dry things:
The faded skeletal leaves of the great plane trees
Straining pale shafts of sun rays
And the papery bark peeled from the white boles;
This is the hour when the locust sings,
His unceasing antiphonies
Rising and falling through these breathless days,
Unhurried, incessant, without gladness or grief,
With neither anticipation nor desire he sings
In the shadow of the eaten leaf.
There are tide marks along the dry creek bed,
Bleached moss shriveled above the water holes,
The shimmering wings of the dragon fly
Glittering over cracked mud,
An iridescent carcass of a tiny lizard dead
Some days in the roadway's silver dust,
And the sumacs fiery as blood,
Like crimson torches, arrogant, upthrust,
Challenging the clear dome of sky.

Pennies, Nickels, Dimes

Several years ago when I went to school I read the history of a remarkable ship called the U. S. S. Constitution, better known today as "Old Ironsides." That name meant a great deal to me. It meant the bulwark of freedom to mankind. A while later that bulwark of liberty and freedom was in danger of being destroyed. An appeal was sent out to every lover of freedom to save this historic structure; that so many had given their life blood so that others might live and breathe freedom. The appeal was answered by America's school children, who scraped together their pennies, nickles, dimes and quarters, and saved this historic structure from destruction in an ocean grave yard. Today "Old Ironsides" is a national shrine imbedded in the hearts of all Americans, and an inspiration to the future Americans.

Today the future of America is threatened. Several days ago the President of our beloved land spoke to America over the radio. He said, "every man, woman and child are in this fight. Our very lives and very future are in danger." I am sure that everyone agrees with him. The President also said that it's a privilege for everyone to serve America. Yes, its more than a privelege, it's an honor to serve one's country, so that this Nation of the people shall not perish from the earth.

What better way than by all the people of America, like the school children of America, serving America. Several days ago I wrote to the President and I asked him to allow me the opportunity of investing in a bit of America. I sent a small token to him and asked him to please invest it in America, so that we would remain free. That's only a start for the rest of America to follow, with pennies, nickels, dimes, and quarters, toward building bigger and better bombers to win this battle against a group of outlaws who want to conquer the entire world. Wake up 130 million Americans, and send your pennies, nickels, and dimes to our President Roosevelt. Hoping this letter will be read by all Americans who love their country.

Christmas Campaign

As any exegete knows, the whole philosophy of Christ's teachings is flavored with a magnificent sense of humor. He must chuckle at our asininity as demonstrated by our "celebration" of Christmas and other human antics.

The current belief is that so long as Christmas is "celebrated" through a simple gift-giving process there is acquired forthwith a renewed license for backbiting, calumny, exploitation of the weak and other indecencies.

Theologues can attest to the truth of my statement that Christ intended every day of the year to be Christmas. There was no intention of setting aside one day for decency and charity and justice. Unfortunately, that is the practice.

Again, Christmas is a season of tragic contrasts, another of its aspects which certainly was never intended. Poor children are more poignantly conscious of their lot and orphan tears come freely during that season. What of those whose beloved are spilling their blood in far-off Japan? Yet, the sole worry of the smug and the selfish is how many gifts they will receive and what they will eat and what they will drink.

I do not believe I shall get far in any one-man campaign for the abolition of Christmas in its present idiotic form, but at least I shall try. I have been trying for 20 years.

New Deal Politics

I agree with "K. J." that politics have not been adjourned by the New Dealers even for the duration.

I happen to be another one of those admittedly exceptionally qualified persons with ability to fill certain positions much better than those who have been and are being placed, but, the old Army game, namely buck-passing, has been and is the order of the day. There are many, many more in the same situation, namely, qualified, able men with love of country who actually need a job; the various departments publicly cry that they cannot secure persons to fill vacancies but it seems that only certain persons—perhaps those having credentials of campaign contributions—can get such jobs.

Unfortunately in my case I have neither such credentials nor am I a graduate of Harvard or Yale. Therefore, I presume "K. J." and many others in similar situation and not subject to draft, as well as the undersigned, will have to take the "leavings," if any, after the loved ones are provided for from popular colleges as well as swivel-chair front lines.

Japan Now

That the broadly humane Charles Edward Russell has been spared the spectacle of the reversal of his judgment of the attitude of Japan toward the Philippines may be due to the kindness of fate. In his comprehensive book, "The Outlook in the Philippines," issued in 1922, he wrote: "From any point of view except obsession, the seizure of the Philippines by Japan seems preposterous . . . as far as Japanese aggression is concerned, I think we may be at ease. I recall the last words of Marquis Okumo, the grand old man of Japan, as I was leaving Tokyo (page 346):

"Let us clear our minds of any such thought. The days of international brigandage are past. It is a new and better world in which we live. Acts of aggression by strong nations upon the weak are no longer possible."

Mr. Russell predicted that Japan, realizing her loss of prestige in the eyes of the civilized world, which she cherished above everything, and her dependence upon American demand for her silk, would act to prevent aggrandizement. In addition he saw in the intense love of liberty in Korea and in the Philippines obstacles that would deter Japan from acts such as we in our day have witnessed. In his kindly affection for humanity, especially the element that was affected by the sensuous and religious phases of life, Mr. Russell overlooked the basic biological fact of a different complexion in new generations.

Paging Superman

Please ask Jerry Siegel where was Superman when all the bombing took place at Pearl Harbor.

Now, if Superman isn't going to do the job we will just have to get somebody in to take his place.

We know he is busy, but this was only a handful of Japanese and they weren't stopped. How come?

Our National Anthem

In these days, when upon every public occasion, our National Anthem is played or sung, we feel we have done our duty when we have listened to and stood at attention through the first verse. Believing that the first verse of any song or hymn is only the introduction, it has made me wonder how many of us Americans know all of the verses of our National Anthem.

When Francis Scott Key wrote our glorious anthem in 1814, he had, from the deck of a small American vessel, watched anxiously, all night, to see when dawn came, "that our flag was still there." The second verse speaks of his great joy, in seeing our "Star-Spangled Banner." But it is in the third verse that he gave us his timeless message, which I should like to recall to you here:

Oh, thus be it e'er when free-men shall stand
Between their loved home and the war's desolation
Blest with victory and peace, may the heaven-rescued land
Praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation.
Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto: "In God is our trust!"
And the Star-Spangled Banner, in triumph shall wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Let us never forget, in this desperate hour, the power that has made and preserved us a nation. We have unbounded material wealth, but let us never forget our spiritual inheritance, for without that our civilization would not be worth sacrificing, fighting or dying for.

We have stamped on our coins these words, "In God We Trust," and that same idea is enshrined in our National Anthem.

Let us learn it ourselves in its entirety, let us teach it to our children, let us sing it in our schools, our churches and everywhere. And, above all else, let us believe it.

For The Duration

In conpection with protection against bombing attacks, don't you think it might be a good idea to shut off all outside electric signs, particularly the colored ones, for the duration, at least along our coasts and for a few hundred miles inland? In flying over various parts of the United States one sees the glare of these advertising signs at tremendous distances and the distribution of them indicates sharply the principal centers and thoroughfares of towns and cities. Presumably, blackout plans would include shutting off these signs, but some might be left on accidentally or intentionally. If they were disconnected for the duration the danger of accidental or intentional display would be obviated.

With impending shortages of commodities the necessity for heavy advertising by display lights is reduced and I should think that the newspapers and magazines could take care of all advertising needs.

In addition to guarding against air raid dangers the closing up of these signs would reduce the amount of labor, fuel and other materials involved in the generation of electricity for lighting them, and of tungsten in bulbs and neon or other gases in tubular signs, together with labor involved in maintenance and repairs of signs. In addition, driving in the main thoroughfares of large cities would be simplified by the elimination of the confusing colored signs while the street lights and store windows would continue to provide adequate and cheerful illumination.

I realize that a great many toes would be stepped on by such an action and there would be bitter objection, but I believe great good would result and the time to do it would be in this early stage of indignation, cooperation and fear of air raid attacks.

Refugees—Off The Record

At the time of their arrival, here in New York City, the more prominent, and, occasionally, the most pathetic of the refugees, fleeing Hitler's wrath, receive some notice in the news. But the majority of them are accorded no newspaper recognition. If they can satisfy the immigration authorities, they are allowed to land and soon join, if they remain in this vicinity, an indistinguishable minority in the city's enormous and polyglot population. Yet one wonders about them—these off-the-record refugees with their memories of injustice and intolerance. How do they fare, individually, in their new environment? Do most of them find employment—or happiness in their daily living?

I was discussing these matters with a friend who, as a social worker, comes into frequent contact with many of these exiled people. She assured me that it is remarkable the way they manage to fend for themselves and to make adjustments to an altogether different way of life from what they once knew. We talked so long on the subject that I was shocked when I saw what time it was.

"I must run along," I exclaimed. "I have to hunt up a cake—an extra special kind of cake that I can use for a centerpiece at my Christmas party. It is so difficult to find something that is out of the ordinary."

"Not at all!" my friend enthused. "Not if you know two refugees whom I know! Let me give you their address. They are brother-in-law and sister-in-law. She does the actual baking. He acts as her business manager. And just wait till you see the kind of Christmas cakes she makes! I'm not going to tell you what kind. I want you to see for yourself."

Eagerly, I wrote down an address on West Twentieth Street in Manhattan and set out to find it. My friend had spoken of a "kitchen" and I had supposed it would be in the rear of some little shop. But I found West Twentieth Street to be lined with warehouses and loft buildings. I went in and inquired of the elevator man at the number my friend had given me. I was informed that the "kitchen" was on an upper floor in the building and was taken up and told to enter at a certain door. I did, stepping into a cubicle of an office where a kind-faced, elderly gentleman bade me welcome and asked what he could do for me. I explained I had come to order a Christmas cake. His sad eyes brightened. He smiled.

"Ach, so," he said in his uncertain English. "It is, then, the tree-cake you have come to see."

"Tree-cake," I repeated. "But what is that?"

"It was originated," he continued, "this 'baumkuchen,' at the court of the Emperor Lucullus in Rome and the recipe was later carried into Switzerland and then into Germany and Austria. But the chef at Lucullus's court was the cake's inventor. Always, he was expected to invent new pastries to please the Emperor and his guests. Usually, such a pastry was served, hot, in the hall after a heavy meal. Sometimes, doves would be inside or a dwarf who would hop out, somewhat parboiled, when the pastry was cut. You will recall the nursery song of 'the four and 20 blackbirds' that, 'when the pie was opened' began to sing, thus providing a 'dainty dish to set before a king.' But, for such birds and any dwarf involved, it was an ordeal. So the chef, at Lucullus' court, being a humane man, invented a pastry that could be served cold after having been spun around a wooden spindle before an open fire. When the spindle was removed, there was a hollow place inside in which a dwarf might be stood upright, his small head protruding, like that of a Jack-in-the-box, from the top of the pastry. Since such a confection, when done, resembled a fir tree with its spreading branches, it was called a tree-cake—and also because, like a growing tree, the 'baumkuchen' has rings inside that show its growth. But you will see for yourself."

He rose and held open the door that led into an immaculate kitchen. A typical, though non-Aryan, hausfrau turned and smiled at me. She was, my host—what else could I call him?—explained, about to "build" a fresh "baumkuchen." Would I please be seated again, so I might watch in comfort? It was an intricate process, this "building" of a tree-cake. It was, I was informed, to take three hours in all for the cake to "grow" on the revolving spindle. Then the flame would be extinguished and six hours more would be required for the cake to cool and become firm. The patience of the woman cook fascinated me as I watched her dip the batter onto the spindle, filament by filament, allowing each of these to bake thoroughly before adding another—by which process the cake acquires its annular texture, alternately gold and brown. I was then shown the finished product—a cake that was more like a succession of cakes, each about a foot across, and piled, one on top of the other, to a height of two feet. Thin, white icing had been casually applied from top to bottom, giving the effect of a Christmas tree that had been snowed upon. Next, I was offered a "tasting sample." It literally melted in my mouth—and I gave my order for a ten-pound tree-cake then and there.

"And now," I asked, "What about the dwarf to top off my tree-cake?"

"Ach, for such a little fellow," the woman cook put in, "you must go to that—Walt Disney—do you call him? But better to a department store in the toy department; what!"

"Well, dwarf or no dwarf," I enthused, "I am going to have a cake that will start conversation rolling at my Christmas party—a cake that will be a true conversation-piece."

I turned to go, wishing I might have made bold to ask this man and this woman their respective personal histories. And yet, it was enough to know that, whatever lay behind them, they had found a place in America where they were indisputably, as a friend of mine puts it, "adding to the innocent gayety of our Nation."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Youth And Age In War

IT IS NO kindness to young men to postpone their military training. For it has been shown beyond any doubt that men between 18 and 21 have the very qualities which are most needed in modern warfare. It is certain therefore that Congress will soon have to lower the age limit, even if it did not do so at once. In the meantime the exempted young men will have lost precious time for making themselves fit, and ready to do well, what they are certain to be called upon to do anyway. The country has been deprived of their invaluable services and they have lost the opportunity to rise quickly from being raw recruits to filling posts of command.

LIPPMANN

In the meantime, their places will have to be filled by older men—men skilled in industry and men with the responsibilities of a family and with commitments that are important to their communities.

THE OBJECTIONS to the lower age limit were based, of course, on the feeling that those who are too young to vote and enjoy the full privileges of a citizen should not be called upon to pay the full price of citizenship. But this objection falls to the ground, when we remember that we have accepted eagerly volunteers who are under 21. This is the proof that the younger men are needed by their country, and the governing principle, where the life of the Nation is involved, is that whatever the country needs in each man's obligation.

As a practical matter, the objection to the lower age limit arises from the fact that in the past generation we have been taught by false teachers to prolong unreasonably the period of adolescence and of immaturity. We treat the young as children much too long after they have outgrown childhood, and we treat them as "youths," as "our boys" and "our girls," long beyond the period when our forefathers would have regarded them as men and women.

During the past 30 years there has been a marked tendency for the age of graduation from schools and colleges to rise, and thus to shorten the period when men in the full possession of their faculties are also fully adult and active members of the community. Among the many radical faults of our educational system, there must be placed high in the list a tremendous waste of time in preparing men and women to go out into the world. If as now seems certain, the necessities of the war will compel our educators to compress and thus shorten the time spent in schools and undergraduate colleges, it will be a permanent good.

IT HAS LONG been evident that much of the strength of our enemies comes from the fact that, being revolutionary governments, younger men have risen to the top much sooner than they are able to rise in the settled and conservative nations. This is one of the important reasons why they show greater initiative, inventiveness, and boldness in the conduct of war, and it is well worth remembering that the great military machines of modern history—that of Napoleon, that of Hitler, and that of Stalin—have been forged and have been led by men who could not have come to power by the ordinary rules of seniority and promotion.

That is why the conservative powers—in this war as in all great wars of the past—lose the first campaigns. For only under the shock of defeat and overwhelming peril does the thick, static crust of bureaucracy and vested interest crack, and allow the dynamic leaders to rise.

THEREFORE, along with a recognition that the younger men are needed in the Army, the Navy, and air force, we should promptly take the lesson to heart and begin to get ready to apply it in the higher posts of command and in the administration of the Government. No one, I trust, will regard this as a foolish cry against "the old men" as such. They too have indispensable functions to perform.

But it is a plea to put ourselves in the state of mind where we search eagerly for men in their thirties and forties to do the leading and the driving, the initiating and the inventing, in those higher posts where now, because of their greater eminence and established reputations, we find men in their fifties and sixties. This applies not only to the armed forces and to the Government but no less to corporations and to labor unions. It is necessary foresight, admirably exemplified by the way in which Secretary Stimson in his ripe wisdom has surrounded himself by younger men of maturity and high quality.

The vigor of the whole war effort will depend in very large degree upon how rapidly and how generously the older men learn to select and promote and season, and finally to give way to, the men who, because they are younger, have greater reserves of energy.

THIS SHOULD not mean that the older men who have distinguished themselves should be retired and neglected. Far from it. Just as we waste precious time being boys and girls when we should be men and women, so we are fantastically wasteful of the experience of age. It is one of the worst defects of our political system that we never know what to do with ex-Presidents, with ex-Cabinet officers, and with men of extraordinary power like Wendell Willkie, or Al Smith before him, or Theodore Roosevelt before him.

For wisdom, being the result of experience upon the intelligent, comes in later life, and is indispensable in counselling, advising, and judging. The country has recognized this in its instant approval of the membership of the board of inquiry into the Pearl Harbor affair, and it will hope that the principle adopted here may become general: namely that as the younger men are promoted to the posts where initiative, resourcefulness, and intense energy are required, the invaluable older men,—those who have gained wisdom, but no longer have their fullest energies,—will be kept as the active counsellors in the making of policy.

IN SO FAR as this balance of youth and age is achieved, a free people like ourselves can match its enemies where they are strong, and surpass its enemies where they are weakest. For the deadly weakness of our enemies is that while they have unleashed terrific energy, they are utterly without wisdom. It is their lack of wisdom which has made it impossible for them to reap the fruits of their victories, and has at last raised the world against them.

Job-Finding Services Merged

President Roosevelt yesterday announced consolidation of the country's 50 State and Territorial employment services with the United States Employment Service in order to speed the flow of workers into war industry.

The President told his press conference the move was designed to bring about in the industrial recruiting field a "complete responsiveness to the demands of national defense and speedy, uniform, effective action to meet rapidly changing needs."

He said he had wired the State Governors to transfer personnel and records of their employment services to the Federal organization.

"Inasmuch as the Federal Government is already practically 100 per cent of the cost of operation and the State personnel has been recruited on a merit basis," his telegram pointed out, "there will be no difficulty in transferring State employes into the Federal service."

Meanwhile the President told reporters that he did not expect to call a war conference of the State Governors in the Capital because such complete cooperation and understanding already exist between the Federal and State governments that such a meeting would be waste motion.

Mr. Roosevelt added that he had received a telegram from a committee of the Conference of Governors and another body representing local as well as State governments outlining a six-point program of war-time cooperation with the Federal Government.

The program includes pledges to postpone non-military public works until after the war, maintenance of essential public services in good condition, with simplified specifications and cooperative purchasing, and accumulation of reserves and retirement of debt with a view to financing public works which would aid in post-war economic adjustment.

Life In Wartime

By J. B. Priestley

Cheerful Folk Win

London (By Wireless)

DURING THE PERIOD when British fared her severest trials I used to talk every week on the air to about 15 million people. Thousands of them wrote to me, often discussing their personal problems. In addition, almost everywhere and at all times, I would find people coming up to me to talk about the war and their particular difficulties.

I mention these facts because they explain why I am venturing to offer you some advice on how to live in wartime. I am not an expert on the subject, because it isn't a subject on which anybody could be an expert. But at least I have a great deal more than my own personal experience and views to support me and I do write out of wide knowledge.

Now, right off, don't imagine it is possible to escape from war. I do not mean by that any escape in the ordinary physical sense. I mean it is foolish to imagine you can pretend the war is not with us. It is equally foolish to regard the war as a kind of meaningless interruption of your ordinary life. If you do that every new restriction and every necessary curtailment in expenditure will be a maddening irritation. Besides, it is our duty now to do all we can for the democratic side and we cannot do this if we try to reject the whole conflict.

BUT THOUGH we must do all we can, this does not mean that we must try to do more than we can. We must concentrate entirely on our own jobs. Nobody has asked us to plan the high strategy for our naval, military and air forces, and we can easily waste a good deal of time and energy discussing and worrying about matters we do not really understand.

When we feel we can think and talk constructively about war affairs, then we shouldn't be afraid to do so. But this is a very different thing from ceaseless wondering and worrying, from craving for news as if news was a kind of drug, from keeping minds idly busy churning each item of war information. We do no good and may do much harm by turning ourselves into war maniacs. Our first real task is to be as useful as possible to our great united war effort, which is preserving our democratic way of life from total destruction.

It amounts to this then. We must regard the war neither as a meaningless interruption for which we accept no responsibility nor as the whole of our lives. It should be regarded as a first call on our time and energy, and neither more nor less than that. There are some men and women, as you have probably discovered already, who would make the war an excuse for shutting down almost every unpaid-for activity. There is a kind of war puritan, and though I do not doubt the good intentions of these people, I still consider them largely a nuisance.

WHAT'S WRONG with ceaseless wondering and worrying is that they demand energy and produce nothing in return but bad nerves. And this is just as much a war of nerves and morale as of supplies and machines and trained men. The cheerful folk—and we know where they are—will win in the end. Not, you will notice, the indifferent or complacent folk, but the ones who work and fight hard but at the same time still find something to grin about.

Though you will inevitably find sudden, swift changes taking place in your mode of life, don't imagine you have said goodby forever to everything but war-making and war-enduring. More of ordinary life remains, even after the most drastic measures of a government compelled to fight a total war, than you would imagine at first. And it's important that what does remain should have a fine, satisfying quality. Children, friends, good talk, books, music and the rest must be allowed to work their old magic, and you will probably discover that they are more magical than ever.

Say goodby to most of the luxuries of peacetime and most of the conventional elaborations of life. Total war soon immensely simplifies our existence. We soon discover we can easily dispense with most things that we thought before absolutely necessary to our existence. Many of them we will never want back. But we must take care not to overdo it and not to exile ourselves from all the graces of life and from the very things that give us both courage and consolation.

More, dreariness is nearly as bad as hysteria. I once suggested as a motto for our people in wartime: "Hard work and high jinks." The liveliest young men I have ever known are the magnificent youngsters who pilot our Spitfires and Hurricanes and the fine new pursuit planes you have sent us. Nobody could accuse these young men of not doing their duty, but they have never allowed their grim responsibilities to get them down. They face life—and death—with a grin. And if they can do it, then we at least can try.

Chilean Elections

By Carlos D. Nagel

Popular Front Faces Test

POLITICAL LEADERS of both of the Americas look with unconcealed interest at political developments in Chile. Often called the only nation of this hemisphere with a regular front government, that country is facing presidential elections.

Chile will now have an opportunity to answer to the Americas the often expressed belief that totalitarian interests are strong there. This in spite of the fact that a leftist government has been ruling since 1938 when Don Pedro Aguirre Cerda won one of the closest presidential elections ever fought in the Americas. His opponents, the rightists, as the term claimed rather naively, that their candidate Gustavo Ross lost all because of over-confidence in his strength. The leftists considered the election of their candidate a true proof of rampant democracy and a vindication of the frequently expressed belief that the people of Chile were not politically mature.

Now the president has died. His death after a short illness was utterly unexpected; it was a shock felt all the stronger because of previous and numerous rumors that the president was not really ill but in need of rest, that his temporary retirement was in obedience to a clever political move; even his private life and habits were flippantly mentioned as possible reasons for his vacation from executive duties.

THIS unforeseen contingency, the sudden disappearance of Don Pedro Aguirre Cerda, submits Chile to the crucial political test in its comparatively short life as a democracy maintained by the people and for the people. It will be a trial in which the political adultness of the so-called middle and lower class of the nation will be tested. It will give the conservatives or rightists a chance to present a program that may reveal to what extent they are willing to play ball with the forces that have been ruling and have proved to be a group representing a vital section of the country, very much able to govern. To the rest of the Americas the inhabitants of Chile will have a chance to show their respect for the constitution of the nation. No matter how leftist they may be, they will have an opportunity to prove that their adherence to numerous pacts and treaties tending to protect the democracies of the Americas in the present time of peril are not just empty gestures but based on democratic convictions.

To the Government of the United States, a true friend of that nation, the coming elections have much importance and significance. This Nation and its Chief Magistrate have considered Chile one of the most advanced countries in the Americas, politically and otherwise. Its democratic make-up is a bastion of the political ideals of this hemisphere, confronting the totalitarian interests of Europe of today. Failure of Chile to live up to its reputation in the elections to come so soon will signify a black eye to the democracies of the Americas.

The Rightists as well as the Leftists of Chile, about to face each other, have within their files a minority which might be called the "black sheep" of the family. The Rightists probably will have working for them behind the scene what could be described as Axis admirers. The Popular Front has a properly recognized, small but well organized Communistic Party. However, no Communist Party leader would be subject to call as presidential candidate since Communist power in the Leftist Party is insignificant. The fact that among the conservatives those few sympathizing with totalitarians keep their own counsel is proof that only financial aid may be accepted from Axis agents eager to create disturbances.

ALTHOUGH CHILE has been a republic for 131 years, the country has been mentioned here as a nation with a "comparatively short life as a democracy maintained by the people and for the the people."

Chile was ruled for over 100 years by oligarchs, rich landowners who inherited together with vast haciendas and fundos the right to govern as deputies, senators, members of the cabinet and presidents. They were educated for such careers while the lower classes of the nation had little or no education of any kind. It cannot be denied, however, that such tutorship fitted a small, new and distant country of the orb during a part of the last century. It was obvious, though, that given the excellent racial composition of the country, such a condition could not prevail in the present century. Education and above all, intense love for the home country, developed civic pride and ambition in the less favored classes.

IT WAS the famous Leon de Tarapaca—the lion of the province of Tarapaca—Don Arturo Alessandri Palma, a man of the middle class, who loved and knew intimately the people of Chile, who first recognized the right of the common people to a voice in the government. He was the first president of Chile elected by the popular forces in 1920 by what today is called the leftist group, and as such Alessandri developed social laws in Chile which still are considered highly advanced. He took from the rightists the ruling patrimony these had been inheriting for a century and gave it to those who represented the majority in the nation.

For four years Alessandri governed, continuously confronted with difficulties and obstacles thrown in his path by politicos of the old school, masters in the tricks of the trade whom he knew well since he had grown up politically among them.

The subsequent events, a series of disturbances and changes of governments, coup d'etats, etc., utterly unlike the previous tranquil political life of Chile, could be compared to the reaction suffered by an anemic who suddenly receives a strong blood transfusion. Politically anemic, the country suffered a violent reaction from new forces steering the nation into unexplored channels.

Alessandri left the country, only to return for a short era of government in 1925. His second absence marked a period of readjustments characterized by frequent political disorders. During these seven years, the seven black years of political life in Chile, a number of names appear as short-lived leaders of the nation: Col. Ibanez del Campo, a man with totalitarian inclinations, a good soldier but a poor statesman; Marmaduque Grove, who during his long military career was very much of a Prussian-style officer only to become an extreme socialist in politics; Carlos Davila, once an outstanding Chilean ambassador to Washington but politically rather indigenent and called by his enemies "Davilista" for his supposed self-centered inclinations, and a few others.

IN ORDER to present a clear picture of the political line-up at present taking place in Chile, it is not only necessary to mention the above personalities since some of them are featured as possible candidates, but it is paramount to take up again the career of Arturo Alessandri since he is today not only a very possible candidate, but also the man who, after the seven years mentioned, again received the Presidency by an enormous majority of votes.

In fact "Don Arturo" served a full term as President from 1932 to 1938. He was brought back to power by a people tired of ineptness, utterly without guidance, living in a bankrupt nation and going through the most appalling depression. They needed a man like The Lion of Tarapaca, an expert in government, a man who had first made them visualize political freedom and furthermore a man who, in spite of his years, had the energy characterized by his by-name. It must be remembered that this unique individual is today no less than 73 years old but looks 15 years younger. He is powerfully built and correctly compared by John Gunther in "Inside Latin-America" to the late French Foreign Minister Aristide Briand. Don Arturo does not smoke and hardly touched a drink, he is one of the most effective public speakers Chile has ever known.

It seems, however, that the services of this valuable man are lost to Chile if the leftists should win the presidential election about to take place. During his 1932-38 government he became more and more identified with the rightists of Chile; his cabinet members he often selected among staunch conservatives who may have been well prepared political figures but represented the oligarchy, anathema to the fast developing Popular Front. What divorced him completely from his beloved people was the incorporation into his government of Gustavo Ross, the man he backed later as rightist candidate against the leftist Pedro Aguirre Cerda.

Gustavo Ross Santa Maria, an immensely able financier and for a long term Minister of Finance of Chile under the last Alessandri Government, was obviously no lover of the common people. He was no politician. Enormously wealthy, he was supposed to keep the greatest part of his fortune in foreign countries which in itself, to the popular mind, was fatal for a candidate to the presidency.

Alessandri's close association with this man cost him the cooperation of the strong Radical party. This party became, from a mild Leftist entity, the leader of the opposition during Alessandri's last government and identified itself with what came to be the Popular Front, the winner of the last election that placed the late President Pedro Aguirre Cerda in as head of the government.

This Radical Party cooperated wholeheartedly during the two years of leadership of Aguirre Cerda and was instrumental in furnishing him with the necessary majority the Popular Front lacked in the Chambers of Deputies and the Senate when the Leftists took over the nation.

Today, the Popular Front of Chile, about to face its contender for power, has a majority of 6 votes in the Senate and over 20 in the Chamber of Deputies. The Senate is composed of a total of 45 members, whereas the Chamber of Deputies has 146, representing each one of the 9 provincial groups and departments. Incidentally, the much-commented upon Chilean Nazis have today in the Chilean Congress exactly one representative who refuses to be called such.

Although the Rightist coalition, at the time this article goes to press, has presented no candidates for primaries, the following may be considered as very probable:

Arturo Alessandri Palma, already twice President of the republic and several times senator. His 73 years of age should be no obstacle for his candidacy.

Senator Eduardo Cruz Coke, conservative, 43 years old and an outstanding personality. He was once minister of public health and has specialized in social laws related with preventive medicine. As a possible candidate, the death of the President found him here in the States and in Washington.

Jorje Matte Gormaz, liberal, 65 years old, twice a deputy, organizer of the Chilean air forces, several times minister of foreign relations. President of the Chilean commission to the Lima conference.

Senator Joe Maza, representative of the rich provinces of Valdivia and Chile, two regions of Chile strongly populated with former German immigrants. He has been several times member of cabinets under Alessandri.

Each one of these conservative personalities is very pro inter-American in the present world struggle and could not be identified with any totalitarian group.

The young popular front of Chile has seven possible candidates, their average age being 48 years.

Marcial Mora, former president of the Central Bank of Chile, former minister of finance and foreign relations under Pedro Aguirre Cerda.

Florencio Duran, president of the Senate and strong political leader in the radical party.

Luis Alamos Barros, former senator and member of the cabinet in several occasions.

Hector Araucibia Lazo, former senator and former cabinet member, presently director of the Chilean Nitrate Corporation as government member. Known as the "Jim Farley of Chile" because of his management of the second campaign of Alessandri.

Gabriel Gonzalez, at present minister of Chile in France, former member of the Chamber of Deputies and former president of that House. Former president of the radical party and today president of the popular front.

Of those mentioned, the candidacy of Juan Antonio Rios is probably assured, according to recent dispatches. His possibilities to gain the Presidency are excellent, since he not only has the cooperation of the strong Radical party, but even the sympathies of some Rightist groups.

The very capable Ambassador of Chile in the United States, Don Rudolfo Michels, although a powerful figure in Chilean leftist circles and a leader of the Radical Party, has made emphatic statements to his friends that he does not wish to be identified with the Presidential election. It is very probable that his party considers his work here as of the utmost importance. He is a man difficult to replace in a vital position.

The very best answer to expectations of political disorders in Chile during the Presidenital elections is a study of the possible candidates mentioned above, both of the rightest and leftist parties of the nation. There are no strong-arm men among them; there are no army men among them. All of them are outstanding political figures and each one is a guaranty of political security and safe democratic regime in Chile.

Latin Navies For Convoys

Joint Action Seen

Employment of North and South American navies in a hemispheric convoy system to insure deliveries of strategic materials between the Americas is expected to be discussed, and possibly ratified, at the conference of foreign ministers in Rio de Janeiro.

The convoy question, diplomatic and maritime officials said, would be raised under the general study of protection of the Western Hemisphere at the January 15 meeting.

Eleven Latin-American nations having navies, ranging from the larger ones of Argentina, Brazil and Chile to those of smaller nations having only gunboats, would shoulder convoy duties with the United States.

Release of suggestions made by various Latin-American governments for the conference agenda showed that two nations—Chile and Venezuela—proposed that the subject of protecting American merchant shipping be brought up.

Chile, which already is using convoys between ports on its long South Pacific coastline, proposed that the foreign ministers authorize "security measures for the protection of vessels engaged in Inter-American commerce against attack from hostile forces."

Venezuela, pointing to the "present systematic destruction of merchant vessels," proposed the topic of "organization and coordination of Inter-American Maritime services."

Ten of the 21 American Republics have declared war, two have severed diplomatic relations with the Axis and the rest have pledged their adherence to Inter-American solidarity.

Protection is needed, trade experts said, for the vast amounts of strategic minerals shipped to itiis country from Chile and Bolivia, bauxite from Dutch Guiana that is brought here for conversion into aluminum and various other materials shipped to the United States from South and Central American nations.

They also pointed to the oil, finished defense materials, machinery and lend-lease articles that this country has agreed to send Latin-American countries to aid them in bolstering their defenses.

Zog Repudiates War Declaration Of Albania

London, Dec. 19 (AP).—King Zog, exiled ruler of Albania, repudiated today a declaration of war on the United States by the Italian puppet government at Tirana.

He appealed to all Albanians in the United States to reform world war battalions and rally to the Allied cause.

Zog, deprived of his throne by the Italian invasion of 1939, addressed a letter to President Roosevelt condemning the "treacherous attack" by the Japanese on Pearl Harbor and expressing deepest sympathy for the United States as well as confidence in an Allied victory.

"The so-called Albanian government in Tirana has no liberty of action, has no foreign ministry or diplomatic representation outside of the country and is acting under duress of the Italian Fascist occupation," he wrote.

He added that a state of war still exists between the legal Albanian government and Italy.

Fair Enough

An Entire Nation Was Off Guard

YES, THEY apparently were caught with their hands in their pockets at Pearl Harbor, with a known thug and a notorious sneak-puncher, at that, lurking near, but weren't we all.

PEGLER

Our present view of the campaign to remilitarize dates only from May, 1940, and even our arguments on that phase of the problem are confused, for there were very few among the isolationists who opposed this program. Those few, incidentally, and lest we forget, were mainly Communists and Nazis, not Americans. Most of the patriotic Americans who were isolationists up to that hour of war believed in militarizing the country but opposed President Roosevelt's foreign policy which they thought provocative and dangerous. They did not counsel unarmed surrender to anyone. They were for armed and mighty isolation.

But, before May, 1940, and especially before Hitler started this war deliberately and wantonly and in violation of every assurance that he could give to lull the suspicions of trusting, peaceful people, we all were guilty and the entire Nation was still off guard when Japan struck.

Not to prettify the case, we had been for a dozen years the drunkenest people on earth. Gin was our obsession, money and luxury and pleasure were our consuming popular interests and we made gods of trashy individuals who photographed well in the movies or shocked us with obscene books which had no other appeal but filth. We even made a god of Al Capone, who pandered to our vices and sneered at our hypocritical pretense of respectability.

FOR MANY YEARS, the Protestant clergy was concerned with one issue to the almost total neglect of the mission of religion and that was prohibition which was a constant provocation to drink and a source of crime and political corruption. In New York, New Jersey, Albany, Chicago and Boston political corruption thrived so monstrously under Catholic bosses as to impair the people's confidence in the American way of government and, finally, as to evoke the famous but too little read and almost unheeded open letter to a boss by Father Lord, S. J., which recognized this enormity as a special concern of the members of the church. Irreligious Jews abandoned their faith and a police commissioner of New York who served during the era of wonderful nonsense observed that the young Jewish criminals were ashamed of the old-fashioned piety of their old-country parents and spat at them when the old people came to weep over them in jail.

We were not thinking of our liberties then or the duties of citizenship or any need to be prepared to fight a mad enemy. Profits, high wages, speculation and liquor were our interests and, in New York, at least, the papers assigned specialists to glamorize people who were tearing up money in dives run openly by criminals under political protection. In one of our cities, the mayor collected a dollar a barrel from the bootleggers for permitting them to dig in the public streets and lay a pipeline from their brewery to the buffet and nobody even thought of sending him to prison.

LONG AGO, Woodrow Wilson, a dying man, preached a warning that if we rejected the League of Nations this country would have to go armed to the teeth forever in a world of hungry and welfish predators. We rejected the League and refused to arm even after travelers from Europe brought back descriptions of the rising might of the Fuehrer's dictatorship and of a Russian army of ten million men. We were too busy having a good time until the crash of 1929, after which we were too busy with a number of other interests, all selfish or political.

At all events, none recognized any danger until Hitler made his war and even then few Americans were willing to admit that he might one day attack us. Or if it was possible, then it would be up to "the Government," that rich, impersonal power in Washington, and not up to the individual to get us out of the jam, the same "Government" which Congressmen and Senators preyed upon for cash gifts to their constituencies so that they could be re-elected.

Only since May, 1940, have any appreciable number realized that Woodrow Wilson was right and, as a Nation, we were no more alert when the blow fell than the commanders at Pearl Harbor.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After Vagabonding About the World, Ignoring Women, Man Settles to One Girl, Only to Have 'Gigolo' Steal Her; How Cure Resulting Cynicism?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I do not ask for pity or flattery, but just enlightenment. I appreciate frankness, even when it hurts. I am a man, 30 years of age. I appear to be older, because of past experiences that have given me a preoccupied manner. I come from a family that was very active in our community. My father was anxious to give me a good education, so he sent me to a private school.

During the summer vacation before I was to enter college, my father (who was attorney for one of the major oil companies) arranged a trip for me on one of the company ships. I deserted at the first port of call, which happened to be in a foreign land. I proceeded to "vagabond" my way about the world for several years, working here and there, until I was 25. Having overcome the desire to roam, I returned to this country, secured a favorable position and resumed my studies.

I was getting private instruction six nights a week, and was so self centered that I did not notice women at all. After a year of this monastic grind, my nerves cracked and my doctor advised me to stop school entirely for a while. Then I started going out with girls. I met one girl who was very ambitious, and as we had much in common, we went together for about 18 months. I returned to my studies, found a better position and was making substantial friends. I had the utmost faith in her,—and then the crash came. She fell for a "smoothie"; in fact, a passing attraction for him; and when their little affair was over, she wanted to come back to me. But I had lost all feeling for her.

Now, my main problem is that I have acquired a mean distrust toward all women. I have plenty of opportunities to go out with other girls, and I do go out occasionally. But when I am in the company of a girl, I do and say things that give her a wrong impression of my real self. I do it just for devilment. But by the time I realize my mistake, it is too late to undo the damage. I know that I am in the wrong, but it just seems impossible for me to be my old self again. I would much appreciate your opinions and advice. Sincerely, S. L. D.

Distrust of Others Is Self-Condemnation

DEAR S. L. D.: Your attitude of "mean distrust" toward all women is, actually, an inverted form of self distrust. Your self esteem and self assurance undoubtedly took a terrific beating when a "gigolo" walked off with your first and only "best girl." And it is possible that, prior to that, you were far too condescendingly smug in your dealings with women. You probably thought you were doing a girl a real favor in paying her any attention at all.

I daresay if you had been a charmingly considerate, consistently appreciative beau of the girl the "gigolo" stole, she wouldn't have given him a minute's serious thought. I suspect it was the contrast between his beautifully mannered court and your bumpkin negligence that proved her undoing. Although it could be, of course, that she merely "made believe" to be captivated by him, in the hope of jarring you out of you self engrossment and provoking a declaration of serious intent.

In any event, the fact that you "lost all feeling for her," as a result of her transient indifference to you, proves that you never really cared for her. What your "faith" in her amounted to, was the conceited notion that she would always be there at your feet, burning incense in your honor. And when she gave the lie to this vain conviction, you turned against her in wounded pride, and have since been vicariously continuing your quarrel with her, by striking out in hostile mood at every other girl you meet.

No doubt your defiant conduct is more or less unconsciously directed, too, at all the "smoothies" in the world,—and particularly at the guy who stole your girl. Thus, your latterday habit of saying and doing things,— supposedly "just for devilment,"—that give women a "wrong impression of your real self," probably stems from a childish desire to play like you are a rakehell, too. And it appears that your performance in that role is so very poor, so unconvincing and merely boorish, that it hurts no one but yourself. None is "taken in" by it. No hearts are being smashed in consequence. You are simply being avoided as a "party headache."

Your lack of social orientation is so great, as a result of years of egocentric living, that you obviously need a "cram course" of education in the techniques and fundamental principles of emotionally mature behavior. In short, you are a ripe subject for psychological—or, perhaps better, psychiatric—counselling. The fact that your nerves "cracked," some time back, is prophetic of what will happen again—and again and again, under any real pressure—unless and until you get to the bottom of your "queer duck" habits and root them out, once and for all. Your essential problem probably stems back to parental mismanagement of your early life—probably to too much pampering with too much bossing, and to some very deep seated, disturbing reactions to your father's personality in those bygone years. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Family Should Aid in Christmas Decorating

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

DECORATING the house for Christmas is half the fun of the great day. And the more the merrier—that's the rule as far as letting the family in on the fun is concerned. Here are some ideas for putting eager hands to work getting ready for the great day.

CHRISTMAS TREE LAMP SHADES—Make these in cone shape to fit right over an ordinary shade. Use metalic foil paper if available—otherwise use heavy red or green paper. You can cut holes in star, ball and cone shape and let the light shine through. Or you can hang shiny ornaments on these lamp trees.

OLD-TIME HOME-MADE ORNAMENTS—They're always fun to make . . . necklaces of cranberries, popcorn, paper chains, cookies in Christmas tree shapes, gilded walnuts, tarlatan stockings, cornucopias made of colored paper and covered with lace paper dollies.

FESTIVE CANDLES—Besides the many holiday design candles, there are lots of ideas for giving plain candles a rakish air. Giant candles are lovely when festooned with glass Christmas balls and evergreens. For ordinary sized candles, use bright toy horns for holders.

WALL TREES—For over the mantel, flat wall trees can be made of lace paper dollies, lace net curtains, evergreen boughs or metalic paper.

TREE FANTASIES—Cover a wire Christmas tree frame with white tarlatan or white lace curtain net, shirred top and bottom. Trim with dozens of striped candy canes, or with colored Christmas stockings or with old-time glass ornaments. Or cover a wire tree with holly and trim with holly berry clusters.

CHRISTMAS BOUQUETS—To hang on doors, above mantels, from chandeliers, against walls . . . old musical instruments tied with ribbons and evergreens . . . fancy gift boxes tied on different length ribbon and looped together with a big bow . . . bells and toy drums and toy horns tied with striped ribbon and leaves . . . a huge stocking made of white or red oilcloth, decorated with Christmas stickers and tied at the top with ribbon and holly.

Plastics in Decoration

Plastics is a term used to determ used to describe modern laboratory produced materials such as lucite, plexiglas, bakelite and many other man-made substances. Often these are synthetic resins. They are most frequently molded though some of them can be sawed, cut, turned or carved.

Christmas Furs

A HUSBAND who is at his wits end trying to select a kolinsky fur scarf for his wife asks these questions:

"My wife is between a blond and a brunette and her taste in furs runs to Alaska seals. Should she have the lighter or darker kolinsky?

"Is the lighter mink dyed or the darker sable dyed more popular?

"What general points should one look for in selecting a kolinsky scarf?"

Fur buyers suggest that the lighter kolinsky is better for the woman who tends to a fair complexion. It is also nearer the shade of Alaska seal. The darker sable shade, a very rich brown, almost a black, is more appropriate for the pronounced brunette or olive complexion.

The lighter kolinsky is more popular than the dark among purchasers. Preference is more a matter of personal coloring and taste.

In general, first distinguish between the two types of kolinsky available—the Chinese and the Russian. The Russian is silkier and finer than the Chinese, which is flatter, coarser, cheaper and more wiry. Many of the Chinese type are sold, but they are not as luxurious or soft feeling as the Russian.

Quality is more important than size in selecting a kolinsky fur. The guard hairs should be long because the fur is naturally made up of short hairs. Furs that are not fresh have a singed, curly look about the top hair.

Size does not necessarily indicate quality. As a rule, the larger the fur, the more costly it will be. In the Chinese variety, there are larger skins available at a lower price. But they will not have the quality of a smaller Russian piece at the same price.

These rules do not apply to the selecting of every type of fur scarf, however. While color is not so important in a kolinsky scarf, it is a sign of quality in the silver fox scarf. The browner the skin, the less it is worth. The more silver hairs there are, the better the skin.

In both baum marten and mink scarfs, the natural shade is worth twice as much as the blended fur. The latter may not be inferior in quality, but the color is not good. Blended furs are cheaper because they can't be used in the natural shade.

When buying any of these four furs, watch for two general points: Depth of fur and long silky guard hairs. Any fur should be as full as obtainable, and shorter haired furs must have longer guard hairs.

Right Evening Bag

A YOUNG girl in her early 20's has been given the opportunity of selecting her own Christmas gift. She writes, "I have decided upon an evening bag. What style and size shall I choose for general use, such as dances and parties?"

If you are the type who wants to tuck your evening bag into the boy friend's pocket, then by all means select the tiny square variety. But handbag buyers say they have few calls for this type anymore. Most girls now prefer the larger pouch type of bag which can be left with the maid in the powder room and retrieved easily.

Of these pouch styles, the gold hand crocheted bags that do not tarnish are the smartest. Not so strictly for evening use are the perfectly plain satin bags, envelope style with zipper catch. Very full pouchy bags are preferred, with brocade and gold kid especially liked. More expensive are the beaded bags with assorted color stones in the frames.

Blouse or Sweater?

A BUSY young woman working in defense is planning to wear suits most of the time from now and into spring. She asks which will be most popular with suit skirts—sweaters or blouses?

During fall and winter, sweaters and blouses are equally popular. Going into spring, however, sweaters become fewer because they are uncomfortable with the approach of humid Washington summer. For this reason the classic convertible collar blouse is a more practical purchase.

It's About Time

IT'S ABOUT TIME to use for holiday decoration. Thumb-tack pieces of green or red ribbon to wall as sketched. Fasten cards to ribbon with clips or simply hang folded greetings over ribbon

Vitamin Waste Is Worse Than Wasting Food

By Ida Jean Kain

WASTE OF FOOD is rapidly coming to be frowned upon as a national offense. But we should face the fact that real waste means more than throwing away food that is edible. It is even more wasteful to throw away the elements a food should contribute toward health and efficiency.

For many an American homemaker the first step toward getting the full value out of food is revision of the menu planning. It is past time we stopped dolling up a dish at the expense of its vitamin content. There are some foods which should not be cooked. Grapefruit topped with honey and broiled is delicious, but it contains far less vitamin C than when left in its natural state.

Home makers can't seem to let tomatoes alone. We grill them, stuff them, scallop them, and let the canned variety simmer away. Next to the citrus fruits, tomatoes are the richest source of vitamin C, which is extremely perishable. It may be lost through heating, exposure to air, or even through storage in a warm place.

Vitamin Salad

Given proper care, many foods furnish small but valuable amounts of vitamin C. Cabbage is a good economical source. Don't always cook the cabbage. Serve it frequently as cole slaw and, to add vitamins, try mixing with it slivers of carrots and diced green peppers. For a salad that is delicous and different, serve grated raw carrots and raisins.

Vitamin C is also contained in appreciable amounts in bananas, apples, potatoes, and green leafy vegetables. Bananas and apples are more valuable raw. The surest way to keep the vitamins in potatoes is to boil or bake them in their jackets.

In addition to vitamin C, the green leafy vegetables furnish vitamin A and the vitamin B complex. You couldn't do better than to give your family two green leafy vegetables daily, one raw and the other cooked. Since the water soluble vitamins are in the vegetable water, every drop of it should be utilized.

Parsley Nibbler

Parsley and watercress are more than decorations—even though Americans don't seem to realize it. At a luncheon the other day a couple of inquisitive dietitians kept tab and discovered that only 1 woman out of 20 ate her parsley. It was wasted by all the others.

It is very poor economy to use plain white flour which supplies only starch and a poor quality of protein. In times like these, when steady nerves and stamina count for so much, every home maker should switch to the enriched white flour or the 100 per cent whole grain flour which supplies the morale vitamins.

What Men Think Of Women's Styles

By Billy Conn

This is one of a series on what men in public life think of women's fashions.

I REALLY haven't had much time to pay attention to girl's clothes. I've been busy, making money, meeting some one named Joe Louis, and trying to get ready to meet some one named Joe Louis again. But, I guess these women's fashions are O. K. That is except those dizzy hats and the shoes some of them wear.

• • • •

Some of women's clothes are really out of line, but those hats are the worst things. I wouldn't wear a boxing glove for a hat, but some girls do. (Maybe I should have last June.) Women's hair is downright pretty as it is and they've got so much of it that they couldn't catch colds if they didn't wear hats, the way us fellows would if we didn't have hats to plank down on our heads —especially when it gets cold in Pittsburgh, where I live. I don't see why women wear hats anyway, much less those things they do appear in.

I THINK most of their shoes are too high, and when shoes are too high—you know, with that heel about a foot high, or so it seems—the ankle looks too skinny. I don't like big round fat ankles, but I don't like 'em looking like matchsticks.

The first time I got to know about women's clothes was when I married Mary Louise. Then I found out what they cost and I found out that you had to like them or else she'd buy some ones I might like better, but keep the others, which made it a double crash on the purse. But her clothes are pips. I think plaid looks swell on any woman, and I like any color as long as it's red. And particularly in sports clothes.

• • • •

MOST women look swell in evening dress, just because of the lights and the fact that it's a party or the theater or something like that. It's the idea more than the dress, I believe, although that thought's liable to get me in a jam. Some evening dresses are pretty nice, if they're lacy and frilly and with swoopy skirts. But most girls look too much like China dolls when they're dressed in evening dresses.

But what the hell! They're going to dress up the slightest chance you give 'em. And I'm for giving 'em every chance.

Exciting Games For New Year's

USHER in the New Year with something extra-special in the way of parties!

Everybody wants to know: "What does the New Year hold for me? Will I be richer, poorer? will romance come into my life?" So satisfy their curiosity with a mad and merry fortune game, "Written in the Stars."

Your stars are gummed gold paper. You write a fortune on a slip of paper, then sandwich it between two stars—also adding a length of string—and stick stars together at the points only.

When all stars are finished, hang them up by their strings—where they'll make a tantalizing glitter!

Such hilarity as each guest picks his star! For of course you blindfold the fortune-seeker and turn him around three times to get him properly befuddled.

It's "Wedding Bells Will Ring" for Mary, the blushing sweetheart of Jack—and "Watch out for a Jealous Blonde" for killer-diller Bob. The more "bombshell" fortunes you've written the merrier!

Send 15 cents in coin for our booklet, "Games for Good Parties," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Sub-Deb Dance Held For Margaret Shumaker

Lead-off party on the long list of subdebutante festivities for the Christmas season was the dance at the Chevy Chase Club last night in honor of Margaret Blair Shumaker. Capt. and Mrs. Samuel Shumaker were hosts at the "even younger set" dance, feting their pretty daughter, who is now a junior at Madeira School.

Before the 10 o'clock dancing began, several of the guests entertained at dinners. Among them was Miss Elizabeth Huidekoper, whose party was held in the Edgevale Terrace home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald S. Huidekoper.

Guests at the dinner were the honoree of the party that followed, Margaret (Peggy) Shumaker, Lynn Wilkins, Mariana Kyle, Jeanie McBride, Eleanor Ong, Sally Place, Frances Barry, Cornelia Claiborne, Daisy Simmons, Ted Brawner, William McClure, Ned Murdock, Henry Dickie, James Birney, Jack Beatty, Robert Longyear, Peter Longyear, Marshall Diggs, jr., Dean Kraft and Donald Simmons.

Later in the evening Miss Shumaker received with her father and mother until the dancing to Sidney's Orchestra was well under way. A midnight supper was served on the glassed-in porch of the club.

Miss Shumaker topped her black net skirt, accented with a pink rose, with a long-torso bodice of pink satin and a single pink camelia in her hair. Her mother had chosen a square-necked frock of black lace with which she wore a corsage of orchids.

Among the close to 200 guests were Virginia Hutchison, Nancy McGuire, Priscilla Masten, Virginia Summerlin, Ursula Buckley, Susan Oulahan, Dorothy Guider, Patricia Baker, Emilie Jones, Ann Guthrie, Barbara Gableman, Laura Allen, Barbara Caldwell, Mary Mitchell, Louise Sanderson, Mary McLean Shepherd, Mary O'Brien, Nancy Trowbridge, Jane Smith, Peggy Nairne, Mary Frances Breeding, Peggy Adair, Nancy Mayo, Sue Quayle, Madge Erving, Mimi Griffen and Margaret Boteler.

Still others were Barbara Jones, Neville Watson, Laura Mae Norris, Alice Nicolson, Myra Noyes, Benair Mills, Sherry Parker, Louella Goodman, Katherine Keyser, Julia Bruce, Lisette Littlehale, Virginia Thurston, Dorothy Fellows, Francis Addison, Grove Smith, Courtland Herbst, Arthur Defenderfer, David Gaillard, Peter Gaillard, Dick Gordon, Robert Dunigan, John Wick, James Trimble, Edward Sacks, Paul Cromelin, Harry Larkin, James Quiggle and Barrett Prettyman.

Wife of Envoy Sponsors Bazaar Of Danish Wares

Mme. de Kauffmann, wife of the Danish Minister, will sponsor a bazaar of Danish articles at British War Relief headquarters Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, December 22, 23, 24. Proceeds of the sale, conducted for Free Denmark, will be turned over to the Danish Council in London, to help harass the Nazi invaders of Denmark and to speed the reestablishment of Denmark as a free and independent democratic nation.

Mme. de Kauffman has been in Washington since 1939, when the Minister was stationed here. Before the war she took an active part in the social affairs of the Capital's diplomatic set and became known as a charming hostess. Since Hitler overran her country, Mme. de Kauffman has devoted all her time to anti-Nazi activities.

Special guests at the bazaar on Monday afternoon will be Jean Hersholt and Miss Osa Massen, of Hollywood film colony. In private life Miss Massen is the wife of Allan Hersholt, son of Jean Hersholt.

The articles to be sold have been contributed by Washington's Danish residents and Americans of Danish descent. It includes fine silver articles by George Jensen, famous Danish silversmith, Copenhagen porcelain, Danish cookies like those served to callers at the White House and many other interesting Danish goods.

Miss Knipe Fetes Miss Tilghman, Bride-to-Be

Honoring Miss Mary Elizabeth Tilghman, whose marriage to Elliott Johnson Dent, jr., will take place on Monday in St. Matthews Cathedral, Miss Ellen Knipe was hostess at a luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham. Sharing honors with Miss Tilghman was Miss Dorothy Dyar.

Guests at the luncheon included Miss Catherine Tilghman, Miss Isabell Gilmore, Miss Imogen Ficklen, Mrs. Edward Betgen, Miss Rita Shea, Mrs. Francis M. Durrance, Mrs. Jack Porter, Miss Edith Pearson, Mrs. Alfred Moran, Mrs. Robert Heinl, Mrs. Robert Clifford, Mrs. Carl Biehl, Miss Virginia Pfeil, Mrs. James L. Knipe and Miss Lillian Willett.

A number of other parties are being planned in honor of Miss Tilghman and her fiance. Miss Lillian Willett will be hostess at a luncheon in her honor today and later Miss Imogen Ficklen will be hostess at a cocktail party to be given at the Washington Club. On Sunday Miss Rita Shea will be hostess at a cocktail party, and later Lieut. and Mrs. Sherman Farnham will be hosts at a supper for members of the bridal party. Col. and Mrs. Dent will be hosts at a wedding breakfast for members of the bridal party and out-of-town guests on Monday at the Army and Navy town club.

Egyptian Envoy, Wife Entertain

The Minister of Egypt and Mme. Hassan entertained informally at dinner last night in the Legation on Massachusetts Avenue. The ranking guests were the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun and the wife of the Minister of Australia, Mrs. Richard G. Casey.

Others present were the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. A. K. Helm, Dr. and Mrs. John Oliver LaGorce, Mr. and Mrs. Ian F. L. Elliot, Dr. and Mrs. Allan Scott Wolfe, Squadron Leader Murray G. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bell Wilber, Miss Irene Boyle, and Dr. Mounir Bahgat.

Miss Prescott, Ensign Tucker To Marry Soon

Hastily changing their plans for a large wedding "because of the war," Miss Ethel Prescott and Ensign Frederick Brichfield Tucker will be married shortly in Key West, Fla. Miss Prescott, who is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Forbes Prescott, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., makes her home with Mrs. Walter Leroy Scott, of Westminster, Md. She is now en route to Florida.

Ensign Tucker is the son of Mrs. H. F. Tucker, of this city. The couple were planning to be married in the chapel at Annapolis. Ensign Tucker, who was graduated from Annapolis, is with the submarine service. Miss Prescott was graduated from Tenacre and Dana Halls Schools and from Connecticut College for Women.

Her Engagement Announced Today

MISS RUTH QUINN

whose betrothal to Frederick Marsteller is made known by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry I. Quinn

Ruth Quinn Is Betrothed

Mr. and Mrs. Henry I. Quinn announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth, to Frederick Marsteller, son of Commander A. A. Marsteller, United States Navy Medical Corps, and Mrs. Marsteller.

As the date for the wedding has not yet been decided, Mr. and Mrs. Quinn have not planned a formal announcement party for their daughter, but will let their annual Christmas Day "at home" serve for that purpose also. For years, it has been customary for the Quinns to receive informally the morning of December 25 at their Rockwood Parkway home.

The bride-elect was graduated from Trinity College. More recently, she has been devoting some of her time to studying art. Mr. Marsteller was graduated from Washington and Lee University.

Mme. Yu Gives Luncheon, Tips On Chopsticks

Instructing her guests in the most effective use of chopsticks, Mme. Yu, wife of the Second Secretary of the Chinese Embassy, entertained at an informal luncheon at the embassy yesterday.

Most popular person at the party was Mme. Yu's 11-month-old son, who acted as host in the absence of his father, who is in Chungking. Among the guests were Mrs. W. G. Hayter, wife of the First Secretary of the British Embassy; Mme. van Houten, wife of the First Secretary of the Netherlands Legation; Miss Augusta Chang, a sister of the hostess who is a new attache of the Chinese Embassy; Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Bruce Smith and Miss Alice Dodge.

Clarence Hewes Host at Luncheon For Countess

In compliment to Countess de Marenches, who is spending the winter here at the Fairfax, Clarence Hewes entertained at luncheon yesterday in his home on Massachusetts Avenue. Countess de Marenches, who arrived in Washington some time ago, is the sister of Mrs. Henry F. Downe, who formerly lived here and later was a resident of Paris.

Mr. Hewes will leave tomorrow evening for New Orleans, where he will spend the holidays with his father, Harry Hewes. He will return to Washington before New Year's Eve.

Charging as admission two or more packages of cigarettes to be distributed to service men, the Washington Figure Skating Club will skim into action tomorrow morning for its annual Christmas party and figure-skating exhibitions.

The time is 11 a. m., and the place is Riverside Stadium, and men in the military services definitely will receive all "proceeds." On the committee in charge of the event are Mrs. Walter H. Bainbridge, Mrs. Melville Bell Grosvenor, Mrs. A. Ford Hinrichs and Mrs. J. Douglas Rollow.

Under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Uksila a varied program will take place. Among those who will participate are Miss Vera Halliday, Miss Vivian Halliday, Miss Helen Grosvenor, Donald G. Walker, Miss Ruth Parkinson, Miss Mary Frances Rollow, Glenn Ferguson, Ralph J. Carbo, jr., John P. McGill, Miss Kathleen O'Reilly, Vernon L. Duckett, Dr. Raymond Holden and Dennis Bancroft.

Still others who will participate are Richard Sherman, Maurice Washburn, Dr. Trenton Ruebush, John P. McGill, Hugh Warren, Dr. Frederick W. Farrar, Russell Evanson, Mrs. Creighton Peet, Mrs. Melville Bell Grosvenor, Miss Mabel Lightfoot, Mrs. Clarence Le Roy Parker, Miss Elizabeth Parkinson and many more.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Attend Premiere

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has informed Mrs. Frederic Schenck, chairman of the American Committee for British Catholic Relief, 1710 Connecticut Avenue, that she will attend the premiere of "Adeste Fideles," a sound film of Christmas in England, at the Willard Hotel on Monday at 3:15 p. m.

"Adeste Fideles" shows how the British flocked to their churches, sang carols and otherwise observed Christmas despite last year's Nazi blitz. Tickets for the showing will be available at the Connecticut Avenue headquarters. Mrs. Roosevelt has informed the committee that she will attend unless her work in civilian defense should intervene.

Father Martin J. D'Arcy, S. J., master of Campion Hall, Oxford, England, and a member of the London branch of the American Committee for British Catholic Relief, will speak at the Willard gathering. He will tell how the A. B. C. R. has brought spiritual and physical comfort to thousands in beleaguered Britain. Cardinal Hinsley, primate of England, is patron of the committee.

Mrs. Pitney Gives Dinner

The Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil were ranking guests at a dinner given Thursday by Mrs. Mahlon Pitney at her home on R Street.

Other in the company were the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon, Sir R. I. Campbell, the British Minister, Senator and Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, the former United States Minister to Sweden and Mrs. Frederick A. Sterling, Mrs. Richard McCreery, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mme. Van Kaathoven, Charles Carroll Glover, Coleman Jennings, Percy Blair and Pendleton Turner.

Mrs. Keyes Entertains for Miss Muna Lee

Heralding the coming season, Christmas decorations enhanced Tradition, the Alexandria home of Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, yesterday afternoon when she entertained at an eggnog party in honor of Miss Muna Lee (Mrs. Luis Munoz-Marin), who recently came here from Puerto Rico for an extended stay.

A Christmas tree, sprinkled with gay baubles, brightened a corner of the library, and a nativity scene, bordered with evergreen, added a special seasonal accent to the fireplace in the same room. Red carnations and red roses were fashioned into bouquets throughout the spacious rooms of the house, and the tea table was lighted with tall red tapers.

Receiving informally with her guest of honor, Mrs. Keyes was gowned in blue velvet. Miss Lee, who came to the party directly from her office (she's with the cultural realtions division, Department of State), appeared in a two-tone frock, styled with a black crepe skirt and a yellow-accented bodice. A small black hat completed her costume. Her daughter, Miss Manita Munoz-Lee, had chosen a frock of brown velvet, worn with topaz jewelry and a brown hat, trimmed with a green feather.

Among those who assisted the hostess during the party were Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative Margaret Smith, Miss Katherine Lenroot, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, Miss Irene Wright, Mrs. Horace M. Towner, Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard, Mrs. Harold Tufty, Miss Pat O'Malley, Miss Katherine McKlever and Miss Jean Darling.

Mrs. Keyes expects to leave next Friday for New Orleans, where she will spend some time. She has leased her Alexandria home to Lieut. Walter Howe, U. S. N., and Mrs. Howe, who recently came to Washington from their country place, The Little Farm, at Litchfield, Conn. Lieut. Howe is a nephew of Walter Bruce Howe, of Washington.

Debutante Party Given in Honor Of Sara Miller

A debutante party—one in the many, many which are crowding into place on the Christmas calendar these days—was given for Miss Sara Booth Miller yesterday by her aunt, Mrs. Allison Naylor Miller. Bright red and white carnations centered the luncheon table at Mrs. Miller's Cathedral Avenue home, and each guest was made a present of a corsage of the scarlet flowers.

Yesterday's guests included Miss Elizabeth Benson, Miss Barbara Vickery, Miss Betty Frost, Miss Ruth Anne Butler, Miss Mary Frances Rollow, Miss Peggy Nairn, Miss Margaret Hill, Miss Elene Essary and Mrs. Dion S. Birney.

Joan Dodd, Fiance Feted At Shower

Entertaining at a cocktail party and shower, Miss Patricia Prosnik was hostess yesterday in honor of Miss Joan Dodd and her finance David Atholl Robertson, who will be married on New Year's Day.

Among those from the young married set attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Randall Hagner, jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. Conway Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Moulton, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Orme, Mr. and Mrs. Cuthbert Train and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Merrill. Sharing the toast on behalf of happy marriages were Miss Aileen Harris and Bob Rutherford who will be married on New Year's Day—an hour ahead of the other couple.

Others attending the party were Miss Kitty Hill, Miss Ruth Hurley, the Misses Marion and Peter Norris, Miss Joan McKenna, Miss Betty Stewart Richardson, Miss Muriel Mandor, Miss Isabella Hagner, Miss Betty Burton, Bob Batt, Harold Mosley, Barry Woods, Bolling Powell, John Sobotka, Meade Patrick, Corin Lockwood, Munro Hunter, Francis Hogue, Hal Crowell, Al Baer and Judson Bolles.

Later many in the party went on to the Pall Mall room of the Raleigh, where their hostess, Miss Prochnik, is a featured singer.

Nancy King Makes Debut

Miss Hildreth Dunn, daughter of Col. and Mrs. William McKee Dunn, was among those from out of town attending the debut of Miss Nancy Parker King last night at a party given in her honor at the Chilton Club, Boston, Mass., by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons King, of Jamaica Plains.

Preceding the dance, Mr. and Mrs. King were hosts at a large dinner at the club. Among the other dinner parties given was that honoring Miss Bolling Byrd, of this city and New York, given by Mr. and Mrs. John Saltonstall.

Alexandria Youth To Dance Jan. 1

A New Year's Night dance is on the books for the Alexandria younger set, when Miss Nancy James Washington and Miss Bolling Randolph fete their friends at the Penn-Daw Hotel the evening of January 1 from 10 until 1 o'clock.

Miss Washington, who is a student at Hollins College, has returned to spend the holidays at the Alexandria home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Selden Washington. A debutante of last year, she made her bow at the Virginia Cotillion. Miss Randolph is the daughter of Mrs. Christopher M. Randolph and is attending Farmville College in Virginia.

W. C. Black Takes Bride In Church Rite

White chrysanthemums and palms with tall ivory tapers on each side formed the background last evening for the wedding of Miss Dorothy Louise McCullough, daughter of Mrs. Minnie E. McCullough, and William Calmes Black, of Silver Spring, Md. The Rev. Ralph D. Smith officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony at the Woodside Methodist Church in Silver Spring.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Henry W. Sebrey, wore ivory satin cut with a fitted basque, its sweetheart neckline bordered with seed pearls. She carried white orchids and a chiffon handkerchief which had been carried in 1885 by the bride at the London wedding of Mrs. Florine Mabel Wheldon.

Rose faille taffeta with wine velvet trim gowned Miss Beatrice Ely, who was maid of honor. She carried pink roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Katherine Loveday and Miss Dorothy Cahill, the latter of whom is being married today to Charles Rouden. Junior bridesmaid was Miss Lynn C. Black. The three attendants wore dresses styled after Miss Ely's, but of peacock blue.

Fred W. Kitterman was best man for Mr. Black, and ushers were John J. Price, William L. Maddox, John R. Adams and Edwin L. Bingham. The bride's mother wore a powder blue crepe jacket dress and white orchids when she received the guests after the ceremony at the bride's apartment.

Mrs. Black's traveling costume was a turquoise blue wool, with brown velvet trim, which she wore with a mink coat and matching hat. After a motor trip through Florida, the couple will make their home at 8716 Colesville Road, Silver Spring.

Welleses Plan For 1942 Eve

The Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles have issued invitations to their annual New Year's Eve reception at their home near Oxon Hill, Maryland.

The party, which has been on their holiday calendar for a number of years, is an informal gathering for their close friends and is not an official affair.

Mrs. Smith Gives Party For Miss Harrison

Mrs. Horace B. Smith, wife of Lieut. Col. Smith, United States Army, was hostess yesterday to a group of school-age friends of Miss Anne Coleman Harrison, daughter of the United States Minister to Switzerland and Mrs. Leland Harrison. The fete was a luncheon given at her Massachusetts Avenue home.

Miss Harrison arrived in Washington Thursday to spend the Christmas holiday here. She is a student at Foxcroft Schol this year, and other guests at the luncheon were young friends of hers, also spending the holiday weeks with their parents.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau will spend Christmas in Washington at their home at 2434 Belmont Avenue. Though they had planned to spend the holiday at their Dutchess County home in New York, "the emergency" will keep them here. Their son and daughter, Henry and Joan, will join them here, but Robert who is on active duty with the Navy, will be absent, of course.

Mrs. Lister Hill, accompanied by her son and daughter, left yesterday for Montgomery, Ala., where they will spend the holidays. Senator Hill will join them in time for Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Sterling will be joined today by their sons, Don and Davis, who are coming home from school for the holidays.

Miss Katherine Wood, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Philip S. Wood, has arrived home from the Erskine School, Boston, and will be with her parents until after the New Year.

Mr. and Mrs. Fenton F. Leith will not observe their annual Christmas Day "at home" this year.

Mrs. Parker West will entertain at a tea on Friday, December 26, from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m.

William Stanley, jr., has asked a number of his friends in for a late afternoon fete on Monday, December 29, at the home of his parents on Chesapeake Street.

Miss Patricia Herbst, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William T. Herbst, will entertain at an "after 6" party tomorrow afternoon at her parents' home on Foxhall Road.

Mrs. Frank Hight, sr., formerly of Washington and now of Fitchburg, Mass., has arrived here to spend the holidays. She will visit her two daughters, Mrs. Charles D. Hayes and Mrs. Joseph C. Quinn, and her son, Frank Hight.

Mr. and Mrs. John V. Hansen entertained at dinner last evening in their apartment at the Shoreham in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Minor R. Tillotson, of Santa Fe, N. Mex. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Hahn, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Trager and Dr. and Mrs. Roy Lyman Sexton.

Because of the war, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith have canceled the tea and reception they had planned to give tomorrow afternoon in honor of the America for China Committee.

Miss Marguerite Sutton will be guest of honor at a tea to be given tomorrow afternoon by Mrs. Lee E. Akin and her daughter, Miss Patricia Akin, in their home in Arlington. Miss Sutton's engagement to Ensign Nathaniel L. Miller recently was announced by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Richard N. Sutton.

Maj. and Mrs. Carlton D Goodiel and their family will arrive tomorrow night from Fort Knox, Ky., to spend Christmas here with Mrs. Goodiel's mother, Mrs. Louis E. Hoover.

Invitations have been issued for a tea dance at which Mary Jane Baxter will be hostess from 5 to 7 o'clock on Christmas Eve. The party will take place at the Wesley Heights Community Club.

Mrs. Samuel Mundheim has returned to New York after a visit here with her son-in-law and daughter, the Rev. and Mrs. Norman Gerstenfeld.

Britain Held Undergoing Revolution

Miss Bondfield, Former English Labor Minister, Tells of Changes

By Lucia Giddens

The English people are undergoing "a remarkable revolution" of mind and spirit, with a better ability to "put first things first," Miss Margaret Bondfield, former Minister of Labor of Great Britain, said in an address last night.

"When H. G. Wells said we won't have a revolution at the end of the war because we're already having it, I think he was speaking the literal truth," Miss Bondfield said at the dinner of the Washington branch American Association of University Women at its club house.

When the Ministry of Food has asked people to eat at a communal meal to conserve food and fuel and to release women for other work, the people have cheerfully departed from such a tradition as that of feeding in their own homes, Miss Bondfield said.

Diminutive gray-haired Miss Bondfield heightened herself by standing on a box to speak, explaining that she felt quite secure on such a perch because she is hardened to standing on a soapbox on corners.

In England's current transition, etiquette—"who precedes what," she chuckled—doesn't matter, and it means a "clearing away of a lot of rubbish," she added.

At the communal meal, people "are meeting a lot of other people to whom they've never been introduced" but they are finding human companionship, and "the little shoddy divisions" don't count so much, she said.

Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau, United States Department of Labor, gave a brief talk on employment of women in defense industries in this country. She said one of the large industrial plants told her it was putting on 5000 women workers. Miss Anderson said it had been "uphill work" to convince the men that women should have more of the industrial defense jobs than they have been getting.

Miss Hary Craig McGeachy, press officer at the British Embassy for the Ministry of Economic Warfare, who introduced Miss Bondfield, said that England in defending itself "has discovered what civilian defense really means—keeping up the stamina, health and spirit of every individual."

Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, president of the branch, presided. Among the guests were Col. Lemuel Bolles, director of civilian defense in the District; Miss Eloise Davison, assistant director of the Office of Civilian Defense; Justice Henry W. Edgerton, of the United States Court of Appeals for the District; Miss Mary Winslow, United States representative on the Inter-American Commission of Women; Miss Ruth Woodsmall, of the World's Y. W. C. A.; E. Dana Durand, commissioner of the United States Tariff Commission.

Charles Taft Warns Against 'Witch-Hunting' in Wartime

Warning that "witch-hunting is an easy state of mind to get into" in wartime, Charles P. Taft, assistant director, Office of Defense, Health and Welfare Services, said yesterday that he hoped the necessity of showing "clear and present danger" would be insisted on, as a test in administering exceptions to the Bill of Rights.

He spoke on "Civil Liberties in Wartime" at the luncheon meeting of the District League of Women Voters at the Y. W. C. A. in observance of the 150th anniversary of the Bill of Rights.

He criticized the Supreme Court decision on the case involving the salute to the flag, and said he was "quite confident" that the Court will reverse it. Taft emphasized his disagreement with the outcome in the Jehovah's Witness case that when a child believes in that doctrine "and isn't permitted to salute the flag, his parents are going to be sent to jail."

Taft deplored the lack of heckling at political meetings in this country. In contrast, he said, heckling makes interesting political meetings in England. He said that its absense in this country indicates that "we're not as ready to listen" to opposing viewpoints.

Mrs. Callaghan's Message Is Read

A message from Mrs. Eugene Callaghan, president of the League, read by Mrs. Gerard Reilly, stated that "the most helpful thing" that League members can do at present is "conscientiously to examine the facts and refute reports that hinder defense unity."

The board of the league is "re-gearing the program to essential projects in order to present information on subjects which meet the needs of the day. Four war-time subjects have already been selected for special emphasis: civil liberties, now being considered; the questions of the impacts of war on world economy; the conservation of social gains in time of war, and the cause and effect of war-time increase in taxes. Other subjects will be scheduled," she said.

"Our members as individuals should join in defense work. There are organizations already set up and running to which we all will want to offer our services. But if democratic institutions are to live during the war and after the war, there can be no slackening of the responsibility of citizens for government. To take its share of this responsibility is the job that the League of Woman Voters is prepared to do in the District of Columbia," Mrs. Callaghan said.

Mrs. Gerald Morgan Is Subchairman

Mrs. Harold Stone, chairman of the Department of Government and its operation, announced that Mrs. Gerald Morgan has been named subchairman in charge of civil liberties.

Mrs. B. M. McKelway, vice president of the League, resided in Mrs. Callaghan's absence.

Heads Insurance Women

Dorothy L. Smith has been elected president of the Insurance Women's Club of Washington. Other recently elected officers are E. Clare Turner, vice president; Virginia W. Brooks, secretary; Jean McCarraghy, assistant secretary, and Mary E. Mudd, treasurer. Committee chairmen appointed are E. Clare Turner, membership; Louise Demarest, educational; Mildred Gillingham, entertainment, and M. Irene Frye, publicity.

Senior Scouts Start Civilian Defense Move

The Senior Service Scout program for participation in civilian defense was launched at a mass meeting of Senior Girl Scouts and leaders yesterday afternoon at the Church of the Covenant.

Mrs. Paul Rittenhouse, of New York, national director of Girl Scouts, discussed the plan by which Senior Scouts will be trained to serve in troop units under adult workers in local defense areas in emergency feeding, messenger service, care of children, preparation of emergency shelters and packing of emergency rations and equipment.

Mrs. Oswald Lord, of New York, assistant director in charge of volunteer participation for the Office of Civilian Defense in Region 2, pointed out that the Scouts had learned in peacetime the skills and self-reliance which enable them to carry a responsible share in the all-out defense effort in wartime.

Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn, national vice president, who presented and obtained adoption of the national SSS program by the District Council of Girl Scouts and Leaders Association last month, reminded the group yesterday of the importance of the training program.

Packing Demonstrated

Packing of emergency equipment was demonstrated at the meeting by Joan Beattie of Troop 64, under direction of Mrs. Joseph Beattie, leader of the District 2 Leaders Association and of Troop 64.

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, chairman of the National Advisory Committee, and Mrs. Harry C. Kramer, Girl Scout Commissioner for the District, attended the meeting with a group of regional and local Scout executives.

Although the SSS program applies to Girl Scouts of 15 to 18 years of age, provision is being made for the younger girls also to be active. For intermediate Scouts, questionnaires have been sent out by headquarters asking leaders to specify what jobs their troops are qualified to handle. Miss Anne McLean and Miss Barbara Phinney, field advisers on the local staff, are in charge of this phase of the program.

Leaders of Brownie Scouts, 7 to 10 years old, also have been asked to fill out a form as to the proficiency of their groups in caring for themselves and in knowing what to do in case of fire, accident or slight injury.

Entertain at Tea

Scout headquarters is making an appeal for Girl Scouts who have dropped out of activities in the past year to return and take part in the SSS program.

Mrs. Brooke entertained a group of Scout executives and a few other guests at a tea at her Georgetown home yesterday afternoon in honor of Mr. Rittenhouse and Mrs. Lord.

The invitation list included: Mrs. Charles C. Bolton, Mrs. C. B. Henderson, Mrs. David E. Finley, Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Harold Moulton, Mrs. Robert A. Taft, Mrs. Edward Warner, Mrs. Reginald S. Huidekoper, Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Warren Austin, Mrs. Charles Hamlin, Mrs. James Helm, Mrs. Howland Chase, Mrs. Ernest Lindley, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Miss Elizabeth Houghton, Mrs. Henry H. Flather, Mrs. Edgar J. Goodrich, Mrs. W. M. Kiplinger, Mrs. Harry C. Kramer, Mrs. Edward Sturdavant, Mrs. A. Staton, Mrs. O'Neal Johnson, Mrs. Charles L. Curtiss, jr., Mrs. Gerrit S. Miller jr., Mrs. J. Harris Franklin, Mrs. Proctor Dougherty, Mrs. George Scriven, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. Maury Middleton, Mrs. C. Leslie Glenn, Mrs. F. W. Milliken, Mrs. P. C. Alexander, Mrs. H. C. Fisher, Mrs. John C. Borton, Mrs. Samuel W. Boggs, Mrs. Jesse Miller, Mrs. Frank Heilman, Mrs. Hagry Bernton, Miss Elizabeth Doubleday, Miss Tecla Bumhard, Miss Eleanor Durrett, Miss Ann McLean, Miss Barbara Phinney.

Women's War Unit to Enter New Quarters

The American Women's Voluntary Services will move its offices and training school to the building at 2170 Florida Avenue, recently donated by Mrs. Sumner Welles, during the weekend of December 27. Classes will start in the new location December 29, it was announced yesterday.

Mrs. Dean G. Acheson has been appointed dean of the training school. Mrs. Daniel C. Long will continue as director of the training school unit with Mrs. Donald Church and Miss Muriel Hinds as her assistants.

New Members Signed

The Washington unit now has a membership of more than 1500 volunteers, with more than 400 new members having enrolled since war was declared on the United States.

In the past year 1041 women have been graduated from its classes and are now serving in community tasks. Since December 7, details of drivers from the motor corps, typists and telephonists have been working—some on shifts throughout the night—in the District Civilian Defense office.

Enrollment for classes will be taken at the new location of the A. W. V. S. after December 29, and in the meantime at the present address, 1640 Connecticut Avenue. Classes in civilian protection are offered to nonmembers as well as members without cost. All other classes will require enrollment in the A. W. V. S.

Courses now in progress include first aid, nutrition, telephone switchboard, air-raid precaution, home gardens, fingerprinting and the following motor corps classes: Safety, education, map reading, running repairs.

"Land Army" Course

Among proposed courses is one for the training of workers in a "land army." Negotitaions are now under way with the extension service of the University of Maryland and the Beltsville Research Center for a course for volunteer agricultural workers.

Other proposed courses which the A. W. V. S. here has under advisement include food and defense, a series of lectures to be sponsored by the gradutae school of the Department of Agriculture and the nutrition committee of the District, mobile canteen, two-way radio, care of refugee and evacuated children, physical fitness classes, mental testing, to train volunteers to assist at clinics with the mental testing of selectees.

Girls Will Offer Christmas Play

A tradition will be observed at the Y. W. C. A. tomorrow afternoon when the twelfth annual performance of the Christmas play, "Why the Chimes Rang," will be presented by the Girl Reserves at 4 o'clock in Barker Hall.

Taking leading roles in the production, which is directed by Alice Sigworth Morse, are Frances Speidel, Wanda Wayn Way, Helen Kelser and Patricia Grogan. Others in the cast are Anna Claire Rankin, Barbara Gallagher, Joyce Amrin, Alberta Giffen, Betty Miller, Edith Wells, Dorothy Raymer and Patricia Magargel.

A choir of 80 junior high Girl Reserves and the senior high Girl Reserve Glee Club of 60 voices will present the program of carols under the direction of Miss Mary Burnett.

Accompanists for the choirs will be Mrs. Herbert Smith and Miss Dorothy Arnold. Miss Margaret Graves, Girl Reserve executive secretary, and Miss Barbara Masten, assistant secretary, are in charge of arrangements for the program.

Following the play, the Senior High School Glee Club will sing Christmas carols in the lobby. Wassail will be served by representatives from the various local Y. W. C. A. chapters, assisted by the Girl Reserves.

Miss Hahm to Give Christmas Party For Zonta Club

The Zonta Club will be entertained at a Christmas party at "Bonnie Brae," the home of Miss Emma T. Hahm on Oregon Avenue on the evening of December 29.

Dorothy Waldo Phillips, of Landsdowne, Pa., lecturer and youth counselor, will speak at the party. She has organized and conducted youth forums in several States.

Miss Esther Gude is giving a tea for the club at the Kennedy-Warren December 28.

Margaret Hite, William Palmer Plight Troth

Mrs. Meade Botts Hite, of Thomasille, N. C., announces the engagement of her daughter, Margaret Pendleton, to William Howard Palmer, of Warrenton, N. C., and Washington.

Miss Hite is the daughter of Mrs. Hite and the late Mr. Hite, native of Rappahannock County, Va. She received her education at St. Mary's School in Raleigh, N. C., and at Sweet Briar College and the University of Virginia. At the latter institution she was a member of the Chi Omega Sorority.

Mr. Palmer is the son of Mrs. William Howard Palmer and the late Mr. Palmer, of Warrington, N. C., and is connected with the Reconstruction Finance Co. in Washington.

15 Americans Are Believed to Be in Hongkong

There are 15 American diplomats and consular employes known to be in Hongkong, the British crown colony whose capture the Japanese described yesterday as a matter of hours.

One of the Americans, Consul Robert S. Ward, is listed as coming from Washington in a State Department release of December 12. The other names follow:

Addison E. Southard, Louisville, Ky., consul general; John H. Bruins, Voorheesville, N. Y., consul; Robert S. Ward, Washington, D. C., consul; Frederic C. Fornes, jr., Buffalo, N. Y., consul; F. Marshall, Wife Get Full Custody of Girls

Los Angeles, Dec. 19 (AP).—Superior Court granted final adoption papers today to Corinne Griffith, star of silent pictures, and George Marshall, wealthy Washington (D. C.) laundry operator, giving them full custody of two adopted daughters.

The girls, Pamela, 12, and Cynthia, 10, have been with the Marshalls six years. Marshall is owner of the Washington professional football Redskins.

Von Stumpf Killed

London, Dec. 19 (AP).—The Rome radio reported tonight the deputy chief of the Nazi press bureau, Von Stumpf had been killed on the Russian front.

Wallgren Starts Inquiry of Rising Ship Building Costs

Startled by revelation of rich returns due Savannah Shipyards, Inc., from Maritime Commission contracts, Senator Wallgren (Democrat), of Washington, yesterday started a one-man inquiry of rising ship construction costs in the victory program.

Wallgren declared that the Government now appears to be paying "at least" three times as much for ships as it did in 1938.

The legislator cited the testimony Thursday of Frank Cohen, of New York, before the Senate Committee Investigating Defense Expenditures. Cohen was the organizer and is now one of the officers of Empire Ordnance Corporation, whose subsidiary, Savannah Shipyards, holds a contract for construction of 11 10,000-ton cargo vessels at a cost of between one and a half and two million dollars.

Wallgren assailed not only the estimated costs but fees to be paid Empire Ordnance as "away out of line."

Ex-Marine, 69, Offers To Be Human Torpedo

Atlantic City, N.J., Dec. 19 (INS). A 69-year-old retired sergeant-major in the United States Marine Corps has offered himself as a "human torpedo" to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, it was learned tonight.

Charles Jacob Buerger, of nearby Ventnor, explained that modern warfare might require such a service and that he was sorry I have but one life to offer my country."

Buerger, who was 69 yesterday, enlisted in the United States Army Cavalry at Cincinnati in 1889 and served through the Indian campaign, being wounded in the leg. Later he joined the Marine Corp and served aboard the United States flagship New York during the bombardment of San Juan and other actions off Cuba in the Spanish-American war.

He was stationed at Washington during World War I in the Marine purchasing department.

Formal Order Sets Up Office Of Censorship Under Price

A formal executive order setting up the Office of Censorship and giving Director Byron Price "absolute discretion" over measures to exclude military information from communications crossing the Nation's borders was issued last night by President Roosevelt.

The order was released shortly after Price, now on leave from his job as executive news editor of the Associated Press, Attorney General Biddle and Postmaster General Walker had conferred for more than an hour with President Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt's executive order also created a Censorship Policy Board to advise Price. Members will be Vice President Wallace, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Secretary of War Stimson, Biddle, Walker, Secretary of the Navy Knox, Lowell Mellett, director of the Office of Government Reports, and Archibald MacLeish, head of the Office of Facts and Figures.

The executive order directs Price to supervise censorship of "communications by mail, cable, radio or other means of transmission passing between the United States and any foreign nation."

Price indicated to White House reporters after his conference with the President yesterday that the framework for this control of communication with other countries has been worked out by an interdepartmental committee headed by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI.

One of his first jobs, Price said, will be to "clarify and summarize" the various informal requests for voluntary censorship which have been given out "piecemeal" to the press and radio by various Government agencies.

Some of these instructions have been contradictory, he pointed out, adding that he had received hundreds of messages from press and radio executives pledging their support in a voluntary censorship program and appealing for a clear statement of the Government's policy.

Navy Seizes Scarce Materials Worth a Million

OPM Priorities Director Donald M. Nelson yesterday announced the seizure by the Navy of more than one million dollars worth of critical scarce materials being held in warehouses and railroad terminals for shipment to foreign countries.

The requisitioning, first under new powers granted to OPM by Executive Order, included more than 13 million pounds of steel, 3½ million pounds of copper, 34,000 pounds of tin and 70,000 feet of teakwood.

The steel had been located by the OPM research and statistics bureau's survey of lost, hidden and frozen inventories, while the other materials had been reported to OPM by the Navy.

The owners of the property taken yesterday—mainly firms in Holland, Switzerland and Sweden who had placed orders before the outbreak of war—will be compensated for the value of the materials.

Backed Out of Blackout

H. H. McFarlin, district air raid warden for Hyattsville, didn't get to see how his home town looked in last night's practice blackout. In a restaurant when the 9 p. m. lights-out time arrived, McFarlin rushed for the door to get a better view from the street. "Oh, no you don't," said a voice—that of Special Policeman Harry Fiddesop. "You may be a warden, but to me you're just a citizen."

Bolles Issues New Rules For Raids

Householders Told Not to Turn Off Main Gas Supply During Attack

Washington and suburban householders were instructed by defense officials yesterday not to attempt to cut off the main gas supply during air-raid alarms and also to leave pilot lights burning.

"These are new rules which supersede and cancel all previous ones," declared Col. Lemuel Bolles, Director of the District Defense Council. "Simply turn off the stove burners if they happen to be lighted."

Colonel Bolles asked that these suggestions be carried out in the test mobilization of the air-raid warden service on Sunday morning and "at all times hereafter."

If the house should be damaged during an actual air raid, he declared, a trained man should be called to shut off the main gas valve.

The utility companies are mobilized and have cars equipped with radios to make quick service possible.

Signal Being Planned

An identical air-raid signal for the District and nearby towns is being worked out, he announced, and the outlying areas are expected to participate in the Sunday morning mobilization test.

At the British Press Service, 1317 F Street Northwest yesterday afternoon Daniel Ival, official of the London Fire Brigade, explained his country's auxiliary fire organization.

Fire fighting forces of London were increased 10 times to fight the blitz, he said, with auxiliary fire stations "set up all around" in schools, garages, or requisitioned large private houses.

Steel tanks to hold 5000 gallons of water were built and placed along streets, to help out when water mains broke. A secondary telephone control system was installed and 900 motorcyclists used to spread fire alarms.

Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy, who attended the conference—along with several other District defense officials—estimated afterward that it would take "millions of dollars to put Washington on such a basis." However, tanks for water storage already are being constructed, Murphy said.

Housing Chairmen Listed

Housing chairmen for various defense sections were announced by Randolph G. Bishop, in charge of emergency housing, as follows:

American University Park, Warren W. Shoemaker; Anacostia, Mrs. Francis W. Walters, jr.; Arkansas, James Parrell; Barry Farm, John Chinn; Benning, A. J. Prince; Bloomingdale, James M. Civilian defense headquarters for the Conduit Road area have been established at the Palisades Field House, Sherrier Street and Edmunds Place Northwest. The telephone number is Em. 4670.

Mrs. George L. Catlin, registrar for the Dupont Circle area committee, asked a personal call at area headquarters — 1308 Eighteenth Street—from all volunteers of the section who wish to be assigned to jobs. She is in the office from 9 a. m. until 6 p. m. and at home, 1911 R Street Northwest, after that, she announced. Telephone number of the headquarters is DE. 3800.

Dupont Circle Groups Hear Raid Warden

E. M. O'Sullivan, air warden for Zone 6 of the Dupont Circle area, last night announced two sector meetings for residents in his district today.

R. A. Threadgill, deputy warden, will outline plans for tomorrow morning's air raid siren blowing at a meeting at post headquarters, 1712 Sixteenth Street, at 2 today. All building wardens have been called to the meeting.

Instructions on further organization will be given residents of Seventeetnh Street between R and T Streets at a meeting at 7 p. m. in the lobby of 1725 Seventeenth Street.

F. Moran McConiche, deputy air warden for the Dupont Circle area, addressed a Zone 6 meeting last night at 1616 Sixteenth Street Northwest. O'Sullivan announced the zone was 60 per cent organized.

Coordinator Named

Winchester, Va., Dec. 19.—Mayor C. R. Anderson has been named defense coordinator for Winchester and Frederick County, it was announced today.

One-Man Blitz

Murphy Stifles Opposition, Gets Defense Unit Organized

Washington's chief air raid warden, Clement Murphy, last night became a one-man panzer unit crashing over every obstacle raised to reorganize a civilian defense setup in the Lincoln Park-Kingman Park area, the only section of the city as yet not functioning in the local plan.

At a mass meeting in Eastern High School, Seventeenth and East Capitol Street Northeast, Chief Murphy personally took cahrge of the gathering which was fast developing into a name-calling row.

"You people had better get together to save your hides," he declared, "I'm not leaving here tonight until you get a definite organization." The majority of the citizens applauded the chief air warden's action.

Promises Action

Appointing several citizens and two members of his staff as tellers Chief Murphy entered a whirlwind election of key workers. Putting down arguments from the floor he said, "we won't argue and we won't fuss. I'll get action if I have to set a fire under you."

The only person retained in office from the old setup was Secretary Raymond Poore. After a closely contested election the following persons were chosen: Ernest N. Johnson, chairman of the executive defense committee, 1927 D Street Northeast, TR. 6504, with Edward A. Griffith and Charles J. Payne as assistants.

Ray P. Homan was elected deputy air raid warden. His address is 1310 C Street Southeast, LI. 4041. Assistants are: George Rutherford, Frank Armstrong and Harry Hicks.

Calvert Resigns

Alfred D. Calvert, former chairman of the executive committee was voted to be retained on the committee as an assistant. However, he resigned.

Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive civilian defense director for the District addressing the meeting declared, "This is a time for prodigious energy and we must not spend our time in nonsensical discussions of personalities." Bolles reminded them that the wasted hours, days and months cannot be brought back and that other organizations were far in advance of their section. "Remember you can't let George do it all," he said.

Judge Can't See Dim Light Excuse

Charged with driving with improper lights, Samuel Friedman, 28, of 21 Kennedy Street Northwest, was fined $2 in Traffic Court yesterday despite his plea that he was "obeying dim out instructions."

He was stopped near Walter Reed Hospital on Georgia Avenue by Motorcycle Patrolman A. S. Yowaiski Thursday evening. The policeman said in court that Friedman was driving with only fender lights lit.

The defendant showed Judge Walter J. Casey a newspaper clipping which reported Commissioner Young's request for a "dim out."

"That applies principally to houses," Judge Casey asserted. "If there is need for a blackout of automobile headlights, you will be informed—$2."

Gen. Fleming Visions Raid Attempt on D. C.

Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator, declared yesterday "it is reasonable to assume" that attempts to bomb Washington will be made soon.

He said the attempt would be primarily an effort to paralyze "our nerve"—since there are no major armament production facilities in the city.

"In plain words," he declared, "it will be an attempt to get our goat."

His address, made over Radio Station WJSV, was directed mainly to Government employes.

Takoma Park, D. C., Ready, Warden Says

William M. Greene, deputy air-raid warden for Takoma Park, D. C., told the Takoma Park, Md.-D. C. Citizens Association last night that his area was "500 per cent prepared" to meet any emergency.

For example, he said, five have volunteered for every air-raid post open.

The association, meeting at the Takoma Branch of the District Public Library, Fifth and Cedar Streets Northwest, also heard civilian defense talks by Joseph B. Simpson, jr., air raid warden for the Fifth and Thirteenth Districts of Montgomery County; Miss Elizabeth Dowden, member of the association, and Julian Colangelo, of the Calvin Coolidge High School faculty.

Miss Dowden appealed for more clerical workers for the civilian defense staff centered at the library and for more automobiles.

Final Instructions For Raid Wardens

Assistant air raid wardens and sector wardens in Zone 3 of the Connecticut Avenue civilian defense area will receive final instructions on their duties for Washington's Sunday morning test air raid drill in a meeting at 2:30 p. m. today at 2901 Connecticut Avenue Northwest. Capt. George F. Cook is in charge of the third zone.

Glover Park Group Hears Chairman

John L. Gray, chairman of the defense committee of the Glover Park Citizens Association, explained the functions of the committee and the duties of the members at a meeting of the association last night at the Benjamin Stoddert school.

Workman Suffers Injury in Fall

Jesse E. Curry, 38, a carpenter of Branchville, Md., was injured about the back yesterday when he fell from the second floor of a construction job in the first block of Q Street Southwest to the first floor of the building. A defective joist was blamed. He was taken to Casualty Hospital.

LaGuardia Offers Gas Mask Plan

50 Million Devices Will Be Needed by Coastal Residents, Says OCD Chief

By Christine Sadler

Post Staff Writer

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, director of the Office of Civilian Defense, yesterday proposed that the Government supply 50 million gas masks to residents of the country's coastal areas.

Although the Budget Bureau has his estimates, LaGuardia said, a definite request for funds will "await specific recommendation from the Army" that the masks are needed.

The masks would cost $3.75 each and would be supplied in five sizes—one for babies, one for children 2 to 3 years of age, one for larger children, another for small adults and the "universal adult mask."

Mayor LaGuardia said that while he believed the masks would be good protection he saw no need at this time for air-raid shelters and for camouflaging tops of public buildings.

Another Matter

"With the relative position of ourselves and the enemy in mind I don't think it necessary to go into shelters now. They are being studied, however. Gas masks are another matter," he declared, "as our getting them after the money is appropriated will be a matter of several months."

The defense director called upon the Nation for "full and complete cooperation" with air-raid wardens, auxiliary firemen and other civilians engaged in the protective services. "Comply with their instructions and rules," he urged.

Not all rules coming out of his office, he explained, are supposed to apply to all communities alike. Local conditions make it impossible, he declared, for the country to have uniform air-raid warning signals.

"A siren won't work every place. In small communities they will ring bells. There doesn't need to be uniform rules about this. However, there is one overall rule to remember about an air raid and that is to avoid panic.

"Also, all over the country an alarm will mean to stop activity—but during a blackout everything goes ahead as usual," he said.

Asks Daily Training

Daily training of from two to three hours was asked by Director LaGuardia for all air raid wardens.

"I am trying to get money from Congress to buy the wardens steel helmets to wear on patrol. It's going to take a lot more money to run this program. Not a city in the country yet has sumficient fire fighting equipment."

Mayor LaGuardia conferred with Commissioners of the District of Columbia yesterday morning at the District Building and assured them he would go to President Roosevelt about defense funds for the Capital City "if you ever want me to do so."

Public apathy about the civilian defense program changed "completely overnight" with the outbreak of war, LaGuardia said. He answered alleged criticism which he said had been leveled at his office for lack of foresight by declaring the agency had been on the alert but could get no one to take it seriously.

"They would have sent me to a psychopathic ward," he observed, "if I had suggested before the war that we change the New York lighting system as we are doing to make it possible for each individual street light to be cut off from a specially constructed switch."

Supplying a Demand

Defese Office Issues Booklet On Raid Shelter Construction

What is the value of air-raid shelters, and how can you get one?

It's a question that the Office of Civilian Defense has heard with increasing frequency during the past several days, and one which has the British Press Service mimeographing "for cities all along the Eastern Seaboard" more copies of pamphlets carrying information on shelters in England.

While OCD has approved no particular make of shelter and cautions the public to "look carefully before buying," it has printed a booklet on air-raid shelter construction. The booklet is highly technical, and intended for architects and construction companies. However, it might prove beneficial if you expect to do any shelter building.

In England, although public shelters still are widely used, many citizens remain in their homes and have resorted to home-made shelters.

A timber framework built inside a room, touching neither ceiling nor walls, and roofed with strong wire netting, is one form of shelter construction.

Specially built, cooplike shelters, with mattress, are extensively used. A variation can be made by fitting strong mesh wire around a strong topped table and putting mattress on the floor under the table.

Inside barricades help make a room more able to withstand raids and help shut off flying shrapnel and glass. In England these are often made by piling heavy furniture or bookcases filled with books against windows or room walls. Outside barricades of sandbags serve the same purpose.

Public shelters, some defense officials feel, are of more benefit in the event of daytime raids than those at night—as they provide a place where people on downtown streets can find refuge. They also serve as shelter for persons whose homes or apartments do not seem to offer proper protection.

The feasibility of shelters for Washington is being studied by the District Commissioners.

War Against Waste

D. C. Committee of 70 Set Up To Direct Salvage of Scrap

Washington last night launched a "war against waste" and set up special defense unit to correlate collections of paper, old rags, scrap metal and rubber.

Named as chairman of a committee of 70 was James E. Colliflower, former president of the Washington Board of Trade. Other members are yet to be announced.

The local committee, it was announced, was formed as part of the Nation-wide program sponsored by the Bureau of Industrial Conservation of OPM.

Colliflower Stresses Need

In making public the appointment of Colliflower, Commissioner John Russell Young, United States defense coordinator, said:

"The need for waste paper, scrap metals, old rags and rubber has become increasingly acute since our entrance into the war. It has become necessary to increase and accelerate the return of this potential mine of raw materials to a degree never before anticipated."

Colliflower emphasized that the new program was "not simply a short-lived drive," but would continue "for the duration."

The salvage committee, he added, will not make actual collections of materials, but will see to it that any donations reach proper authorities.

Offices Are Established

"Use your favorite junk dealer," said Colliflower, "if you have scrap materials available. We will see to it that all items reach their proper places for conversion into war necessities."

The salvage chief has established offices in the Albee Building, Fifteenth and G Street Northwest, Room 412. First meeting of the committee is scheduled for December 29 in the Social Security Board auditorium, Fourth Street and Independence Avenue Southwest.

Colliflower asked citizens to "take an inventory" of their homes to discover what scrap materials might be available for defense uses.

Several Out To Succeed Justice Wheat

Early appointment of a new chief justice for the District Court was expected yesterday as support gathered for several prominent lawyers and judges.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat has announced he will retire from the bench at the end of the year.

Attorney General Biddle was said to be weighing the ability of those suggested in the field of administration, as well as for their judicial attainments.

Besides presiding in court himself, the chief justice is the head of the bench of 12 judges and is expected to do considerable executive work, wrestling with the difficulties arising from the court's lagging and overburdened docket.

The chief justice also, for certain purposes, has the duties of "governor" of the District, having been assigned these functions because of the lack of a chief executive such as the States have.

Among those mentioned as successors to Chief Justice Wheat were three members of the court, Justices Bolitha J. Laws, Oscar R. Luhring and David A. Pine.

Justice Laws, former president of the District Bar Association, was a pioneer in the development of the system of pretrial hearings, which have done much to "streamline" the work of the courts. He also has sponsored reforms in the handling of domestic relations cases.

Justice Luhring also has contributed to reforms recently put into effect, presiding in the pretrial and assignment section last year.

Justice Pine, who now presides in the Motions Court, was formerly district attorney and made extensive reforms in that office.

Also mentioned for consideration for the chief justice's bench are Alexander Holtzonn, Assistant Attorney General, and Robert E. Lynch, coauthor with his father of extensive works on law and an attorney of long experience here.

Nurse Is Robbed Of $15 in D. C. Street

A pocketbook snatcher escaped last night with $15 after robbing a Garfield Hospital nurse walking on Clifton Street near Twelfth Street Northwest. She was Mary Tankard, of the Garfield Nursing Home, police reported.

Taken by Girl

Missing Boy Feared Pawn In Extortion

The possibility that a baby boy was abducted from his mother last Monday by a 15-year-old Filipino girl to be used in an extortion plot was being investigated by police last night.

WALTER

Detective Edwin Grayson and John Boccina, of the Public Relations Squad, said it appeared that 16 - month - old Walter Vincent Smith is being held by the girl.

She expects, it was said, to pass off the child as the illegitimate son of herself and a New York Filipino and demand that the latter contribute to his support.

An all-night investigation by the two policemen uncovered the information though they were unable to find any trace of the child or the girl. It is believed that the girl, known only as "Janice," is hiding with the baby in Virginia.

Mrs. Forrest L. Smith, 38, of 735 Sixth Street Northwest, a deaf mute, reported the girl's disappearance to police Thursday. She said "Janice" had come to her home last Monday and asked to take Walter downtown with her.

Mrs. Smith informed the police that she did not become alarmed immediately because she thought the child had been taken home by the girl.

Residents of the neighborhood told detectives they knew the girl Janice "only by seeing her around." None was able to tell police her full name nor where she lives.

Meanwhile at the Smith home there is a neat pile of Christmas packages labeled for little Walter.

Suspect Jailed For Grand Jury In Karn Killing

Jasper Reed Martin, Negro, 43, of 1815 S Street Northwest, a former preacher, was lodged at the District Jail last night to await grand jury action in the murder of Lewis T. Karn, 29, of 1205 Gallatin Street Northwest.

The suspect was held responsible for the fatal shooting of Karn by a coroner's jury yesterday. The jury's action committed Martin and denied him bail.

Karn was slain, May. 24, in the hallway of a rooming house at 1527 Columbia Street Northwest. Martin admitted in a signed statement that he shot the man in an argument over a cab fare.

Detective Sergt. Edgar Scott of the homicide squad, testified at the inquest that Martin was trapped through a .45 caliber automatic which was traced to him. Bullets fired from the gun were identical with the bullet taken from Karn's body, it was stated.

Accused Youths' Bond Lowered to $2500

Francis J. Mulvey and Albert Farmer, District of Columbia youths under indictment in Maryland in connection with the raping of a Washingto waitress in Prince Georges County, had bond lowered to $2500 each in Police Court yesterday, as their attorneys began a fight to save them from being sent to Maryland to face trial.

The two recently were cleared in District Courts of charges of raping and abducting the same woman involved in the Maryland offense, and have hitherto been held on $50,000 bond. In the preliminary proceedings yesterday, defense counsel Robert W. McCullough and Andrew Lipscomb refused to consent to the boys' removal to Maryland. An extradition hearing was set for January 20.

1c Gas Tax Rise Passed In Congress

By Charles Mercer

Post Staff Writer

Congress late yesterday sent to the White House a bill increasing the present 2-cent District gasoline tax to 3 cents per gallon.

Enactment of the measure will give the District approximately $1,500,000 annually and will finance completion of the Whitehurst highway improvement program within 10 years.

Some opposition to increasing the tax 1 cent instead of 2 cents failed to stop passage of the bill in the House after the Senate had unanimously accepted the report of its conferees earlier in the day.

The House voted last October to raise the tax 2 cents, although its District Committee brought a bill to the floor recommending an increase of 1 cent.

By a vote of 52 to 27 the Senate last Wednesday decreased the amount to 1 cent. It acted on the recommendation of Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, who conducted District subcommittee hearings on the measure for three weeks. Speedier completion of the local highway improvement program would be physically impossible even though a 2-cent increase would give the District larger funds, he told the Senate.

Agreement on the 1-cent increase was reached by conferee members of the District Committees of both houses yesterday morning.

In presenting the proposal to the House Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee declared he had received assurance from Thomas H. MacDonald, Commissioner of the Public Roads Administration, that the District would receive a Federal allotment of $2,500,000 for aiding in completion of the program.

Opposition to an increase of only 1 per cent was voiced by Representative Rees (Republican), of Kansas, and Representative Springer (Republican), of Indiana, who originally introduced the increase of 2 cents in the House.

Representative Springer declared that it was "unfair" to the citizens of other States that the District should have a tax of only 3 cents. The average for the States is more than 4 cents, he said.

Stating that he too favored a 2-cent increase, Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, said that he believed the House should accept its conferees' agreement at present and start legislation to increase it another cent in the future.

Bette Gay Now Tips Scales at 2 Pounds 4 Ounces

The mighty-mite, little Bette Gay Bonbrest, who entered this world nearly six weeks ago weighing a mere 28 ounces, yesterday on her third visit to the scales tipped the balance two pounds and four ounces.

This ceremony was witnessed yesterday by proud father, Leroy Bonbrest, who confided, "she's gained three ounces since last Sunday." That was the second weighing, he said, the first was the day she was born. The Bonbrests live at 1140 Branch Avenue Southeast and visit George Washington Hospital every night to peer into the incubator at their tiny daughter.

House Unit Approves Pay Rises

New Ramspeck Bill Provides Increases For Thousands in Civil Service Here

The House Civil Service Committee yesterday reported favorably the new Ramspeck bill to alter the base pay, mostly upward, of 180,000 Federal employes of whom more than 23,000 are in the District.

Ramspeck's bill, amending the Classification Act, would cost an estimated 15 million dollars a year, of which only $300,000 would be for positions in the higher brackets. Ramspeck, chairman of the committe, said he would press for action in the House on his measure early next week.

Under terms of the measure, base pay of guards at Federal buildings would be raised from $1200 to $1500 a year and minimum pay of adult charwomen would be established at $1200. Building mechanics would receive raises of $180 a year and a minimum of $1200 would be established for any adult full-time employe.

The measure has been approved by President Roosevelt, the Civil Service Commission, the Budget Bureau and by all organizations of Government employes.

In the Senate, the Ramspeck Bill providing for a liberalized retirement plan for Federal employes was expected to pass early next week. Approved by the Senate Civil Service Committee Thursday, the bill passed the House several weeks ago.

Under its terms, employes may retire optionally at 60 after 30 years' service, the option to be available to the Government as well as to the employe. Contributions of employes to the retirement fund would be increased from 3½ per cent to 5 per cent beginning January 1.

Optional retirement at 62 after 15 years of service also is provided, as is retirement at 55 after 30 years, but with a pro-rated annuity.

After Senate passage, the bill would go back to the House for action on minor amendments which would make acceptance of the plan by elected officials or legislative employes optional.

98 Marriages Licenses Issued In Single Day

Anxiety over an uncertain-appearing future seemed yesterday to be the biggest factor behind the current record-smashing wave of marriage license applicants who have been daily besieging the clerk's office in District Court.

The recordes reveal that in the two weeks since Japan unleased war in the Pacific exactly 746 couples have sought licenses to wed—far more than in an average month when the world was at peace.

Yesterday the clerks called a total of 67 applications a light day. However, they issued 98 licenses during office hours.

Reason for this high total was that under the District's five-day waiting period requirement licenses applied for on Monday are issuable on Friday. And last Monday the office set an all-time single-day high with 119 applications.

Repair Crews Hunt Break In Water Main

From 15 to 20 blocks of northwest Washington were without water last night as three crews of repairmen hunted a break in the main.

The break had not been located at an early hour today.

Sammy Angott Wins World Lightweight Title

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Lew Jenkins Is Beaten In New York

Champion, Forced To Chase His Foe About Ring, Takes 14 of 15 Rounds

By Bob Considine

New York, Dec. 19.—Sammy Angott, a swarthy mauler from Washington, Pa., tonight defeated Mr. and Mrs. Lew Jenkins, of Sweetwater, Tex., for the undisputed lightweight championship of the world.

Heretofore only the world's lightweight champion of the National Boxing Association, Angott cleared up the snarl in the division with a one-sided triumph over the bony, horse-faced Texan who held the world's lightweight championship of New York.

We scored the fight 14 rounds for Angott, 1 for Jenkins—given to Lew by Referee Arthur Susskin because Angott accidentally scored a direct hit on Jenkins' crankcase in the ninth.

Mrs. Jenkins, a beauteous brunette who holds several bar and grill decisions over her ever-loving spouse, suffered a setback, too. From the vantage point of a ringside seat Katie shrilly directed Lew's campaign, but every time one of her piercing commands rang through the half-empty Garden, further woe was visited upon the bleeding face or raw ribs of her spouse.

"Give him the old right!" Katie would scream. And thereupon Lew would move in and catch Angott's right to the skull. "Get bad, Lew!" wildly counseled Katie—and Lew promptly ran into a low punch that put a permanent flinch in his equator and a perpetual wince on his face.

Angott Unable to Tag Foe

When Katie once again yelled "Get bad, Lew," an irate ringsider, quitting the premises before the end of the fight, yelled "He can't get no woise."

That seemed to sum up the feeling of the crowd of 11,343 which paid $26,810 to see a title fight which old timers swore caused the late lightweight champions, Jack McAuliffe and Joe Gans, to revolve fiercely in their mausoleums.

Angott did the best he could with an opponent who was in full retreat through most of the fight. He chased the Texan with long left hooks and overhand rights, easily warding off Jenkins' feeble attempts to box him. Angott was unable to score a knockdown, nor did he ever seem to tag Jenkins just right.

Yanks Chosen No. 1 Team Of '41 Season

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 19.—It probably won't come as a surprise to the other American League clubs, or to the Brooklyn Dodgers, but for the record it may be stated that the New York baseball Yankees have been chosen as the No. 1 team of 1941.

McCarthy's musketeers were so honored for the fifth time in six years by the 85 sports writers participating in the Associated Press poll. Only the Minnesota football team provided any competition. The Gophers polled 165 votes to 198 for the Yanks, with the points awarded on the basis of three for first, two for second, etc.

The Yanks, who were similarly honored in 1936-37-38 and 39, were named for first place by 49 of the experts. Only five failed to rank the world champions in the first three. Minnesota received 25 first place votes, 42 seconds, and 6 thirds.

The pro football Chicago Bears came in a sagging third with 29 points, two more than the Brooklyn Dodgers received. The Bears received two first place votes, as did the Dodgers. The Texas football team ranked fourth, although polling three first-place votes. The only other teams to get first place recognition were the Notre Dame football team, the Washington State basketball team, Ohio State football, and the Duke eleven, each of which was tops in one man's opinion.

37 Records Set or Tied; 14 by Yanks

Champs Break 4 Home Run Marks; Travis One of 10 to Drive in 100 Runs

Thirty-seven records were tied or broken by American League teams and individuals last year and the Champion Yankees very fittingly figured in 14 of the new or equaled marks.

Among the records set or tied by the Yanks were four dealing with home runs. For the twenty-second year the Yanks led in homers and for the twenty-second year they made 100 or more home runs. They compiled 100 or more homers for the seventeenth year in a row, to break another mark. The Yankees' feat of hitting at least one homer in 25 consecutive games was also a record.

Cecil Travis, who represented most of what was commendable about the Washington club last year, came up with new honors yesterday when official American League batting averages revealed he was one of the ten players to drive in more than 100 runs.

Travis, second to Ted Williams of the Red Sox with his .357 batting average, banged 101 runs across the plate, a department in which Joe Di Maggio led the league. Di Maggio produced 125 runs to beat out Jeff Heath, of the Cleveland Indians, for top honors, by two runs. Charley Keller of the Yanks drove in 122 runs and Williams 120.

Once regarded as a weak hitter with men on bases, Travis nailed that suspicion last season when he became the first Washington hitter since Zeke Bonura in 1938 to drive in more than 100 runs. He finished tenth.

Vernon Among Leaders

The averages were a tribute also to Mickey Vernon, who in his first season in the majors was among the league's leading run-producers with a total of 93.

The Washington club was the most impatient team in the league at the plate, according to the base on balls figures. The Nats, collectively, drew only 470 passes during the season. The Red Sox led the league in that item with 683.

Williams was the champion walker of the league with his 145 bases on balls, 24 more than the number drawn by Roy Cullenbine, highly respected slugger of the Browns.

Jimmy Foxx retained his questionable distinction of being the league's champion strikeout king. He fanned 103 times, the seventh year in his career when he "won" strikeout honors. Foxx, however, tied a league record with his total of 105 runs driven in, equaling the mark of Lou Gehrig who drove in more than 100 runs in 13 consecutive seasons.

George Case of the Nats figured in one equaled record. Grounding into only five double plays during the year, Case and Jeff Heath equaled the league's lowest figure in that department.

West Virginia Five Trounces Terps, 63-36

By the Associated Press

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 19.—Coming back with a rush in the last half after leading by six points at the intermission, West Virginia University's basketball team routed the University of Maryland Terrapins, 63-36, at Fort Hill High gym tonight before a crowd of fans.

It was a rough battle all the way, with the Mountaineers completely outplaying their huskier and taller opponents. Experience also favored the West Virginians, who rang up their second straight victory of the year at the expense of the Maryland sophomores. It was the Terps' second straight defeat.

West Virginia played by far the smoother basketball, while Maryland's hoopmen committed many personal fouls with their aggressive type of game. A total of 18 personal fouls were called on the College Parkers and 11 on West Virginia.

Oldest Manager in Business Survived Other Wars; Tells of Pastime Then

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Dec. 19.—If you're worried about what the war's going to do to Major League baseball, come around and talk to Connie Mack.

Connie's life began before the Civil War ended. Since then the oldest manager in the business has watched baseball survive two other wars and, said he today:

"I have faith in my country and trust in our people and we'll be all right again.

"Maybe this will be a long war and maybe it will end overnight the way the others did. But nothing ventured, nothing gained. I've faced other years with better teams than I have now and worried a lot more."

Even as he spoke, word arrived from El Paso, Tex., that one of the Athletics' pitchers, Rankin Johnson, has enlisted in the Navy. Four other players, Sam Chapman, Al Brancato, Don Richmond and Porter Vaughan, already had joined the colors.

Connie, who'll be 79 next Tuesday, was 3 when the Civil War ended.

When the Spanish-American conflict broke out in 1898, he was a 36-year-old manager of Milwaukee, in the old Western League that eventually became the American League and brought him to Philadelphia.

"That wasn't much of a war," Connie recalled, "but baseball suffered pretty badly through it. People couldn't get news of the war as easily as they can now. The newspapers had bulletin boards in front of their offices and the people would stand all afternoon waiting to read the latest news. When word came of Dewey's victory at Manila Bay the whole country went wild.

"After the war baseball quickly recovered. We were caught short in Milwaukee. We hadn't gone ahead with improvements during the war we should have. But Ban Johnson, who was president of the

Giants Spike Rumors; Deals Cost $300,000

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 19.—Steamed up over those whispers that they aren't putting any money into new talent, the baseball Giants revealed today that they spent $300,000 during 1941 to buy ball players in their rebuilding campaign.

"What's more," Secretary Eddie Brannick added, "it cost us another $100,000 amortizing portions of the contracts of players involved in the deals we made. Does that look like pinching pennies, no matter what those Brooklyn people say?

"We've also allowed more boys and girls—knotholers, y'know—into the Polo Grounds free than any other club in the National League. No other club even let in as many as 100,000 and all seven other clubs combined admitted less than 290,000. We had more than 200,000 in during 1941. What does McDonald (John McDonald, Brooklyn Dodger secretary), say about that?"

Although Giant officials refused to break down the $300,000 figure into individual deals and price-tags, they admitted that amount was spent in between 12 and 20 deals, which brought such ball players to New York as Johnny Mize, Billy Werber, Hank Leiber, Fiddler Bill McGee, Bob Bowman and Morrie Arnovich.

Johnstown Halts Locals At Stadium

Last-Period Spurt Wins for Bluebirds; Courteau Accounts For Eagles' Scores

By Jack Munhall

Against the same team that it was born, the Washington Eagles' winning streak expired last night in a 3-2 match with the Johnstown Bluebirds at Riverside Stadium.

A paid attendance of 2022 watched the Bluebirds deal the Eagles their first setback in five matches and by the same score as Washington beat Johnstown just a week ago.

With the victory, engineered in the final period, the Bluebirds regained the ever-changing Eastern Amateur League lead by one point over the idle New York Rovers.

George Coombs' goal at 17:27 of the third period decided the best played match of the season and took the edge off a magnificent performance by Washington's Paul Courteau, who fired both Eagles' goals and otherwise comported himself in excellent style.

Sharing the hero's mantle, from the local side, with Courteau was broad-shouldered Craig McClelland, the Eagles' new goalie, who, in his second match here, did nothing to disturb the impression he created in his debut that he would be Washington's best net tender in history.

Goalie Not to Blame

On none of the three Johnstown goals did McClelland have a chance, the first two coming when he lay flat on the ice, and the last occurring because of the negligence of the Eagles' defensemen, Len Burrage and Art Lessard.

The cleanest match here in sometime, this swift and brilliantly contested fray was conspicious in that it produced only four penalties—two against each—which, as any veteran fan can tell you, is something of a record for a meeting between these teams.

Washington was first to score, Courteau connecting at 5:17 of the second period on a double pass from Freddy Weaver and Ernie Mundey, but that was the last lead the Eagles experienced.

George Boll, roly-poly defenseman, knotted the count for the

Uclans Face 'Gators Today; Game Tossup

By the Associated Press

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 19.—The U. C. L. A. Bruins and the Florida 'Gators, a couple of teams that specialize in wide open, all-or-nothing football, meet here tomorrow afternoon in an intersectional game expected to draw a crowd of about 10,000.

Coach Babe Horrell and his U. C. L. A. squad of 33 arrived from Los Angeles early today and went through a light drill.

Coach Tom Lieb sent the Florida squad through its final practice session at Gainesville this afternoon. The players will reach here tomorrow morning.

There was little to choose between the two teams in weight or on the basis of their records. Both average about 193 pounds in the line and 182 in the backfield. Each has won four games and lost five. Also on the Bruins' record, however, is a 7-to-7 tie with Southern California in their game two weeks ago. The Cators beat Georgia Tech, 14 to 7, in their last game November 22.

Lieb's tentative starting line-up included nine of the 14 seniors on the Florida squad.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The New York Giants will eat a hearty breakfast at Chicago tomorrow morning and then be led into Wrigley Field to keep a date with the executioners. In a sentence, that would seem to size up the battle between the Giants and the Bears for the national pro football title.

POVICH

Never has a contending team been held in such contempt in a playoff game as the Giants. And it isn't exactly the Giants' fault. They have happened into this thing at a time when the Bears are giving evidence that they are the best pro team ever to set foot on a gridiron. The pregame outlook has boiled down to the question not of who'll win, but by how many points the Bears will beat the Giants.

The Giants weren't hot even in their own Eastern Division. The Brooklyn Dodgers licked 'em twice, and the Giants had only slim margins of victory over the Redskins, who were no balls of fire this season. Operating in the tougher Western Division, the Bears lost only one game and averaged better than 30 points a game against its opposition.

At last reports, the Giants weren't even in good health. George Franck, fleetest of their backs; Center Mel Hein and his understudy, Lou de Fillipo, and Tackle Orville Tuttle came out of the last Brooklyn game with injuries that are still hurting. The Bears are no club to send a sickly team against.

The T-parties George Halas has been throwing this season are, of course, the reason why the Bears are overwhelming favorites. Such backs as George McAfee, Sid Luckman, Joe Maniaci, Norman Standlee, Hugh Gallarneau, Ray Nolting and Bill Osmanski, operating behind that big Bear line are not the type to be stopped for 60 minutes. Even in the game they lost this year, to the Packers, the Bears scored 14 points. They squared matters with the Packers last week, 33-14, incidentally.

When the Giants Beat the Bears

At that, the Giants can get a moral lift out of past Bear-Giant history. Upsets of the type they hope for tomorrow can happen, and the Giants, themselves have proved it. We take you back to 1935, when again it was the Giants and the Bears in the title game. The Bears didn't win that one.

In that 1935 playoff, the Bears were almost as heavy favorites as they will be tomorrow. They had raced through the regular 13-game schedule unbeaten, and were meeting, in the Giants, a team that had lost five games on the road to the eastern championship. The score that afternoon was: Giants, 30; Bears, 13. The Bears were outsmarted that day by Stout Steve Owen. The Giants' coach, after a morning survey of the ice-covered gridiron, hurriedly sent downtown for 30 pairs of basketball shoes and sent his team on the field shod in rubber treading. The Giants did all right on the ice while the Bears discovered that their cleats were little better than skates.

We don't expect the Giants to win tomorrow, but if we had to pick one team in the league to beat the Bears, our choice would be the Giants. For a long time, now, we've harbored the impression that the Giants play the smartest, if not the best football in the league, and only the smart team can cope with the Bears' T-formation.

Originally, the T-attack was designed to gain ground against a seven-man line, but in the Giants the Bears will be meeting the original exponent of the five-man line. Steve Owen started the five-man line business and was laughed at, but one by one the clubs have adopted it against the Bears.

Halas in the last couple of years has acted to meet the new defenses, however, and his T-formation continues to click. He came up with two potent rookies, too, in Hugh Gallarneau and Norman Standlee who were grounded in the T at Stanford under Clark Shaughnessy, co-inventor with Halas of that style of play.

Tradition Also Faces a Beating

For the Bears, Owen uses a special sort of sliding defense, in an effort to counteract the slick ball handling of Quarter Back Sid Luckman, the man who makes the Bears' attack move. There is nothing static about the Bears' offense. It's great charm, aside from its man-in-motion effects, is the latitude it gives Luckman after the ball is snapped. The play that develops is dependent chiefly on what Luckman has seen in the opposition's defensive setup. The play, be it a pass or run, goes wherever Luckman thinks he sees a chink in the defense armor.

It will not be surprising to see the Giants score against the Bears. Most every team does. But only one club has outscored the Bears this season. When Halas turns his backs loose, football's greatest attacking force is truly in motion. Defensively, the Bears have been too good. Perhaps it's because the accent has been on attack and the club's confidence that they can outscore whoever they play.

It has been one of the league's traditions, ever since the East-West divisions were created in 1933, that no champion has ever repeated. The Bears, you know, are the defending champions, and all the evidence points to both tradition and the Giants getting a fine lacing tomorrow.

Turner May Block Proposed Bettina-Savold Fight Set Here

The announcement out of New York that Melio Bettina and Lee Savold have been signed for a fight here January 29 has caused a slight tremor in local pugilistic circles.

Although no official word has been received from him, the fight is apparently being staged by Johnny Attell at Uline Arena. If that is the case Attell will find an obstacle to his plans in the person of Joe Turner, rival promoter.

Turner, who claims he holds a contract on Savold's services, will demand he be reimbursed for expenses accrued while preparing for a Lee Savold-Harry Bobo show scheduled last October that didn't take place.

Ready to Argue

The veteran promoter will take his case to the District Boxing Commission if need be, he announced yesterday.

"Savold has a contract with me and it has not been fulfilled. If he tries to fight for anybody else before fighting for me I'll go before the commission, and farther if necessary. If they (the January 29 promoters) want to reimburse me $1000 I won't stand in the way of their show. After all, it cost me that much in expenses," Turner added.

Navy Grid Stars Will Command Middy Regiment

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 19.—The Naval Academy's midshipman regiment will be in command of football players from now until April 24, academy officials announced today.

Willis E. Maxson, of Austin, Tex., varsity end, has been named regimental commander and will serve until February 24, when he will be replaced as a "five striper" by Robert J. Zoeller, another varsity end of New Albany, Ind.

Extra! Walter Haight (the Colt) Finally Wins, Paying His Backers $31.60 Mutuel

Two-Year-Old Colt Wins Impressively At Charles Town

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 19.—Despite the name, Walter Haight, a 2-year-old son of Mowlee and Nora's Grace picked today's feature race as the spot for the first victory of his career. Facing seven rivals over the 7-furlong course, Walter Haight came around the leaders in the stretch and withstood a hard drive to win by a half length. Mrs. C. L. Larkin's Top Transit, the pacemaker most of the way, was second, and C. Lorenz's Hedda Gab was third.

It was to the tune of a $31.60 mutuel that Walter Haight triumphed. He was clocked over the heavy, holding track in time of 1:30 3-5. A crowd of 5000 saw the race, named the Panhandle Purse, and I don't want any wisecracks about that.

Jockey A. Carr, a Florida boy who has a high percentage of winners here, put up a whale of a ride on Walter Haight and judged the finish excellently. Owner Alan Clark came up from his farm to assist Trainer A. Gibson in saddling the colt.

The big disappointment of the race was Mrs. G. W. Church's Quiz

Alan Clarke's colt, Walter Haight (indicated by arrow), never had been to the races when this picture was made during a workout at Bowie last March, but he was still able to show his heels to Walter Haight I (at left), the alleged writer. So what happens yesterday? Haight, the colt, at last overcomes the handicap of that name and wins at Charles Town!

Bears Reach Peak Condition for Title Battle With Giants

Champions Confident Of Victory

New York Club Also Rounds Into Shape With Return Of Hein, Franck

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 19.—The Chicago Bears, champions of professional football, frolicked through a final two-hour workout today for their title game with the New York Giants in Wrigley Field Sunday.

Judging from their attitude, the Bears are confident. There has been more fun than hard work in this week's drills, which is the way coaches would have it. Coach George Halas and his assistants have been striving to maintain the peak the Bears reached when they knocked off the Green Bay Packers last Sunday in the Western division playoff struggle.

"When the team is loose and laughing and having a lot of fun at practice we know it's ready," Halas said. "When it's tightened up, straining and forcing, we feel that it is not ready."

The Bears worked on defensive formations and probably will take the field with 16 such formations, the same number they used against the Packers.

The Giants will roll into Chicago tomorrow and will go through a limbering-up workout in the afternoon. The New Yorkers will enter the contest after a two-week rest, a respite that came in handy for recovery of two injured players hurt in a bruising contest against an inspired Brooklyn Dodger eleven with whom the Giants closed their regular season in defeat, 21-7.

Capt. Mel Hein, eight-time all-league center; George Franck, former Minnesota halfback, and the Giants' veteran blocker, Nello Falaschi, have recovered from injuries sustained against the Dodgers, but Coach Steve Owen is undecided about starting them. Dominic Principe, a Fordham fullback, may take Falaschi's blocking assignment, and two other rookies from Fordham, Len Eshmont and Lou de Filippo, probably will open the game at halfback and center, respectively.

Preston Wins Big Upset In Gloves Bout

Before a record-breaking quarter-final round audience of 1800 spectators, Preston Drew, of the Apollo Athletic Club emerged as the outstanding warrior of last night's Golden Gloves fights by scoring one of the major upsets of the tournament at Uline Arena.

After three smartly fought rounds, Drew came up with a hair-line decision over the highly touted Buddy Thomas, of the Prince Georges County Police Boys Club as the boys pounded their way into the semifinal round, due January 2.

Nick Latsios, defending his title in the welterweight division, scored a stunning second-round knockout over Johnny Carroll, standard bearer from the Apollo Athletic, to advance to the semifinal round.

Latsios nailed Carroll coming off the ropes with a hard right hand shot to the jaw and the Apolloite went down in a heap. Referee Marty Gallagher didn't bother to count him out.

Charley Petro, one of the favorites to win the lightweight class, scored an impressive one minute and 32 seconds knockout over Eddie Hoffman, of the Merrick Club in the second session of their argument.

Tech Quintet Wins, 37-14, Over Blair

A Montgomery Blair basketball team which boasts a single veteran last night was the third straight victim of Tech High, the Maroon taking a 37-14 victory on the suburban court.

Weir, the Silver Spring club's only letterman, scored four points to share honors for the losers with Bartman.

Charlotte Hall, Minus Cady, Wins, 28 to 7

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlotte Hall, Md., Dec. 19.—With Frank Cady out of the game after the first two minutes of play because of a roughness penalty, the Charlotte Hall quintet did not suffer unduly by the loss of its usual star as the Cadets won, 28-7, over Woodward of Washington here yesterday. It was the winners' sixth straight triumph.

Woodward guard Noyes was the lone member of the loser's team to eke out a basket here and there as he made three goals and a charity shot for 7 points.

The Charlotte Hall five went into heavy action during the first half and blanked Woodward, 12-0, before Noyes could ring up his markers.

Steve Coffee and Al Ruh starred for the victors with 9 points each.

Wash.-Lee High Defeats Triplett, 53-22

Washington-Lee High cagers pulled their season's average over the .500 mark last night by overpowering a Triplett High five from Mount Jackson, Va., 53-22, at Ballston. The Little Generals took command in the early stages and were never headed.

Bobby Phillips, the Generals new addition at the right forward post, again led his team's attack, collecting 15 points for high-scoring honors. Buck Newsom, recruited from the gridiron squad, tied for runnerup honors with Capt. Charlie Whetzel of the losers with 10 tallies.

The game was marred by rough play and the visiting crew was forced to finish the fourth period with only four men on the court, after two men had been put out of the game on personal fouls and another because of "unsportamanlike conduct."

The victory was the second in two nights for the Generals, who downed another Valley team, Stanley High last night. Earlier in the week the Arlingtonians were trounced by Tech High.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 19.—What'll you have?

BOXING?—The conviction of John Roxborough on a "numbers" charge, along with a former mayor of Detroit and Detroit police officials, probably means that Roxborough is finished as comanager of Joe Louis. At least actively. If so, it breaks up the most remarkable crew of managers the fight game ever saw, though it will have no effect on the combination's one fighter—the Champ.

CONSIDINE

We wouldn't know much about the charges on which Roxborough was found guilty, but we do know that between Roxborough, Comanager Julian Black and Jack Blackburn, Louis' trainer, the champ probably has been better handled than any other fighter. There has never been the slightest shadow of doubt about Louis' fights—and that can hardly be said of any heavyweight predecessor. He has fought them all, never fouled, never quit, never needed a tanker to lengthen his winning streak, never needed the fruits of managerial conniving.

The combine scrupulously saw that Joe got his share of every purse—his share being 50 per cent. Roxborough shrewdly invested Joe's money in real estate and persuaded him to buy the big farm to which he will some day retire. The ring game will always consider Louis a most honestly handled fighter.

Roxborough was the business brains of the combine, and well-equipped, for he is suavely college bred and a lawyer. It was he who found Louis fighting in a cheap amateur match, gave him a few old suits of clothes, and enabled him to get a $25 a week job in the Ford plant.

BASEBALL?—Connie Mack says that the war will exterminate holdouts. We doubt it. Like England, there will always be a holdout. We'll have them next spring even if they must dispatch their letters of indignation from a bomb shelter. It will always be thus in a sport when 16 owners try to sign 400-odd and often terperamental players for less dough than any of them want to accept.

One baseball problem that seems certain to arise this year is the right of a buyer to get his money back if Uncle Sam takes the article, or human, bought. For instance the Giants paid $50,000 for Johnny Mize and presumably have pressed the money in the hands of those two well-known altruists, Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey, over their bashful protests. But suppose the Army decides early next April that it needs Mize "for the duration." Can the Giants get their dough back?

We suspect that old Judge Landis will have a number of such cases to deliberate upon, before MacPhail captures Hitler.

Note to baseball buyers: Most draft-proof baseball figures—Dolph Camilli (3 children); Red Ormsby (12).

BASKETBALL?—In the next few weeks New York will be the crossroads of basketball. Tomorrow night at the Garden, Oklahoma comes in to meet St. John's and Syracuse plays N. Y. U. The holidays will bring on Oregon State, the University of Washington, Southern California, Wyoming, Colorado, Rice, Creighton and Rhode Island State.

Rice, which meets Fordham, will bring along Bob Kinney, 6-foot-6, 205 pound All-America center. Southern Cal's team of sun-kissed beauties is made up exclusively of Midwesterners. Oregon State seems to have raided the vicinity of Southern Cal's gymnasium for its talent, and brings to town John Mandic, the Coast's best center. Washington may have the fastest team in the country, with Norman Dalthrop, 143-pound forward, setting the pace. Colorado is the sleeper. Rhode Island State's Stutz Modzelewski scored 509 points as a soph and started out this season with a career mark of 1260—as opposed to Hank Luisetti's record of 1596. His team this season ran up 110 points against the alumni, 74 against St. Joseph's and beat some club the other night by a score of 103-to-something. They're still tabulating how many Modzelewski scored.

FOOTBALL?—Irregardless of the weather, as we say along Jacobs Beach, the pro bowl game should pack the Polo Grounds January 4 and produce a good chunk for the Navy Relief Society. The game is a transplant job, and the ground may be frozen that day, but it is certain to bloom into a first class football show. Because its reputation is insured. If the Bears roll over the Giants, everybody will want to get a look at this wonder eleven. If the Giants pull the upset of the grid season and beat the Bears this Sunday, the pro bowl will constitute a grand home-coming. As for the opposition, the All-Stars, any team which has Sammy Baugh, Ace Parker and Don Hutson in its ranks will constitute the "mousetrap" which would lure a capacity patronage.

Brewers Trip Sphas, 37-27; Gain 2d Place

The Washington Brewers last night forged into second place in the American Professional Basketball League at Turner's Arena, defeating the Champion Philadelphia Sphas, 37 to 27.

It was Washington's second victory of the season over the five-time league titleholders, the Brewers having won earlier in the season in the Quaker City, 46 to 39, after three five-minute extra periods.

Washington grabbed the lead and never relinquished it, despite the absence from the line-up of its 6-foot-7 center, Herman Knupple. Ben Goldfaden, the erstwhile George Washington University captain, plugging the center gap, played admirably, as he ran off with high point honors as a result of four field goals and two free tosses. In the last period of the game Goldfaden ran wild as he fired in three goals.

Bethesdans Beaten, 29-25, By Eastern

With a hot streak in the third period, during which Bethesda-Chevy Chase basketers went scoreless, Eastern High notched its third straight victory yesterday at the Barons' court, 29-25.

In every quarter but the third Bethesda held an edge. It led after the first, 7-5, although Eastern chalked up the first three points of the game. At the half the hosts were out front, 15-12, and in the final period they outscored the White Tide, 10 points to 4.

But the next-to-last period was a different story. In that one Mike Lieb started matters with one of the five side shots which gave him scoring honors. Then it was George Pigott's turn, and he came through with a pair of long tosses. Jim Brady was next on a shot as lengthy as either of Pigott's, Lieb had another two-point fling, and then Capt. Neil Craig finished things. He was fouled by Al Sherline as he dropped a snow-bird and made good his charity throw.

Though it was in there swinging, Bethesda's only real scoring chance was fizzled by Bob Cremins, who missed two foul shots in a row.

Along with Larry Capone, the Tide's fifth starter, players who participated in the winning spree displayed a clever and well-balanced attack. Toward the end, however, they faltered badly as the Barons' Clayton Rogers slipped home five straight points.

Orange Bowl To Be Refereed By John Lynch

By International News Service

Miami, Fla., Dec. 19.—John J. Lynch, of Holy Cross, today was named referee for the New Year's Day Orange Bowl football game between Texas Christian and the University of Georgia. Working with Lynch will be Roscoe Minton, of Indiana, umpire; S. D. Jackson, of Emory and Henry, head linesman, and Charles Y. Swartz, of Rice, field judge. The selections were announced by William G. Ward president of the Orange Bowl committee.

Halloran to Referee Sugar Bowl Contest

New Orleans, Dec. 19.—The Mid-winter Sports Association today announced the selection of William T. Halloran, of Providence, R. I., as referee for the New Year's Day Sugar Bowl game between Fordham and Missouri. M. G. Bolz, of Nebraska, will be umpire; Albert Maginess, of Lehigh, will be head linesman, and Bat Shunatona, of Oklahoma, will be field judge.

Stiff Workout Awaits East All-Star Squad

New Orleans, Dec. 19.—A stiff workout was on tomorrow's schedule for the East All-Stars tonight as their special train neared New Orleans, where they will meet college stars representing the West in the Sugar Bowl January 3. Coach Andy Kerr, of Colgate, who will direct the East squad along with Minnesota's Bernie Bierman, said that after tomorrow's workout in Tulane Stadium, the squad would move over to a high school field in Biloxi, Miss., for subsequent drills.

Another Tough Drill In Store for T. C. U.

Fort Worth, Tex., Dec. 19.—One more tough scrimmage will be held tomorrow by the Texas Christian football team before the Horned Frogs forget about offense temporarily to concentrate on defensive assignments for their New Year's Day game in the Orange Bowl with the Georgia Bulldogs. Coach Dutch Meyer spent the entire first week of practice for the game perfecting the offense he hopes will be effective against the Georgians.

Duke Engages in Brief Punting Scrimmage

Durham, N. C., Dec. 19 (U.P.).—Duke's unbeaten Blue Devils, who leave tomorrow for a five-day Christmas vacation, went through a brief punting scrimmage today in preparation for the transplanted Rose Bowl game with Oregon State here January 1.

St. Louis Gives Missouri Team Noisy Welcome

St. Louis, Dec. 19 (AP).—The Sugar Bowl Special carrying the University of Missouri's Big Six Conference football champions toward their New Year's Day engagement with Fordham at New Orleans paused here late today for a noisy greeting by alumni, relatives and just plain fans.

Four full teams and two extras—46 men—are making the trip.

Columbus U. Quintet Tops Rider, 56-44

It was a case of local boys making good last night at Tech gym as Columbus University, back in the basketball wars after a ten-year layoff, came form behind to win its second straight game, 56-44, over Rider College, of Trenton, N. J.

Presenting a lineup dominated by former all-high stars of the District, the Explorers in addition handed Rider its second consecutive loss after a four-game winning streak. Duke University five romped to a 55-29 victory over the Trenton club Thursday night.

Probably the smallest crowd of the collegiate season saw the battle, in which Columbus triumphed with a torrid second-half drive. Earlier it had taken a healthy lead, gone behind and then rallied to lead at halftime.

Berry, Stanton Shine

Bob Berry and Lenny Stanton were very much in evidence as the game started. They accounted for an 11-4 margin for the Explorers with only a few minutes gone. It was Ray Barrett, a former Georgetown Prep star, who put the eventual losers back in the game on a series of five points, earning a 21-16 lead.

Two minutes of the half were left when George West dropped a cinch shot putting Columbus on the long end of a 22-21 count and the advantage lasted. Gerald Burns came through with a long 2-pointer, voiding Ackman's tap shot.

Earn Wide Margin

The second session was 1 minute old when the Explorers had boosted their edge to 29-23 on goals by "Soup" Hancock, Berry and Acky Viana, and from there in they were never headed. At various points they were out front, 35-25, 44-30 and 49-35.

A curious ending was given the affair when, 30 seconds before the gun, hefty Johnny Reges went in for the first time. It wasn't too late for him to share in the scoring, however. He slammed a bank shot into the ring the final second.

Barrett, playing the pivot for the invaders, topped scoring for both clubs with 13 points. Close behind was Columbus' Berry with 12.

Explorers, Lockhaven Teachers Play Tonight

The Columbus University Explorers tonight play their third game in four nights at McKinley Tech High gym with the Pennsylvania State Teachers College from Lock Haven, Pa.

The Teachers come to Washington with an undefeated record having defeated the Bloomsburg Teachers and Dickinson College, the latter by 45 to 36, and having won an exhibition game in the Penn State clinic, at State College, Pa., late in November.

Trainer of Missouri Tigers Says His Boys Will Tame Rams

Missourians Toughest Bunch He's Seen, and He's Trained Some Pretty Rugged Outfits

By the Associated Press

Columbia, Mo., Dec. 19.—Missouri's muscle man, Trainer Ollie DeVictor, has rubbed out Charley horses for a score of All-Americans on some of the country's leading football teams.

So when he says Missouri is the toughest outfit he ever massaged and should wham the Rams in the Sugar Bowl, there's a tone of reason in his voice.

DeVictor left today with the Tigers' 46-man traveling squad for training quarters at Edgewater Park, Miss. Somewhere in his luggage were a tattered black suit, frayed blue shirt and a stained necktie which has splashed in more gravy than a chicken giblet.

He wore the same apparel the first time Missouri won this season. He continued to wear it. The team continued to win.

"So help me, I'll have those clothes on at the Sugar Bowl game, no matter if the mayor invites me to cocktails," he vowed.

This is the fifth time he has trained a team for a bowl game since 1921—twice with Pittsburgh and once with Penn State in the Rose Bowl and with Missouri two years ago in the Orange Bowl.

"I've trained teams for Pop Warner, Jock Sutherland and Andy Kerr and have worked with a score or more All-Americas," the Charley horse chaser related, "but this year's Missouri team is the most rugged bunch of boys I've seen. They are in good shape and should beat Fordham."

Greene, Tulsa Star, Quits North-South

Tulsa, Dec. 19 (AP).—Charley Greene, University of Tulsa's All-Missouri tackle, said today he had withdrawn from the North-South All-Star football game to be played at Montgomery, Ala., December 27.

Greene said he had decided not to risk an injury which would keep him out of the Tulsa-Texas Sun Bowl game at El Paso, Tex., New Year's Day. He previously had planned to play in both games.

$100,000 Anita 'Cap Slated For March 21

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Dec. 19.—If Santa Anita Park succeeds in staging a postponed turf meeting, the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap may be run March 21 instead of March 7.

General Manager Charles H. Strub instructed his racing secretary, Webb Everett, to map out a new condition book for the first 10 days of the meeting, to be used if and when the track gains permission from Army authorities to open.

The State horse racing board has assured the plant it would get its 55 days of racing—if and when—and dates for the important stakes will have to be moved back. Thus the $50,000 derby, set for February 25, might be held March 7, the original big handicap date.

15 Crack Sprinters Race in Tropical's Opening Feature

Winter Race Season Starts With 21-Day Meeting at Miami; 2000 Horses There

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 19.—Fifteen top-notch sprinters will flash around the lightning-fast Tropical Park track tomorrow in the feature event of the card opening Florida's winter horse racing season.

Maxwell Howard's The Chief, in at 109 pounds, caught the fancy of many selectors trying to pick the winner of the $2500 race—the Inaugural Handicap at 6 furlongs for 3-year-olds and up.

Jammed entry lists reflected the uneasiness of the owners of some 2000 thoroughbreds quartered here. Around the paddock was a feeling that in view of the war and the uncertain opening of California tracks it would be wise to collect a share of early purses.

The field for the Inaugural was picked from among 27 nominees, and far more horses were available for the other seven races than could be used.

Other contenders, with assigned weights, are Aboyne, 108 pounds; Benefactor, 116; City Talk, 108; De Kalb, 106; Donna Leona, 108; Doublerap, 108; Doubt Not, 108; Happy Lark, 112; Homeward Bound, 108; Maechance, 110; Speed to Spare, 117; Sweet Willow, 116, and Taking Ways, 112.

Tropical starts its 21-day winter meeting under new ownership. The track now is in the hands of such turf figures as Herbert Bayard Swope, H. L. Straus, A. Charles Schwartz, Gurnee Munn, Charles A. Munn and others.

Purses of $187,100 are offered for the meeting, the management sticking to the former $1000 minimum.

Horsemen will watch tomorrow's opening day attendance and pari-mutuel play for an indication of what kind of season to expect. Last year an inaugural crowd of 9616 bet $252,833.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRY FLYING, $4.40, $3.40, $3.60; LAST BET, $7.60, $5.80; JUNIOR PROM, $7.00.

TRY FLYING was sent to the front early under hustling tactics, was rated while setting the pace, responded to pressure in the last eighth and was drifting out slightly while drawing away. LAST BET was within striking distance from the start, saved ground entering the stretch and came well at the end while under punishment. JUNIOR PROM was nearest to the leader from the start and faltered slightly in the closing test. ADOLF lacked speed for a quarter and closed willingly while saving ground.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but GOODWINE. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 2:09. Off at 2:09½. Winner, J. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SKEETER, $5.40, $3.60, $2.60; QUESTRE, $4.80, $4.00; HONEYMAID, $4.20.

SKEETER went through on the inside to take command after a half, drew out gradually and won with speed in reserve. QUESTRE took command on the backstretch without being extended, but was no match when challenged by the winner. HONEYMAID had speed to take command approaching the first turn, but faltered early.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:34½. Off at 2:35½. Winner, A. Lopez' ch. f. (3), by Priory—My Wish. Trained by A. Lopez. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:33.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MACK'S HOPE, $10.00, $5.20, $3.60; PETIT FOURS, $3.80, $2.80; FAIR ROCK, $3.60.

MACK'S HOPE, steadied while racing forwardly on the inside, came through on the rail entering the stretch and, under punishment, was up in the concluding strides. PETIT FOURS, outrun early, came boldly between horses to improve his position and closed with good energy. FAIR ROCK was in close quarters at the first turn, shook off SLOW PACE to take command, but weakened suddenly in the stretch drive. SEPLIN raced wide and forwardly early and quit.

Daily Double—SKEETER and MACK'S HOPE Paid $31.60.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:04½. Off at 3:05. Winner, P. H. Fauiconer's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RIPPLING ON, $24.00, $13.40, $6.60; PITTSBURGH, $6.40, $3.80; PURPORT, $3.20.

RIPPLING ON took command early, was rated when PITTSBURGH went to the front and came again under pressure in the stretch run. PITTSBURGH was steadied early, forged to the front on the backstretch, but was allowed to drift out in the stretch run. PURPORT saved ground early, came through on the rail entering the stretch and barely failed to get up. ROUGH GOING was steadied when unable to get to the front early and was forced out by PITTSBURGH in the final drive.

FIFTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $600; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:32½. Winner, Alan Clarke's b. c. (2), by Mowlee—Nora's Grace. Trained by A. Gibson. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:30⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WALTER HAIGHT, $31.60, $10.80, $6.20; TOP TRANSIT, $4.40, $3.80; HEDDA GAB, $5.60.

WALTER HAIGHT, steadied within striking distance in the early stages, began improving his position leaving the backstretch, came out for racing room and was forced wide at the final bend, but withstood a long drive under good handling to be up in the final 10 yards. TOP TRANSIT took command at once, opened a good lead, but was tiring ridden and weakened in the closing sixteenth. HEDDA GAB was closest to the pacemaker from the start, was hard in the final test.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For all ages. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:03½. Off at 4:03⅘. Winner, J. Dobbs' b. g. (4), by Westwick—Tricky. Trained by C. P. Miles. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:52⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TINY TRICK, $7.40, $4.40, $3.20; SIR BROADSIDE, $4.80, $3.40.

TINY TRICK, under perfect handling, saved ground when outrun early, came inside of three horses when making his move entering the stretch and then drew away under mild punishment. SIR BROADSIDE lacked speed when horses to improve his position and extreme outside, got to the front entering the stretch, moved with a rush on the with the winner in the closing test. TAKITFROME forced the pace in the first mile and tired thereafter. MY ONE had early speed to set the pace, but stopped to a walk when headed.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:32. Winner, C. Lorenz's b. g. (3), by Zacaweista—Judge Hay. Trained by C. F. Miles. Value to winner, $425; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 2:01.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAY JUDGE, $8.80, $3.00, $3.60; SANDERS, $9.40, $6.20; YANKEE LAD, $3.40.

SAY JUDGE trailed far back for the half, came to the inside while improving his position, rallied gamely and drew out. SANDERS was within striking distance from the start, worked his way to the lead briefly in the early stretch, but was no match for the winner. YANKEE LAD set the early pace and tired gradually after being displaced. HOT MAN took command after 3 furlongs, but faltered badly in the closing test.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Why don't he do that more often. Of course, I'm talking about Walter Haight, the colt. He certainly turned on the oil yesterday. I had a little bit of that $31.60 pay-off, but that was nothing compared to the fact that I picked him right here in this column. I put him as strong as I could in the paper without having the insane asylum people after me with a net. I'll admit he surprised me in a way, but he proved he is a pretty fair horse at that. Of course, I can't take any credit for the victory. All the backslaps should go to Jockey A. Carr, Owner Alan Clarke and Trainer A. Gibson. There is one thing certain, no horse has never been treated better than Walter Haight. After campaigning early in the summer, he was taken back to Clarke's Huntington farm and allowed to roam the fields and wade in the stream. That's why he came back to the races this fall a much improved colt. Then again it must be remembered that he went into the race a maiden against juveniles which have won and, in the instance of Quiz Kid, a youngster for whom somebody has some Kentucky Derby plans. It is true that Quiz Kid got in trouble going to the first turn, but the fact that he lacked early speed was a factor. Perhaps he doesn't like the heavy going. Maybe Walter Haight heard Owner Clarke saying in the paddock that he was going to be sent to Howard County, Md., for a winter vacation. But whatever the reason, Walter Haight really ran for all the tea in China. See you on the rail for the last time today.

BILL.

First race—HI BLAZE will have the right race track and will be hard to beat, providing he can get off the reserve list. SIR L. was a winner here and deserves respect. SATIN ROYCE has speed and belongs close.

Second race—SUN SALVATOR was all over the track in the early stages of his last. If this one gets clear sailing he will take it all. BLUE MELODY was a winner here while getting the best of the racing luck. RING UP for the show end.

At the Post

Third race—I'm going to sink or swim with ASTERISK in this field. TOR'S NURSE and BILL K. are best of the other eligibles. DOCKET will be a threat if in action.

Fourth race—PEP TALK deserves the top kick. Probably will have Gildewell in the saddle and I see no reason for mistakes. MINSTREL WHIT and GLENBROOM will be factors in this company.

Fifth race—GLORIOUS TIME was right on the heels of two of the best horses on the grounds last out and figures to beat these. BECOMLY and the McSCHWABEL ENTRY of GRAN COSA and FRITZ probably will account for the place and show.

Sixth race—ROUGH TIME appears excellently placed in the day's feature. Should carry 118 pounds to victory over this gang. SARAN'S last was excellent. ALDRIDGE for the minor award.

Seventh race—SPEED SHIP won in a gallop at a mile and a quarter and promises to repeat at this two miles. COURT BLENHEIM and BABA to take care of the others.

Substitute race—If this event is used I'll take GOLD SWEEP, BOBBY BUNTING and PACK SADDLE.

Best bet—SPEED SHIP.

Charles Town Ends 'District' Racing Today

By a Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 19.—The Charles Town Jockey Club brings to a close today its 18-day session here in the Shenandoah Valley. Already the most successful December meeting held here since the track first operated in 1933, the prospect of mild weather promises to bring the oval a banner valedictory crowd. Racing Secretary Fred Burton has arranged an excellent card, topped by the Waterford Handicap, named for the ancestral home of President A. J. Boyle in England.

Mrs. J. Y. Christmas' Rough Time has been alloted the top weight of 11 pounds for this test of a mile and an eighth and is likely to march postward as the favorite. The son of Grand Time and Trap Rock has won a handicap and finished second in another over this track. Coupled with him in the betting will be Mrs. M. R. Lewis' Wire Me, one of the lightweights, with 104 pounds.

Aldridge in Line-Up

Among others in the line-up is Aldridge, the property of J. E. Irvine and winner of three races here. Aldridge must carry 114 pounds.

Others named to start in the top attraction are J. Sands' Jungle Moon; J. H. Richardson's Rancher's Girl; C. W. Davids' Storminess; L. L. Chambers' Lauderkin; A. V. Galotta's speedy and useful Saran; Mrs. L. H. Wynkopp's Orinoco; Mrs. W. C. McCullough's Jumelus; M. B. Goss' My One and Mrs. Mary Miller's Centerville.

Another race, which has its decision here each year, is the Endurance, a 2-mile marathon grind. The secondary number will serve in the au revoir spot on the program and those named to start are Mystic Man, winner of two here; Court Blenheim, who was good enough to annex a one mile and nine-sixteenths race; Baba, Brookie Boy, The Loom, Quill, Engles Hope, Peppery, Ovando, Dotwill, Slugger and Speed Ship, who scored a clever victory here only Thursday.

Walter Haight Wins First Race of Career

Kid. Winner of five straight races, Quiz Kid was off slowly as usual and met interference going to the clubhouse turn and failed to close with his accustomed power.

Top Transit set the pace, opening a four-length lead in the early stages. Hedda Gab was second and Walter Haight third. The race was between these three thereafter. Approaching the stretch, Walter Haight was taken out for racing room and Top Transit and Hedda Gab also bore out. Hedda Gab faltered and Walter Haight rallied to go on to wear down the tiring pacemaker.

Scocca Astride Two Winners

Jockey Danny Scocca, the Washington rider, had another good day, riding the winners of the sixth and seventh races. He brought Joe Dobb's Tiny Trick home in front and then came back to close the day with C. Lorenz's Say Judge.

In a four-way photo finish, a thriller, if there ever was one, P. H. Faulconer's Ripping On was given a head decision over J. H. Elliott's Purport third and C. M. Feltner's Rough going fourth in the fourth race. The test was at a mile and a sixteenth and the winner was clocked in 1:55 3-5 while paying $24. Rippling On and Pittsburgh alternated in setting the pace, both came with good energy in the stretch run and Purport and Rough Going joined them right at the wire.

20 Factories Taken Over at Philadelphia

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Dec. 19.—A Federal spokesman said today the Treasury Department had assumed full supervision of more than 20 plants in the Philadelphia area owned or controlled by Axis nationals.

Treasury agents, following a prearranged plan, moved in quietly to prevent sabotage and insure maximum production of defense products, the spokesman declared.

The ownership of the firms had been determined by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Treasury agents, he added. The establishments, he said, were valued at several million dollars.

The Treasury Department, acting under authority vested in its frozen funds division, will retain control, the spokesman said, until the pending alien property bill is passed in Congress.

2 New Directors On Aniline Board

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—John E. Mack, president of General Aniline & Film Corporation, announced today election of two new directors in "a step forward in Americanization of the firm," recently under investigation for possible German influences.

The new directors were Ralph Budd, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, and Robert L. Stevens, New York financier.

Mack said the board had renewed its request that Dietrich A. Schmitz, a director and former president of the concern, resign. In a resolution the board asked Mack "to secure legal advice as to ways and means to remove him as a director."

At the same time, the board in a resolution said Felix Iselin "was purportedly elected a director of this corporation in December, 1940, but has never attended any meetings . . . Now, therefore, this board recognizes and declares that Mr. Felix Iselin is not now a director . . ."

United States Treasury agents moved in on the company last week "with a view to examining in detail and supervising the operations of the company," assets of which were frozen under a recent Treasury order.

Buffalo Chemical Firm Affected

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 19 (AP).—The Treasury Department has assumed supervision of the Buffalo Electro-Chemical Co. because of German interests in the business, Charles A. Buerk, president and treasurer, said today.

German and Swiss interests own more than 25 per cent of the outstanding stock, Buerk asserted, but added that majority control is held in the United States. The company produces hydrogen peroxide, ammonium persulphate and potassium persulphate.

New Flash Bulbs Developed for Blackout 'Shots'

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—Photoflash bulbs for taking pictures in blackouts or under war conditions by use of invisible infrared light were announced today by Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

The bulbs of specially treated glass dipped in a dye or lacquer—and used with infrared film—hold back ordinary light and permit only infrared rays to pass.

Infrared bulbs and films have been used in blacked-out London. Photographers who have participated in tests in this country say pictures taken with such equipment must be "shot" at speeds slower than with ordinary bulbs and film.

The company said its blackout lamps would be available after January 1 and would be in two sizes, one a midget size about as large as a walnut, and the other about as large as a tennis ball.

A 1942 winter wheat crop of 630,913,000 bushels—or about 150,000,000 bushels in excess of the AAA production goals under the "food-for-defense" program—was said by the Agriculture Department yesterday to be indicated.

This estimate was based on factors affecting production which are measurable in the fall, such as the seeded acreage, condition of the crop on December 1, rainfall and temperature to date, as related to yields in past years.

Because this year's record wheat supply of 1,348,000,000 bushels was sufficient to meet expected needs for nearly two years, the Agriculture Department sought a greatly reduced crop in 1942.

Plans called for a combined winter and spring wheat crop of 175,000,000 bushels next year would give a total crop of 806,000,000 bushels or 150,000,000 bushels more than the Government's goal.

Farmers themselves cooperated wholeheartedly with the wheat program, which called for a reduction of about 12.5 per cent in the seeded acreage. The 39,318,000 acres seeded this fall to winter wheat was 14 per cent below the 45,633,000 acres planted a year ago.

The department said unusually favorable weather was the factor responsible for the prospective overproduction. The December 1 condition of winter wheat was 87 per cent of normal, compared with 84 a year ago.

U. S. Passes 57-Billion-Dollar Debt Mark

Passing of the 57-billion-dollar debt mark was announced by the Treasury yesterday as war financing was sending Government indebtedness up literally by the hour.

The Treasury said it owed $57,012,336,778 on December 17. This represented an increase of more than eight billion dollars since the fiscal year began July 1 and more than 12 billion dollars from a year ago.

Sale of defense savings bonds, which has increased more than 150 per cent since the attack on Pearl Harbor, causes most of the daily increases, but recently the Treasury borrowed $1,500,000,000 at one time by selling regular bonds to large investors.

The reason for all this borrowing was the fact that expenditures amounting to $10,447,634,896 since July 1 were $8,686,228,988 more than tax receipts in the same period.

U. S. Board Asks Hints to Improve Transportation

The Board of Investigation and Research called on governmental, shipper, carrier, and trade organizations yesterday for "cooperation and suggestions," in its investigation of the Nation's transportation facilities.

The board, created by the 1940 Transportation Act, is investigating, among other things, the relative economy and fitness of carriers by rail, highway and water, and the methods by which each should be developed for commerce, the postal service and national defense.

Reporting that it already had received "valuable suggestions," the board said others would be "greatly appreciated and will receive our most careful consideration."

Reserve Index Sets December Peak of 167

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday "Industrial activity was maintained at a high rate in November and the first half of December."

The board rated industrial production at 167 per cent of the 1935-39 average and the highest in history during this period. It explained, however, that the increase in the index from 163 in October was based not so much on an actual increase in production as failure of output to decline as it would under normal seasonal conditions.

The board pointed out that many industries, such as steel, already are operating at maximum capacity, and said the total output of industry could not rise as rapidly in the coming months as it did last year.

Reviewing industrial events of November, the board commented:

"Output of materials, such as steel and nonferrous metals, was maintained at about capacity. In the automobile industry activity increased reflecting larger output of both military and civilian products, and at lumber mills and furniture factories, activity declined less than seasonally. At cotton and rayon textile mills activity rose to new record levels, and at woolen mills the high production rate of other recent months was maintained. Less than seasonal declines in output were indicated for shoes and manufactured food products."

Petroleum output also gained, but both bituminous and anthracite coal production declined somewhat. Construction contracts also declined.

15% of Profits Go To Gannett Aides

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 19 (AP).—Gannett Co., Inc., will distribute 15 per cent of its 1941 profits among full-time employes in Rochester, Publisher Frank Gannett announced today.

Directors of the company voted to set aside 10 per cent of the profits, the regular procedure in recent years, and followed this with an additional 5 per cent "in recognition of increased living costs." Employes will receive the checks in February or as soon as the year's profits can be determined.

Gannett said the directors recommended that subsidiaries of the company adopt a similar program if earnings permit. Previously the distribution equaled about two and a half weeks' pay for employes of five years' service.

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—Government over possible effects of Government price control kept trade in cotton futures to a minimum today. Final prices were up 25 to 30 cents a bale, chiefly because of limited offerings.

Attention of the Worth Street textile market was focused on Government orders.

From the South came reports of ever increasing demand for long staple cotton, chiefly to satisfy military needs for airplane and balloon cloths.

Port receipts, Thursday, 16,517 bales; port stocks, 3,394,323.

J. & L. Holders Lose Suit To Block Merger

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Dec. 19. — Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker dismissed today the suit of two stockholders of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation who claimed the company's recent merger with two subsidiaries and plan of recapitalization was unfair and unlawful.

The merger of the two wholly owned subsidiaries, Vesta Coal Co. and Shannonpin Coal Co., into the parent corporation was effected July 28. At the same time the company launched a recapitalization plan whereby each share of 7 per cent preferred stock would be exchanged for one-half share of new 5 percent preferred, Series A, and one-half share of new preferred, Series B, and a quarter share of new common stock. The moves were authorized by a vote of the majority of stockholders on July 22.

The merger and recapitalization plan was opposed by two New Yorkers, Norman Johnson and Bertha H. Hubbard, each a holder of 50 shares of old stock. They ltaer were joined by 22 other persons who held 2361 shares of preferred stock.

The plaintiffs contended that the recapitalization was unfair because they said it deprived them of accumulated dividends of $45 a share.

Reopening of Suit Denied

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 19 (AP).—Application by four stockholders of the American Tobacco Co. to reopen litigation against the company which had been dismissed in 1933 was denied today by Vice Chancellor Charles M. Egan.

Four stockholders contended the litigation had been terminated by fraud. They charged that Chancery Court in 1933 was not fully informed of the terms of the settlement and that plaintiffs and attorneys in that case received more than $600,000 in the settlement.

Decision Is Reversed

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—The appellate division of the State Supreme Court today reversed a lower court decision awarding 200 million dollars to plaintiffs in an accounting suit brought by minority stockholders of Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co. against Standard Oil Co. of Indiana and six directors of Pan American. The court also ordered the complaint dismissed.

The suit was brought by Jacob Blaustein and others and charged the defendants with conspiracy to defraud, waste and negligence and breach of trust.

D. C. Tax Rate Is $17.50 a $1000

The Washington real property tax rate is $17.50 a thousand, the assessor's office reported yesterday. This rate has been in effect here since 1937.

The National Municipal League, in a survey of 263 cities published yesterday in The Post, erred in stating that the rate here was $15.75 a thousand.

New Haven R. R. To Pay Arrears

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 19 (AP).—Judge Carroll C. Hincks of the United States District Court today allowed a petition of the trustees of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad to pay $15,000,000 in back interest on bonds of the system.

In presenting the petition three years ago, the trustees asked permission to pay two years' interest on the bonds of these mortaged lines: Central New England, Harlem River & Port Chester, Housatonic, New Haven & Northampton, New England Railroad and Danbury & Norwalk.

They told the court that the New Haven road's cash on hand totaled $30,000,000.

18,000 to Get Gift

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 19 (AP).—A Christmas gift totaling $290,000 will be distributed tomorrow among 18,000 employes of Curtiss-Wright Corporation's two Buffalo airplane plants. Last year $167,450 was given to the workers.

Prudential Workers Will Get Extra Pay

Newark, N. J., Dec. 19 (AP).—The Prudential Insurance Co. of America announced today "temporary extra compensation" to offset rising living costs would be paid to all employes making less than $400 a month.

The monthly extra payments will range from $5 to $12.50. A similar plan was adopted during the World War.

About 11,500 employes of the home office, field office clerical workers and employes of the mortgage loan branch offices in the United States will share in the extra compensation, effective Tuesday.

Third of U. S. Output in '42 Seen for War

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics, in a forecast of things to come in 1942, predicted yesterday that production of manufactured and processed goods for the war effort of the United States and its Allies would be double that of 1941.

At least a third of the output, it said, would be war materials, compared with 10 per cent in 1940.

Other forecasts for the New Year included:

Labor troubles will diminish.

The amount of overtime will increase, and additional shifts will be more fully utilized.

Increased ouput of some commodities, such as lead and copper, may be obtained by subsidizing marginal and submarginal producers.

Government buying of food for Great Britain will be expanded, and speculative and storage demand for farm products unaffected by price ceilings may be stimulated.

Consumer Demand to Dip

The bureau said it expected consumer demand for products to be reduced, despite an increase in consumer income, by greater restrictions on normal economic activities and by rising taxes.

The bureau said gains in industrial production would continue to be limited by shortages of raw materials and the high rates of operation which already have been reached in many small industrial plants from production of civilian goods to fighting equipment even though such utilization is relatively inefficient, the bureau predicted.

"Very extensive efforts of this kind," it said, "might reduce the general level of industrial activity until additional specialized machinery could be built and the converted plants put on a complete war footing."

Curtailment of production of such civilian goods as automobiles, household equipment and residences, the bureau said, would tend to increase the proportion of funds available for such types of consumers' goods and services as food, clothing and amusements.

Taxes to Cut Income

It added that new taxes might result in lowering net money incomes of the higher income groups of consumers, but that lower income groups would be little affected.

The bureau estimated that in October this year 42,800,000 persons were empolyed in nonagricultural pursuits, exclusive of relief work but including military. This compared with 38,100,000 a year earlier. The compensation of these workers was said to have been at the annual rate of $63,000,000,000 compared with $52,000,000,000 a year earlier.

Continuation of the June-to-October rate of gain, the bureau said, would carry nonagricultural employe compensation to an annual rate of $70,000,000,000 by next October.

Wholesale Commodity Index Spurts 2.2%

The Labor Department said yesterday wholesale commodity prices in the first week of the war rose 2.2 per cent over the level of the previous week.

The December 13 index was thus pushed to 94.2, compared with 92.2 the previous week and 79.7 a year ago. (1926 equals 100). The percentage gain over a year ago was 16.8.

$2 Extra Is Declared By R., F. & P. Railroad

Richmond, Va., Dec. 19 (AP).—Directors of the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad declared a $2 extra common stock dividend along with the regular dividend of $3 at a meeting here yesterday. The dividends, aggregating $636,720, are payable December 24 to stockholders of record December 20.

The Outlook

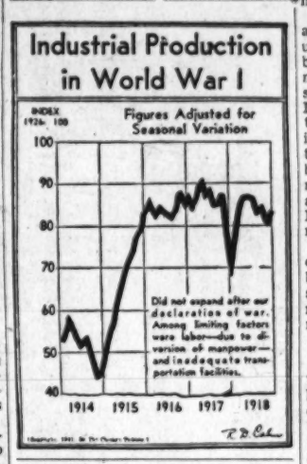
Motorists Expected to Turn in Used Tire For Every One Bought After Ban Is Lifted

The present ban against the sale of tires is of course temporary.

After the situation has been thoroughly canvassed, the present freezing order will be lifted, and it is likely that at least for the next year or two the legitimate rubber needs of the American motorist will be met.



Ideas for meeting the situation are now taking definite form. I understand that the technique will be to require dealers to certify that new tires are needed from a safety standpoint to replace worn ones. It has been tentatively proposed that consumers be compelled to turn in a used tire for every one which they buy after the present ban has been lifted. A similar arrangement now prevails for replacing worn aluminum pistons in automobiles. By turning in the old worn part, a new one can be acquired.

In new models, however, instead of aluminum pistons, steel ones are being used. The steel ones perform satisfactorily, although the change may require some reduction in maximum speed capacity.

Informed sources in the industry tell me that stocks of rubber on hand amount to 600,000 tons—enough for a full year's consumption at the normal rate. It is reported that the time the United States entered the war, 60 ships were bound for American ports with aggregate consignments of rubber amounting to between 75,000 and 100,000 tons.

It should also be borne in mind that upward of 25,000 tons of rubber are reclaimed every month, and this secondary supply of rubber can be increased by adding to the facilities for handling it. In the making of tires, 30 per cent reclaimed rubber and 70 per cent new crude are used. White wall tires were early eliminated because they require a higher ratio of virgin rubber.

As a secondary line of defense, there are at least two practical American techniques for making synthetic rubber. Furthermore, as a long-term matter of national defense, planting of additional rubber trees in Brazil offers the hope in the longer future of freeing American industry of dependence on Asiatic sources of rubber.

During the war emergency, rapid extension of the practice of retreading tires is expected. Where the fabric is still strong, retreading, it is claimed, will provide a period of service 80 per cent as long as the original new tire provided.

Another approach to meeting the emergency will be through teaching the public to use tires more economically through driving cars at moderate speeds and through careful starting and stopping.

In respect to other Asiatic products, it is estimated that we have a stockpile of 100,000 tons of tin, equal to requirements for a year and a quarter at the normal rate of consumption. But various substitutes, including substitution of glass containers for metal tinplated cans, are being found. There is a new patented process also for coating metal containers for food.

Curtiss-Wright To Operate on Two Holidays

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 19.—Curtiss-Wright Corporation's two Buffalo warplane plants will operate Christmas and New Year's Day, but the Bell Aircraft factories will close.

"In view of the national emergency," a Curtiss announcement to employes said, "the Air Corps has given us a new production schedule which calls for work on both days. Those employes who in the opinion of their department head can be spared without affecting the schedules will be excused."

The Bell plants in Buffalo and Niagara Falls will close from 8 p. m. December 24, and from 8 p. m. December 31 until 8 a. m. January 2. On both December 24 and December 31, the plants will operate on three four-hour shifts.

No Holiday for Steel Plant

Pittsburgh, Dec. 19 (AP).—The Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation announced today its coke ovens, blast furnaces, certain open hearths, primary mills and auxiliary services will operate Christmas Day because of the "continuing demand for steel in ever increasing amounts."

J. L. Perry, president, told workers in notices posted on bulletin boards:

"It is no longer a question of how much steel can be provided to industry, but how quickly. Delay in the production of steel means delay in the production of material vital to national welfare."

All employes who work will be paid time and one-half, regardless of whether they are employed on continuous or noncontinuous operations, Perry said.

A similar announcement was made by the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, operating plants in Aliquippa, Pa., and Pittsburgh.

Sheet & Tube to Operate

Youngstown, Ohio, Dec. 19 (AP).—For the first time in many years, steel will be made here Christmas Day. Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. will operate its steel-making units on the holiday, and Republic Steel may run a few open hearths at Warren if it has enough scrap for them.

Holiday curtailments at Republic, Carnegie-Illinois and Sharon steel plants will leave the production in this district for next week at about 80 per cent, down 12 per cent.

James S. Adams Heads Standard Brands, Inc.

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—James S. Adams today was elected president and chief executive officer of Standard Brands, Inc. Adams, formerly executive vice president of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., succeeded Thomas L. Smith who became chairman of the board and will act in an advisory capacity.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 19 (AP).—Grain prices continued to drift today, receding fractionally to low levels for more than a week as the market maintained its waiting mood pending Washington price control developments, the all-important trade factor at this time.

Stocks Weaken In Late Trade; Steels Resist

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 19.—Stocks took on a rallying tinge in today's market but the brighter hue faded to some extent at the last as war news from the Far East became a bit bearish.

Early gains for steels, rails, motors, aircrafts, rubbers, coppers, mail orders and an assortment of specialties ranged from fractions to more than a point. Advances were trimmed at the close and minus signs were well distributed.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 36. Large-scale tax selling persisted and accounted mainly for the turnover of 1,269,869 shares compared with 1,313,400 yesterday.

Short Covering Noted

Brokers attributed the more resistant action of the list principally to short covering and reinstatement of commitments here and there on the theory the recent drop of the market to the lowest level since April, 1938, entitled it to a moderate technical revival.

Governmental rationing plans for tires and possibly numerous other lines of consumers' goods as a means of conserving defense materials served to restrain the speculative urge in some quarters.

While hopeful tidings of Axis defeats in Russia and Africa propped sentiment to some extent, bulletins telling of British troubles in Hongkong and Malaya, together with the stronger Japanese bombing of Manila and other Philippine sectors, provided an important handicap to recovery.

Santa Fe was in front of a fairly good rail move. The carriers were buoyed by further hopes of general passenger fare increases, as well as some freight rate boosts. Steels overrode estimates of a sharp decrease in next week's mill operations due to the Christmas holidays, although some centers planned to work through the Yuletide recess. A pickup in retail spending enabled a few merchandising issues to edge upward.

Steels Hold Gains

Holding advances were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Western Union, Santa Fe, New York Central, Southern Railway, Great Northern, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Anaconda, American Smelting, Allied Chemical, Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak and J. I. Case.

Union Pacific and American Can dipped to the "new low" division. Others in arrears included Standard Oil (New Jersey), Texas Co., du Pont, Dow Chemical, Chrysler and American Telephone.

Bonds and commodities exhibited indefinite trends. At Chicago wheat was off ⅜ to ⅝ of a cent a bushel, corn down ¼ to ¾ and hogs steady to 15 cents lower. Cotton was up 25 to 30 cents a bale.

Aluminum of America was up 2 in an uneven curb. Lesser gains were shown for Brewster Aero, Bell Aircraft, Glen Alden Coal and Lake Shore. Among losers were American Gas, Gulf Oil, Humble Oil and International Petroleum. Volume here approximated 285,000 shares, versus 292,000 Thursday.

Central Bureau To Place War Orders Urged

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Creation of a "ministry of supply" with sole authority for letting war contracts and endowed with full responsibility for procurement and planning in the victory program was urged in Congress yesterday.

The recommendation, which would transfer to a single department all contractural authority now exercised by the Army, Navy and other defense agencies, was made by the select House Committee Investigating National Defense Migration.

The committee was sharply critical of defense officials for the failure to convert industries of all sizes from civilian to war production and blamed them for absence of a "plan commensurate with production goals already set."

"Production to date has been a failure, measured against the available facilities and the visible needs for military purposes," the committee declared in a report to the House.

In formal, but unmistakably critical language the committee assailed auto manufacturers for their "business as usual" insistence upon acquisition of new facilities for the war effort, rather than conversion of existing civilian equipment.

"Written testimony from a great automobile corporation showed," the report declared, "that it was producing the tools of war at a rate, which, if general, would require 15 years for the completion of the armament program already projected."

British, German Cases Cited

In contrast with the motor industry's contention that only 15 per cent of its facilities were convertible, production engineers and union officials told the committee that 50 to 80 per cent of these facilities could be turned into defense production.

"It is a matter of record that the entire automotive industry of England has been converted to defense production," the report said.

The General Motors subsidiary plant in Germany, member of the committee's staff reported, was converted to war production three years ago. By way of further contrast, they cited the case of a Decatur (Ill.) brass plant which is now closed by priorities, but whose Canadian subsidiary has been filling war orders since 1937.

Single Civilian Board Proposed

"A single civilian board (or supply ministry) of the Federal Government should be charged with full responsibility for procurement and for planning war production and the production of essential civilian needs," the committee urged.

It recommended that "complete schedules of military requirements shall be submitted to the board by Army, Navy, Maritime Commission and lend-lease authorities.

In addition the committee stated, "The board shall develop a comprehensive plan for meeting these requirements at the earliest possible date in the order of their urgency."

A special technical division "skilled in engineering and in production" should be organized under the board, the committee said. This division would compile and maintain current inventories of industrial facilities, critical materials and labor supplies. It would also make "continuous" investigation of hidden and surplus raw material stocks and constantly check the progress of production. War contracts would be let on the basis of its findings.

To bring defense needs closer to smaller businesses which generally lack resources for maintaining Washington offices and lack familiarity with Government procedure, the committee recommended establishment of regional offices under the board. These offices would have authority to negotiate contracts.

Sugar Benefit Hike Passed

By the Associated Press

Congress passed yesterday and sent to the White House a sugar control bill whose sponsors estimated it would increase benefit payments to producers by 10 million dollars.

The bill would extend quota and processing tax provisions of the 1937 Sugar Act for three years to December 31, 1944. Basic benefit payments would be increased one-third—from 60 to 80 cents a hundred weight—and extended to Virgin Island producers. In addition, the measure embodies child labor regulations hitherto contained in separate legislation.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, author of the measure, estimated that benefit payments under it would amount to 59 million dollars annually instead of the present 49 million dollars.

Funds for the payments are raised by a one-half cent processing tax on raw sugar. This tax brought in about 66 million dollars last fiscal year, giving the Treasury a net profit of about 17 million dollars. O'Mahoney estimated that receipts from this source would total about 80 million dollars in the new year.

The Rev. Barrows' Mother Dies

Mrs. Nancy Thalia Barrows, 95, mother of the Rev. Alfred Barrows, treasurer of the Presbytery of Washington, died last Sunday while visiting her daughter, Mrs. Robert O. Keiry, at Monte Vista, Colo., it was learned here yesterday.

Mrs. Barrows spent several winters in Washington when Dr. Barrows was pastor of the Eastern Presbyterian Church. In addition to the Rev. Mr. Barrows and Mrs. Keiry, Mrs. Barrows is survived by Mr. Willard E. Barrows, of Juneau, Alaska; Truman A. Barrows, of Hansen, Nebr., and Mrs. Will Edwards, of Coffeyville, Kans. Burial was on Thursday, in Hansen, Nebr.

Axis Bases Dot Latin America, House Told

By James Shepley
United Press Staff Writer

The special House committee investigating air transportation reported last night that the Axis powers have honeycombed Latin America with air bases, fuel and arms storage depots and short-wave radio stations.

The committee toured most of the American Republics last month. It told the House it had uncovered evidence that:

1. The Axis controls five airports in Guatemala within easy bombing distance of the Panama Canal, and that two crack German air force fliers have been assigned to the German legation at Guatemala; that the Axis controls strategic airports in Brazil, just across from Africa.

2. Vast stocks of aviation gasoline and oil are known to have been built up in Brazil, and further reserves may exist in storage tanks hidden along the great Brazilian coast line or up the Amazon River.

3. An arms storehouse for rifles, ammunition, pistols, hand grenades and other arms has been established at a Japanese colony 30 miles from Cali, on the Pacific side of the Andes Mountains in Colombia.

4. That the German legation in Guatemala City has "no less than 14 short-wave receiving sets.

5. That the German Ambassador in Mexico City is chief of the German Gestapo in Latin America. And that the Gestapo has set up its "own secret court system" in Guatemala, and that violators and "offenders of Nazi law, Nazi regulations and Nazi philosophy are tried and punished."

6. That the Nazis have perfected plans for the sabotaging of all utilities of the city of Buenos Aires "and that in a crisis they could probably establish an operating base in Argentina and cause considerable difficulty."

7. That German agents concealed a complete short-wave broadcasting unit in a diplomatic pouch seized by agents of the Argentine government.

8. That "merchant vessel departures from the United States across the Atlantic have been communicated in code to Mexico City and then by short wave transmitted to Nazi authorities in Germany."

9. That a German air force reserve officer has established an airport, possibly with a radio station, in the western end of Colombian plainland near Boa Visto; that there are about 30 recognized airplane landing strips in the area.

10. That Nazi agents hatched a revolt in the Argentine air force in a Buenos Aires cafe known as Diese's Cafe.

11. That extensive aerial photos of northern South America were taken by German airline pilots.

The report was signed by Chairman Jack Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma, and Representatives Richard M. Kleberg (Democrat), Texas; Herron Pearson (Democrat), Tennessee; Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, and Carl Hinshaw (Republican), California.

The committee recommended the State Department take countermeasures at once.

Garden Foods Vital War Need, Parley Hears

Several hundred representatives of garden clubs, State extension services, school systems and federal agricultural agencies, in conference here yesterday to promote defense gardening, were reminded that "vegetables, vitality and victory" are allied and that talk "of cabbages and kings is not nonsense now."

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt read to the opening session, held in South Agriculture Building, a paragraph from a personal letter smuggled to him out of Occupied France, saying:

"Finally we left Paris and bought a tiny farm. We have a little poultry and we grow what vegetables we can get seeds for. We do all the work ourselves. But we are the fortunate ones. You can hardly imagine how thankful we are. We invested everything we had left in this little piece of land, but it is keeping body and soul together. A cabbage head to the French used to be either an insult or a joke; to us now it is just food—and very precious."

The Administrator said he didn't imply that Americans would ever be reduced to such desperate straits, "still less to suggest that American city-dwellers should rush headlong into amateur agriculture."

Needed, he said, is the old task, "now more essential than ever," of growing garden foods for health. "A cabbage is now no joke. 'Of cabbages and kings' is not nonsense now."

Proper direction of gardening projects was even more strongly emphasized by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard in an address to the garden enthusiasts.

Needs Supervision

"A community garden or a school garden," he said, "needs the supervision of someone who is familiar with good gardening practice, who knows what vegetables can be grown most successfully, who can select the location with some discrimination, who understands soil preparation, who recognizes aphids and cucumber beetles and tomato worms when he sees them and knows how to control them. The same is true of all gardens for that matter. I don't want to see anyone's morale reduced by the failure of a garden project intended as a patriotic contribution."

He added that there is much that can be done in way of community gardens, "where the planning and operation of such gardens can be given direction. Among other things these gardens can be a great aid in the school lunch programs. But let me emphasize, experienced direction is important."

The Secretary said that producing vegetables at home puts the food supply where it is to be used, requiring no freight cars or trucks for transportation. Such gardens would turn the commercial supplies to other uses; Lend-Lease uses for one, he pointed out. But he urged a careful approach.

U. S. Indicts Aniline Corp. For Restraint

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 19.—A Federal indictment of General Aniline & Film Corporation and two of its close associates was announced today almost at the very moment new officers of the big chemical firm, once German controlled, made known further plans to place it more firmly in American hands.

The indictment, charging restraint in the trade and manufacture of heavy chemicals and dyestuffs, covered General Aniline, General Dyestuffs Corporation and the giant German I. G. Farbenindustrie and seven individuals.

General Aniline's new president, former Justice John E. Mack, of the New York Supreme Court, announced the election of two new directors, Ralph Budd, president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, and Robert L. Stevens, New York financier and son-in-law of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt.

Bullitt to Be Chairman

William C. Bullitt, former United States Ambassador to France, elected a director of General Aniline two weeks ago, would be elected chairman, Mack added, under plans of the board. Bullitt was made a director after the resignation of William vom Rath, whose late father was vice chairman of I. G. Farbenindustrie.

General Aniline, a 62-million-dollar corporation formerly known as American I. G. Chemical Corporation, is the country's second largest maker of photographic supplies, third largest dyestuff producer and the biggest maker of dyes for American Army uniforms.

General Dyestuff is the company's selling agent.

I. G. Farbenindustrie sponsored the formation of General Aniline in 1929.

The Federal indictment charged the three corporations agreed to combine all their dyestuff properties in the United States into a single manufacturing company and not to compete otherwise in the manufacture or sale of dyestuffs in this country except through General Dyestuffs Corporation.

The charge also claimed that General Aniline had agreed not to export dyestuffs from the United States until authorized by I. G. Farben.

Individuals Listed

Individuals named in the indictments were: Dietrich A. Schmitz, former president and director; Vom Rath, Hans W. Aickelin, vice president and a former director; Ernst Schwarz, vice president in charge of the Agfa-Ansco Division; W. William von Meister, general manager of the Ozalid Division; E. K. Halbach, president and director of General Dyestuffs, and ...erman Schmitz, president of I. G. Farbenindustrie.

U. S. Treasury agents moved in on General Aniline last week to examine and supervise operations. Assets were frozen under a recent Treasury order, as were those of General Dyestuffs.

For months Federal officials have been trying to track down possible relationships between General Aniline and the German chemical giant, on the theory I. G. Farben dictated General Aniline policy to the detriment of United States interests.

Mack said the present indictments "deal with conditions that existed before the present management was inducted into office." Full cooperation was given the Government's investigation, he said, and promised "to eliminate all elements not in harmony with the Government of the United States."

Elbert Richmond Funeral Services In Arlington Today

ODD BODKINS — BY FRED FOX and CHASE CRAIG

I'M PROUD OF YOU, ODD! I GUESS A GIRL LIKE ME SHOULD—— SHUCKS, GWEN— IT WASN'T ANYTHING! ALL I DID WAS TO OBEY THE VOICE!
WILL YOU ALWAYS OBEY THE VOICE WHEN YOU HEAR IT, ODD?
I GUESS MAYBE I'D BETTER, ON ACCOUNT OF WHAT HAPPENS WHEN I DO!
WHAT IF YOU HEARD A LITTLE VOICE TELLING YOU TO KISS ME?
WELL, I GUESS I'D HAVE TO DO IT THEN, GWEN, BUT—— ODD BODKINS IS WANTED AT HOME IMMEDIATELY!

AND THIS IS PAUL GRAFTON, STAR OF SILENT MOVIES, NOW PLAYING BIT ROLES IN PICTURES.
I WAS PROMISED THIS ROLE- BUT NOW THAT YOU'RE HERE I MAY LOSE MY BIG CHANCE FOR A COMEBACK!
I'M SORRY, MR. GRAFTON. I DIDN'T MEAN TO SPOIL THINGS FOR YOU.
AND NOW MEET CLIFF CHANDLER, CAMERAMAN- HE'S A CLOSE FRIEND OF GRAFTON'S, SO YOU CAN OVER-LOOK HIS INEVITABLE CRACKS.
IT'S MOST UNFORTUNATE, MR. KENT, BUT I'M AFRAID YOU'RE DEFINITELY, NOT PHOTOGENIC!
I'M NOT PARTICULARLY ANXIOUS TO BECOME AN ACTOR. IT'S MR. STUART'S IDEA!
HERE'S YOUR SCRIPT....GO TO A CORNER AND STUDY IT.
I'LL TRY BUT I'M NOT VERY GOOD AT MEMORIZING.
BUT AS CLARK OPENS THE SCRIPT BOOK....
A NOTE!
you were a fool to come here in defiance of my warning. you can still save yourself by leaving the set. But if you remain, prepare to die!!!!!

The Lombardos believe in keeping things in the family. This you can readily see from the fact that the brothers waited until their little sister had grown up—well, almost—before they ever acquired a feminine vocalist for their orchestra—and then she was it.

Her name is Rose Marie Lombardo. She's now reached the age of 16 and she can be heard with the orchestra at 8 p. m. every Saturday over WJSV.

Rose Marie's association with radio began, however, long before she'd reached that age. It began on the day she was born, in fact. It was 1925 then and Guy and the orchestra were playing in Cleveland when he got a telephone call from London, Ontario, announcing that a baby sister had been added to the clan.

Guy notified his father that the first selection played on the Lombardo broadcast coming up that night would be the brothers' choice for a name. He went into a huddle with Carmen and Lebert, and that number was "Rose Marie."

That Rose Marie shared in the family's musical talents was shown when she was all of nine and was awarded a medal for her singing at the Glendale Country School, near London.

Rose Marie and her parents now live in Stamford, Conn. She's in the second year of high school and studies music three times a week.

Contract Bridge

The hand in today's box, reported by Edwin T. Randall and played at the Greater Cleveland Contract Pair Championship, required careful handling of the trump suit. The declarer, Police Prosecutor Sidney B. Fink, made five spades, redoubled, by developing an unusual smother play in trumps on West.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

	♠ Q 7 5 4 ♡ 9 6 4 ◇ Q J 10 8 2 ♣ Q
♠ K 10 6 3 ♡ 7 2 ◇ K 9 6 5 ♣ J 7 2	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ None ♡ A K Q J ◇ 10 8 5 3 ♣ K 8 6 4
	♠ A J 9 8 3 ♡ None ◇ A 7 4 ♣ A 10 9 5 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♡	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	4 ♡	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	5 ♡	5 ♠	Dble
Pass	Pass	Redble

Opening lead: 7 ♡.

West opened the heart seven, which declarer ruffed. He took his ace of clubs, trumped a small club on the board and finessed the queen of diamonds toward his hand. West won the king and returned his last heart, which South again trumped.

Another club was ruffed in dummy; a low diamond was led to North's ace and dummy was entered again with the diamond jack. The ten of diamonds was led from the North hand and Fink discarded a club, leaving this situation:

	♠ Q 7 ♡ 9 ◇ 8 ♣ None
♠ K 10 6 3 ♡ None ◇ None ♣ None	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ None ♡ A K Q ◇ None ♣ K
	♠ A J 9 ♡ None ◇ None ♣ 10

Declarer already had lost to the diamond king and could afford to lose only one more trick. He led the diamond eight from dummy and ruffed with the spade ace, forcing West to undertrump. South then played his last club, and no matter what spade West played, he could take but one trick. Declarer made his contract, giving up a diamond and a spade.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Kane, Pained, Refrained — BY MILTON CANIFF

OH, TERRY! MR. RYAN!... I THOUGHT — I MEAN — I-
YOU THOUGHT I WAS PIE-EYED WHEN I BUSTED IN ON YOU AND SAMMY TAPPER! NO, SUGAH!... BUT SEEING HIM WITH YOU WOULD SOBER ANY GUY WHO WAS DRUNK!
WHEN TERRY CALLED YOU TO LEARN IF YOU FELT BETTER AFTER YOUR FAINT AT THE OFFICE, HE KNEW FROM YOUR CONVERSATION THAT YOU WERE IN A SPOT AND COULDN'T TALK...
WE CAME OVER TO SEE WHAT WAS ON THE FIRE!
THE MAID SAID SHE HAD HEARD THIS TAPPER GUY TALKING TOUGH — AND YOU WEEPING ... SO I PULLED THE DRUNK ACT... THAT WAY I COULD LEAN ON HIM TO SEE IF HE CARRIED A GUN...
HE DID!... BUT THE BIG POINT IS — WHY WAS HE HERE? WHY DID HE SLAP YOU SO HARD IT LEFT A MARK? WHY WERE YOU CRYING? WHO IS HE?
IT JUS' KILLS ME TO APPEAR SO DISTRUSTIN' OF MY DEAREST FRIENDS... BUT-BUT- I'M 'FRAID I CAN'T TELL YOU!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

CONNIE, CHILD! YOU'VE BEEN CRYING!
LET'S STEP INTO YOUR SITTING ROOM, MRS. WORTH! I HATE TAKING MY HAIR DOWN IN PUBLIC!
MRS. WORTH, I TRIED MEETING ANGEL VARDEN ON HER OWN LEVEL — AND IT DIDN'T WORK! I USED TO HAVE TOM'S RESPECT — AT LEAST — BUT NOW I'VE LOST THAT!
I'M AFRAID I GAVE YOU BAD ADVICE! I SHOULDN'T HAVE MEDDLED...!
YOU'VE DONE YOUR BEST — BUT I GUESS WHAT I NEED IS A FAIRY GOD-MOTHER — AND THEY SELDOM STOP AT HOTELS!
EXCUSE ME! I BELIEVE I HEARD SOMEONE IN THE LOBBY!
-DALE

MICKEY FINN — Doped Right! — BY LANK LEONARD

THEN MR. HOGAN, THE FOREMAN, FEELS THE SAME WAY ABOUT WILLIE MUFF, THAT YOU DO, UNCLE PHIL?
SURE! HOGAN HAS COMPLAINED HALF A DOZEN TIMES ABOUT THE WAY THE DUMB CLUCK IS SLOWIN' UP PRODUCTION — BUT ROBERTS, THE GENERAL MANAGER, REFUSES TO FIRE HIM!
WHAT KIND OF A MAN DID ROBERTS SEEM LIKE TO YOU?
HE'S JUST A PHONEY! HOGAN GAVE ME THE LOW-DOWN ON HIM! — HE'S THE GENERAL MANAGER IN NAME ONLY — THEY JUST GAVE HIM THE TITLE BECAUSE HE'S RELATED TO ONE OF THE DIRECTORS!
SEE — IT IS FUNNY THAT HE'S SO INTERESTED IN WILLIE — MAYBE OLD MAN MUFF HAS SOMETHIN' ON HIM!
NOW YOU'RE TALKIN'! AND AFTER THE WAY HE BRUSHED ME OFF AT THE PLANT, IT'S GONNA BE A PLEASURE TO PROVE THAT, TOO!
REMEMBER, MR. MUFF — I SIGNED AN AFFIDAVIT THAT YOUR SON, WILLIE, WAS A "NECESSARY MAN" AT THE PLANT — AND IF FINN DECIDES TO INVESTIGATE —
DON'T WORRY ABOUT FINN, ROBERTS! I KNOW HOW TO SHUT HIM UP!

MR. AND MRS. — Recipes From the Past — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

SAY, IT'S YOUR MOTHER'S RECIPE WE'RE USING FOR OUR CHRISTMAS PUDDING, ISN'T IT?
YES, OF COURSE AND YOUR GREAT AUNT MARTHA'S RECIPE FOR THE MINCE PIE?
YES. WHY?
AND SOME OTHER ANCIENT'S RECIPE FOR THE LOAF CAKE?
YES. MY GRANDMOTHER'S. WHAT ARE YOU DRIVING AT?
NOTHING. ONLY I WISH YOU'D HAD A COUNTERFEITER IN YOUR FAMILY AND WE HAD HIS RECIPE FOR MAKING MONEY. I'M FIGURING OUT NEXT YEAR'S TAXES

DIXIE DUGAN — The Coaxing Hosts — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

MORNING
I AGREE WITH YOU, MICKEY — THIS PLACE IS GETTING UNDER MY SKIN, TOO!
WHAT'LL WE TELL THE HANNOCKS?
NOTHING — JUST PAY OUR BILL AND BEAT IT!
OH, NOW WAIT — WAIT! PLEASE DON'T GO SO SOON! I THOUGHT YOU WANTED TO LEARN HOW TO SKI?
WE'LL COME BACK SOME OTHER TIME — PERHAPS!
LOOK — I'VE GOT YOUR SKIS ALL NICE AND WAXED — AND HERE ARE YOUR GOGGLES — OH — YOU MUST STAY A LITTLE LONGER, MY DEARS, YOU'LL HAVE SO MUCH FUN!

...ON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — First Resort — BY FRANK MARTINEK

LET'S REVIEW THE APPALLING FACTS, SIR. YOU SAY THOSE TWO U.S. CARGO SHIPS DISAPPEARED CLOSE TO THE GEORGIA COAST — IN A FLAT CALM?
THAT'S RIGHT
LOOKS LIKE A SUBMARINE'S WORK
NO — THAT'S OUT. BOTH SHIPS WERE EQUIPPED WITH LISTENING DEVICES — AND THEIR LAST RADIO SIGNALS GAVE NO HINT OF DANGER FROM SEA OR AIR.
THE WHOLE THING'S UNCANNY. THERE'S NO CLUE TO — WAIT, ADMIRAL. THERE'S ONE THING TO BE TRIED FIRST LONG DISTANCE, PLEASE — CALL CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
REMEMBER MY FRIEND, MAGNA? THE PROPHETESS WHO LENT US HER WEIRD POWERS BEFORE? LET'S SEE IF OUR LUCK STILL HOLDS.

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

HEY, SCLAM! YOU CUTTEE SLICE O' CAKEE -- HOP SING CUTTEE SLICE O' THLOAT!
YEAH! GIT OUT, YE HAYTHEN! WE'RE THAT BUSY FIXIN' FER TH' PARTY OI'M DEAD ON ME FATE!!
TOO MANY FOLKS IN THIS WIGWAM CAN'T TALKUM GOOD ENGLISH! HMM! WHAT SQUAW ROPER GAB-GAB UMBOUT ALL TIME?
RILLY, MY DEAH! THIS IS GOING TO BE PRICELESS -- PROMISE ME YOU'LL KEEP IT A SECRET.....!
HEAP NICE DAY, MINNIE! WHY YOU STAY HERE AN' WORK?
I'M GETTING MY COSTUME READY FOR THE PARTY! OH! BUT I WASN'T SUPPOSED TO TELL ANYONE ABOUT IT!
UGH! SUMPIN' FUNNY GOIN' ON 'ROUND HERE! LISTEN! -- WAHOO HEAR SQUAW ROPER SAY-TZ-BZZ-Z--!
SO THAT'S MRS. ROPER'S PLAN TO HUMILIATE ME! THANKS FOR THE WARNING, WAHOO!
